Police Dept. Receives $143,000 In Grants

The Quincy Police Department has received an $85,000 grant as part of the state's Community Policing program as well as a $58,000 block grant from the Department of Justice, announces Mayor William Phelan.

The QPD began receiving the community policing grant from the Commonwealth in 1992 with the initial grant amount of $30,000 and each year the program has developed within the city and increased in grant amount.

The core of the Community Policing Grant program in Quincy is the 11-week Citizen's Police Academy. Under the director of Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna, over 1,000 citizens to date have been exposed to the Quincy Police Department in ways that never would have been possible without this grant.

Hanna recently expanded the program into the city's senior population by bringing the Senior Citizen Police Academy to various senior citizen complexes throughout Quincy. The success of this program started the Student Police Academies at both Quincy and North High School.

In addition to the academies, this grant helps support the:

- "Welcome to Quincy" program conducted by Hi Thai, Asian translator at the police station.
- The City Wide Safety

Mean Thief Steals Statue From Nativity Scene

Police are searching for a missing sheep statue that was stolen from the City Hall manger scene on Dec. 27.

Thomas Koch, director of the city Park, Forestry and Cemetery department, said the statute was bolted to the ground, so the perpetrators must have used considerable effort to remove it from the premises.

"We are very disappointed with this situation," said Koch. "It is a beautiful piece of work and we are hoping that the missing piece turns up soon."

The sheep statute is approximately 18 inches high and two feet long.

He said the entire manger set, which was lent to the city, cost approximately $28,000. This particular set was first used by the city for Christmas 2001.

Koch said the manger scene will stay up until Jan. 6.

Phelan To Set Mid-Term Goals

A year ago, William Phelan, newly sworn-in as the 32nd mayor of Quincy, outlined his hopes and plans for the future of his hometown for the next two years.

Now, at the halfway point in his two-year term, he is in position to review his accomplishments during the past year and outline his vision for his next 12 months in front office.

Phelan will do this next Monday, Jan. 6, when he delivers his mid-term address shortly after 10 a.m. at the first meeting of the City Council for the 2003 year in the Council Chamber at City Hall.

He is expected to detail how he came into office relatively inexperienced in city government to face difficult municipal problems and how far along he has gotten toward solving them.

WILLIAM PHELAN

Also on the agenda for the meeting is the election of a Council President to preside over the deliberations of the eight other councilors for the next year.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi has held the office for the past year and he is almost a sure bet to be re-elected although he will tell those who ask that elections are not sure until they are over.

The Council President is also on the agenda to deliver his view of what the City Council expects to accomplish in the coming year.

Jeanne Reardon is virtually certain to be nominated and reelected to her 23rd one-year term as the City Council's clerk of committees.

The mid-term meeting will kick off at 10 a.m. when it is called to order by City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church, and founder of Father Bill's Place for the homeless in Quincy.

Mayor Phelan's mid-term address will follow the invocation.

The nomination, election and swearing in of the clerk of committee and the council president.

Teaching, Consulting And Real Estate For Sheets

A year after his defeat for a seventh two-year term as mayor of Quincy, Jim Sheets is gradually working himself back into circulation.

"I'm doing a little part-time teaching," said Sheets, who was a full-time teacher at what was then Quincy Junior College before he was first elected mayor. "I'm doing a little consulting.

"I'm going to do some real estate work, too. I took the state real estate exam and passed it. I've joined the Condon-Walsh real estate group. I've always liked dealing with people.

JAMES SHEETS

"I have three or four other options, which I'll make a decision on in three or four weeks. I'll take my time. There's no pressure to make a decision now."

Sheets said he is enjoying good health in the wake of a second eye operation for a detached retina in August. It was discovered last August while he was on vacation in Pennsylvania.

"I drove back to Boston for the operation at Mass Eye and Ear," he said. "It was the same eye that was operated on before, but this was a new

Audit Report Finds Violations In City's Past Financial Practices

The independent auditing firm that has been studying Quincy's finances says the city, for several years, has "circumvented (state) safeguards and accumulated deficits in violation of the statutes."

But, the report added, "the city has worked diligently to change procedures and processes to address the deficiencies."

The violations included:

"Bills, which were unpaid because sufficient appropriation was not available, were rolled over and paid out of the next year's budget in fiscal 2000 and 2001. Additional bills have remained unpaid due to lack of appropriation or other available funding sources.

"The city set its tax rate in both fiscal 2001 and 2002 without disclosure by the city auditor of deficits created by unpaid and deferred bills.

"The city had executed contracts without certification by the city auditor that appropriation or funding sources were available to support the contract. The deficits, unpaid bills and underfunded commitment have been a major focus in the development and execution of the fiscal 2003 budget.

"In addition to the accumulation of undisclosed deficits, the city had failed to comply with bid laws for construction and other purchased services. The city Purchasing Department repeatedly tried to gain control over procurement and contract administration in certain departments and particularly the Department of Public Works."

The report said that the audit procedures were limited to "specific known areas of concern."

"Due to the extensive problems found in unpaid bills and contracted services we were unable to go into depth in other specific areas including certain trust and special revenue accounts and other capital projects," the report concluded.

Non-Smoking Proposals Coming, Says Health Commissioner

Quincy acting Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele said his department will propose non-smoking regulations to the City Council early this year.

Scheele said the health department is in the process of drafting non-smoking proposals governing the workplace, including eating and drinking establishments, but details are not available yet.

The move will come on the heels of Boston's new ban on smoking in bars and restaurants, which went into effect recently.

The acting health commissioner said he was encouraged by Quincy business owners who have implemented their own non-smoking rules which go above and beyond current city regulations.

Any ordinance in Quincy would go through the mayor's office and must be approved by the city council.

Five Arraigned From Drug Raid, Police Searching For 6th Suspect

Five of six people arrested during a drug raid last week pleaded not guilty to various charges Monday in Quincy District Court.

Quincy District Court Judge Mark Coven continued the cases until Jan. 28, a court spokesperson said.

Police are searching for a sixth suspect who left court before his arraignment, the spokesperson said.

On Dec. 27, Police raided an apartment at 42 Harrington Ave. and said they found a "considerable" amount of cocaine stashed in several areas. The apartment's occupants, Theresa Burns, 43, and Joseph Nee, 33, were arrested by police on cocaine-distribution charges.

Burns was released on personal recognizance, and Nee was taken to Bridgewater State Hospital for observation, the spokesperson said. Nee also had multiple outstanding warrants against him, police said.

Robert Dixey, 33, of Lawrence St., Quincy, pleaded not guilty to drug distribution charges. He was released pending the Jan. 28 continuation. Police said Dixey was found in the apartment possessing cocaine.

Dolores Russell, 52, of Massachusetts Ave., pleaded not guilty to charges of drug possession. She was released on personal recognizance and ordered to appear back in court on Jan. 28 for a continuation.

Doreen Robertson, 45, of Massachusetts Ave., was arrested on an outstanding warrant.

Receives 'Gift Of Life' At Christmas

Quincy Man 'Fabulous' After Lung Transplant

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

On Dec. 23, John O'Brien received the most important Christmas present of his 61 years on earth - the gift of life.

After battling the debilitating lung disease, emphysema, for many years, the 221 Winthrop St. resident received a right-lung transplant at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston.

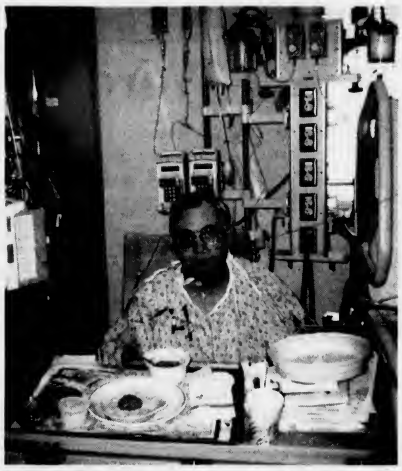
Thus far, the six-hour operation has been deemed a success, and doctors say it should improve the quality of his life.

"He's doing fabulous," O'Brien's wife, Julie, said Monday. "He could return home as early as today (Thursday) barring any unforseen setbacks."

The operation ended O'Brien's nerve-wracking, 14-month wait as a candidate for a lung transplant. The waiting process became an emotional rollercoaster, filled with moments of extreme elation and disappointment.

The stress took its toll on Julie who suffered a heart attack last September.

But 2003 is shaping up to be a better year for O'Brien and his family. Julie has recovered from the heart attack, and her husband of 39 years is on his way to recovery.



After undergoing various health and screening tests, O'Brien was placed on the transplant list in October 2001. He was put under the care of the Lung Clinic at Brigham & Women's.

It was very important for O'Brien to stay healthy during the waiting period, otherwise he would have been removed from the transplant list. This issue hit home in December 2001, when a lung infection forced O'Brien off the transplant list. He was designated as a secondary recipient in case the primary recipient could not receive the organ.

But O'Brien was removed from the list due to the infection. O'Brien landed in the hospital again in May of 2002 with ulcers and intestinal problems.

O'Brien's lung disease forced him to stop working as a Security Group Leader at Teradyne in Boston, his place of employment for 22 years.

High hopes were dashed again in 2002 after O'Brien was informed by doctors that a donor was found. A feeling of initial euphoria was replaced with one of disappointment when it was discovered that the donor's lung was not suitable for transplant.

JOHN O'BRIEN of Quincy received the gift of life -- a right lung transplant -- on Christmas Eve. The 61-year-old resident of 221 Winthrop St. is shown four days after the 6-hour operation at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Julie said many variables came into play with regard to finding a suitable donor. For example, she said, the body weight, height, blood type and tissue composition needed to be similar for the donor and recipient. Since lungs vary in size it was necessary for doctors to find a donor who had the same physical size as O'Brien, she said.

Her husband's wait became more arduous because Massachusetts has a low number of organ donors when compared to other states, she said.

After watching the clock and waiting for the phone to ring for 14 months, O'Brien received the fateful call from Brigham & Women's Hospital at 11:30 p.m. on Dec. 23. Hospital doctors asked about O'Brien's condition. They wanted to know if he was taking his medication. Finally, they wanted to know how soon he could go to the hospital for the lung transplant.

"We had his things packed already waiting for this moment," said Julie. "We had his suitcase all ready to go." O'Brien placed a few calls to family members and arrived at the hospital overnight on Dec. 24.

The six-hour operation began at approximately 5 a.m. on Dec. 24. O'Brien was one of three patients who received organ transplants on Christmas Eve at Brigham & Women's Hospital. Clifford Guiles of Glens Fall, NY, received a heart transplant, and Guy Newton of Berkeley received the left lung of the same donor who gave to O'Brien.

Julie said her husband initially was reluctant to have the procedure. "The doctors convinced him that his quality of life would improve greatly with this operation," she said.

O'Brien took the chance, and thus far, the results have been positive.

Julie thanked her husband's doctors and support staff at the hospital.

"The saddest thing about receiving the transplant is knowing someone passed away to give us the organ," said Julie. "But the end result is saving someone else's life, and for that we are very thankful."

Ward 1 Heating Up

The political climate is heating up in Ward 1.

Joanne Bythrow, long active in the Houghs Neck community, is entering the field for the Ward 1 city council seat incumbent Greg Hanley is leaving at the end of the year.

BYTHROW

She will be the fourth definite candidate with at least one or two more possibly to come.

Bythrow will make it official at a campaign kick-off fundraiser Friday, Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club in Houghs Neck. (Suggested donation: $15.)

She joins James Bottary, active in Project Hope; Sean McArdle, Houghs Neck Community Council member; and Joseph Keegan of Merrymount, a Quincy police officer, who are already off and running. Like them, she will be making her political debut.

Leo Kelly, now chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, says he is going to run for the seat to which he was elected six times. But says it's too early to make it official.

And, perennial candidate Gretchen Grant says she is running again.

Other names still being mentioned as possible candidates: Robert Ross of Germantown, member of the Quincy High School Siting Committee and brother-in-law of state Senator Michael Morrissey; and Daniel Maguire, past president of Merrymount Association.

Bythrow brings a large plateful of community involvement to her campaign.

She has been an active member of the Houghs Neck Community Council for more than 20 years, serving on the Executive Board for most of that time as president, vice president, recording and corresponding secretary.

She has been an advisor to the Pilgrim Fellowship at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, helping to run variety shows and youth retreats.

And at Most Blessed Sacrament Church, has served as Prefect of Our Lady's Sodality, and helping with Christmas fairs and other fundraising activities.

She has also been involved in the Campfire Girls and Cub Scouts programs and with Quincy's First Night celebrations.

Ward 1 is shaping up as a political hot spot in this year's city election.

BRIAN McNAMEE is quietly building a campaign chest for another City Council run this year.

McNAMEE

McNamee held a by invitation fundraiser in early December at Captain Fishbones at Marina Bay and says he raised $5,000. He's also planning another one for February.

McNamee, who ran for the Ward 6 seat, says he's "looking at the city council -- maybe at-large, maybe Ward 6."

He is now the chief financial officer of the South Essex Sewerage District regional wastewater treatment authority but still a Quincy resident.

NICE GESTURE DEPT.: Quincy's Korean War Memorial at Hancock St. and Southern Artery beside Veterans Memorial Stadium has five new flags -- a Christmas gift from Paul Mason, who with his brother, Forest, own Mason's Texaco station across from the memorial.

Paul presented the flags to John (Butch) Mahoney, who headed the campaign for the handsome 10-ton black polished granite memorial dedicated in July, 1996. It is engraved in 23 karat gold leaf with the names of the 38 Quincy men who gave their lives in Korea and also honors all veterans of that once "Forgotten War."

MAHONEY

Mahoney, a former Marine of the Korean War era, has personally maintained the upkeep of the memorial and surroundings. And makes sure that the flags continue to fly over it.

The flags are: United States, United Nations, South Korea, POW/MIA, Massachusetts, and Korean War Veterans.

Mason back in March donated all six flags. This time, the five that were needed because of wear and tear.

"I go through two sets of flags a year," says Mahoney. "They are spotlighted and usually fly 24 hours a day in most kinds of weather. They become frayed and tattered."

Mason does his good deeds without fanfare and seeks no credit. He won't even let his photo be taken with the flags.

"He's a real, wonderful guy," says Mahoney. "I can't thank him and the Mason family enough."

WELL, NOW THAT 2003 is here, you might be feeling a little older. And if you aren't this little tidbit might do it.

Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Community Life Center, sends along a list of items put together by the staff at Beloit College in Wisconsin "to give the faculty a sense of the mindset of the year's incoming freshmen."

BEALS

Here's a few items off that list about those freshmen that might make you feel a little older:

• They have no meaningful recollection of the Reagan era and probably don't know he was shot.

• "You sound like a broken record," means nothing to them. They have never owned a record player.

• Most have never seen a black and white TV set.

• They don't know what a cloth baby diaper is.

• They have never heard the commercial, "Help me. I've fallen and I can't get up."

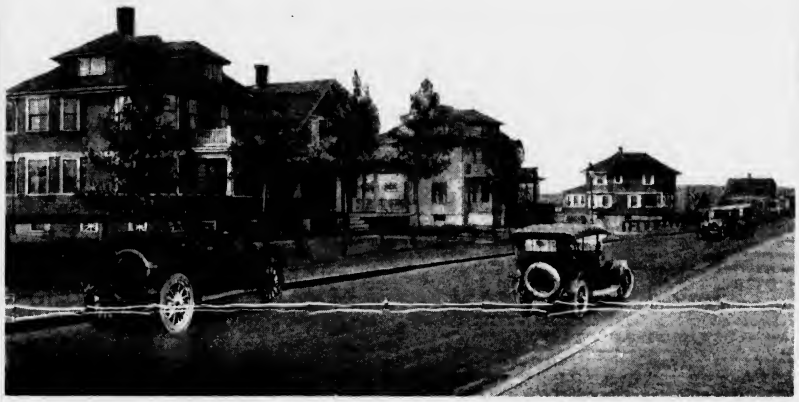
• To them, the Tonight Show has always starred Jay Leno.

• Popcorn, they think, has always been popped in a microwave.

• They have never gone swimming and worried about Jaws.

• The Vietnam War is as ancient history to them as World War I, World War II and the Civil War.

• They don't known about Americans being held hostage in Iran.



• They never heard: "Where's the beef?" "I'd walk a mile for a Camel." Or, "De plane, de plane!"

• They do not care who shot JR. And have no idea who JR was.

• They don't have a clue as how to use a typewriter.

And, with that, thanks to my old Royal, I'll say so-long and wish you a happy, healthy 2003. (Where did those years go!)

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920's POSTCARD is a view of Wollaston Boulevard looking north towards Atlantic from the end of Squantum Yacht Club boardwalk. Apthorp Street comes out between the second and third houses. The Metropolitan Commission erected the post and rail fence along most of the roadway when it was built upon the marshland that served as Quincy's coastline along here. Some of the fence survives to this day. The publisher of the postcard added the automobiles in this scene to the postcard.

Recycling Key To Stopping Trash-Picking Nuisance

I watched in amusement as the Quincy City Council sought to control the nuisance of trash picking by outlawing the act. O Folly! The real culprit behind trash picking is the inability of households to recycle bottles and cans. Simply put, if you want to stop trash picking (and save the city some valuable dollars) simply recycle.

The trash pickers are efficiently mining a resource and do not waste time on households that recycle. They know where the trash bags containing a dozen beer or soda cans will be each week. Whereas some of my proverbial neighbors get "picked" each week, it has rarely if ever happened at my household. I smile as I admire the work ethic of the old woman who limps past my home each week, pulling a cart (not a shopping cart) or hard-earned cans and bottles.

Least of all, households could place their redeemable bottles and cans in the recycling bin where "recyclable pickers" could perform their valuable duty with less nuisance in the community.

Keenan Should Be Appointed To Cahill's Seat

John Keenan should be appointed by the City Council to replace Councillor At-Large Timothy Cahill after Mr. Cahill's planned resignation in January.

Running for political office is an arduous and time-consuming task. Very few undertake it and fewer still succeed. First time candidates for political office learn this very quickly. Voters citywide listen to the candidates as those candidates walk the neighborhoods, attend coffee hours, attend candidate's nights and countless other neighborhood events. The voters look, listen, and decide by the ballot which candidate is, in their opinion, most qualified for election based on that candidate's sincerity, personality, tenacity, grasp of the issues, and ability to clearly articulate his or herself.

That process occurred during the last City Council election cycle. The voters looked, listened and decided whom they felt would best serve their needs. Mr. Keenan finished in fourth place, garnering over 10,000 votes – only 800 votes behind the third and final place winner. The next highest vote-getter finished thousands of votes behind Mr. Keenan.

Mr. Keenan clearly was the voter's choice more than any of the other runners up and any process that now includes discussion of a candidate's race, ethnicity, age or gender as a basis for appointment as a replacement Councillor is not germane to the process of selecting that replacement Councillor.

In addition, any attempt to open the selection process and create a "dog and pony show" by allowing any interested party to present himself before the City Council should be seen for the grandstanding subterfuge that it is.

Mr. Keenan's qualifications and experience were graded favorably by the voters in the last election. He was the people's next choice in a fairly contested election. Based on that fact alone, Mr. Keenan deserves to be appointed to the City Council.

A Soldier

I was that which others did not want to be.

I went where others feared to go and did what others failed to do.

I asked nothing from those who gave nothing and reluctantly accepted the thought of eternal loneliness should I fail.

I have seen the face of terror; felt the stinging cold of fear; and enjoyed the sweet taste of a moment's love.

I have cried, pained and hoped, but most of all, I have lived times other would say were best forgotten.

At least some day I will be able to say that I was proud of what I was — A SOLDIER.

Grateful For City Hall Friends

To my friends in City Hall:

My son Darren died suddenly at the age of 36. A collection of monies was taken in lieu of flowers. The money will be put in a separate account to save toward a headstone of which I hope to accomplish by spring.

Please accept my humble and grateful thank you in making this possible.

Phelan To Unveil New City of Quincy Website

Mayor William Phelan announces that the new City of Quincy website will go on line Friday, Jan. 10.

Phelan, working in conjunction with the Information Technology department, had three goals in mind for this new site:

• To create a website for Quincy's constituency that is attractive, organized, easy to read and easy to navigate;

• To create a website that contains an 'online constituent services page' that enables any city taxpayer and resident the ability to enter a service request via the Internet;

• To create a website that contains current, helpful information regarding city services and departments, information on city government and how it operates.

The city's website can be reached at http://www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

Phelan said the new website highlights Quincy as a historic city filled with local flavor and an abundance of opportunities and services available to the public. The information will be presented with a new and modern design, he said.

In addition, the new look will be easy to navigate and will provide Quincy's residents and visitors alike with an overview of the city's government, information on each department, useful links, as well as quick and easy access to some of Quincy's services, the mayor said.

Phelan said he is particularly proud to debut the City of Quincy's new Constituent Services Page, which will be launched along with the overall website. Any resident will be able to enter a request via the Internet to obtain information on services or to request service from a specific department, he said. Mayor Phelan is terming it "one-stop shopping" for the taxpayers of Quincy.

The online service request page is an additional option for people who are more comfortable using the Internet, rather than the telephone, to place service requests, he said. The mayor said this type of system has been successful in Boston and Weymouth.

As with all good websites, the City of Quincy's is a work in progress. New items will be added on a regular basis and updated information will be provided as soon as it is available, Phelan said. He added that the City is exploring new features, such as online payment abilities and virtual tours.

"This has been an exciting project for all the departments in the city and we will continue to work together to enhance this new website in the coming months," said Phelan. "We are very proud of the new look and are excited to see what the residents think about it. We hope that you can easily navigate the new site and find some exciting news and services that you may not have known about before.

"I am confident that the project will continue to grow, adding information and services to bring the residents of Quincy quicker and more effective access to governmental services," he said.

Quincy 2000 Announces Successful Loan Closings

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, announced the successful culmination of a recent technical assistance initiative with the closing of FleetBank loans to two Quincy businesses.

The loans were originated under Fleet's SBA loan program for John Baranowski of Boston Audio Design and Edy Yasmine of Old Colony Liquor to convert to condominium and purchase their respective business spaces at 637-659 Southern Artery.

"The prospect for long term success for a small business is greatly enhanced when the business owns its real estate rather than leasing it," said Mannarino. "Consistent with our mission, we are pleased to have assisted these two Quincy entrepreneurs."

Mannarino said Quincy 2000 member Ed Lappen, the seller of the property, saw the need for loan counseling for these businesses and referred them to the organization.

Eleven area banks are members of Quincy 2000, insuring that borrowers see multiple offerings for their financial needs. Quincy 2000 backs up their technical support with a loan pool of its own for those projects unable to secure bank financing.

Quincy 2000 is the city's public/private partnership for economic development.

Discolored Water In West Quincy Jan. 9-11

Water users in the vicinity of the Adams and Beale Streets intersection will be faced with three days of discolored water next week when the MWRA finishes work on a by pass line.

Sections of East Milton will also be affected starting Thursday, Jan. 9, and continuing through Saturday, Jan. 11, while work is being completed on the bypass across the Adams Street Bridge in Milton.

"The discolored water is safe for drinking," said the MWRA, "but care should be taken when washing white or lighter colored items during this period."

Memory Alert Program Expands For Seniors

The Memory Alert bracelet program is being expanded from memory-impaired persons living in family settings to those in nursing homes, rehabilitation centers and assisted living quarters.

The program provides seniors "at risk" with an ID bracelet inscribed with a number. Should the person be found unable to speak a check of the number would reveal his or her identity.

The emergency program is offered by the Quincy Police Department, the Quincy Commission on Handicapped Affairs and Beechwood Community Life Center.

The Memory Alert bracelet is designed for all ambulatory persons with memory impairments. To date, the majority of participants have been seniors living in family homes.

"We now want to promote that bracelets to assisted living facilities, rehab centers and nursing homes, wherever persons with memory impairments are ambulatory and potentially 'at risk,'" said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay

Beals met recently with Police Capt. James McNeil, Lt. Kevin L. Williams, Officers Bob Hanna and Joe Pepjonovich; Bill Murphy of the Commission on Disability, and Kathleen Price, Beechwood's Elder Services Director to assess the program.

All interested persons, families and facility directors are invited to call or visit Beechwood Community Life Center to register persons who may need the service.

A completed, confidential information form and a current photo is forwarded to the Quincy Police Department and entered into their central registry.

The registration includes a $10 fee, payable to the Quincy Commission on Handicapped Affairs.

NQHS Renews Oldest Community Partnership

Quincy's oldest school-community partnership was recently renewed for the 14th straight year at a signing breakfast at North Quincy High School.

The partnership agreement was signed by Mayor William Phelan, Judi Casey of State Street Corporation, Robert Sanchez of Boston Financial Data Services, School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro and North Quincy Principal Louis Ioanilli.

Phelan noted that he graduated from North Quincy High School and that North's educational activities had been enriched by the contributions of the school's business partners.

Casey said that the partnership had become a national model. She reported that some of the programs developed through the partnership, such as Great Ideas and Best Practices, were being emulated in cities like Chicago and San Francisco. Sanchez spoke of Boston Financial Data Services' commitment to support the partnership now and for years to come.

DeCristofaro expressed his gratitude for the continuing contributions of the partnership and similar partnerships that involve every school in the city. Ioanilli emphasized the key role that the school's business partners have played in enabling North Quincy High School to keep abreast of evolving technologies.

Bellotti Joins National Police Chief Association

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

The National Association of Chiefs of Police has elected Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti as a member in good standing.

"I am honored to be part of an association that is so dedicated to the improvement of law enforcement and to recognizing the accomplishments of law enforcement officers," Bellotti said.

Sheriff Bellotti's office works closely with local police departments in Norfolk County, providing mutual aid for search and rescue missions as well as sharing criminal background information to assist in police investigations.

Local police have also been a long-time collaborator in the sheriff's successful senior citizen safety program known as TRIAD, which brings together senior citizens with law enforcement and elder services in their communities.

"The strong relationship my office has had over the years with our local police chiefs is something I hope to continue for years to come," Bellotti said. "The chiefs do an outstanding job in the communities, and I am happy to provide assistance wherever I can.

"By working together, we achieve a new level of effectiveness in public safety -- especially in these trying economic times when many of our budgets are tight. By pooling our resources, the public's interests are never short-changed."

The National Association of Chiefs of Police is a non-profit educational association of command law enforcement officers within the United States with 60,000 eligible members.

Quincy Housing Authority, Fire Department Host Safety Day

The Quincy Housing Authority Drug Elimination Program, in conjunction with the Quincy Fire Department, recently hosted a "Fire Safety Day" for the young people of Germantown.

Youngsters were greeted by local firefighters of Engine No. 8: Captain Dennis O'Brien, Lt. Charlie Bienna and Firefighter Chris Condon. Children learned about the life-saving fire apparatus and received educational packets, which included anti-crime, anti-drug and fire safety material.

Each parent received Child Lore Prevention booklets and I.D. cards for maintaining a permanent household record of each child's fingerprints. These fingerprints I.D. cards provide crucial and timely information to the police in cases of missing or abducted children.

REAL ESTATE

Online Info, Real Estate Agents Help House Hunters

(NAPS) — Starting the house hunting process online can save you valuable time, and help make the entire transaction a little easier — especially if the buying information comes from a reliable source, such as a licensed real estate professional.

Many home buyers visit Web sites set up by real estate agencies because these sites offer detailed property information, multiple photos and virtual home tours, maps of home locations, neighborhood and community information and general real estate industry information.

According to J.D. Power and Associates, among national full-service real estate firms, Century 21 Real Estate Corporation ranks highest in overall satisfaction for first-time home buyers and highest in overall satisfaction with Internet services provided to home sellers.

To make your house hunting easier, here are some helpful hints from www.Century21.com:

• Start by creating a list of features and amenities you may want in a home.

• Talk to a real estate professional about where you want to live. Location is a huge part of any move.

• See what you can afford. Start by crunching the numbers using an online mortgage calculator.

• Get pre-approved for a mortgage. This process can take less than an hour and can tell you how much house you can afford and estimate your monthly payments.

• Brush up on important real estate terms. Understanding these key terms will help you make the most informed decisions possible.

• Use the Internet to help narrow your search. Viewing photos and virtual tours of homes made available online can help you narrow down your list of potential purchases.

• Remember to keep an open mind when you are looking at homes. Your real estate professional will be able to assist you.

• When you are ready to make an offer on a home, use a real estate professional to help negotiate the best price.

• After your offer is accepted, your real estate professional will assist you in setting up and coordinating various inspections. This may be a good time to consider purchasing a home protection plan against unexpected costs of home repairing during the listing period.

• Once you close the deal, you may want to arrange for an alarm system, turning on the electricity and subscribing to a local newspaper or making home repairs. Your real estate agent may be able to offer some money saving advice.

Clean Up On These Bathroom Tips

(NAPS)—To prevent microbes from using your bathroom, experts suggest you keep these helpful hints in mind:

• Always keep an all-purpose cleaner and a sponge in the guest bath so you can sneak away and clean up when unexpected company shows up.

• Steam helps to loosen buildup, so why not clean while you're in there.

• To avoid bathtub rings, don't use oily bath preparation. Use a water softener if you live in a hard-water area, and rinse the tub immediately after bathing.

• Can't get to that dirt in the corner? Make a pointed tool by cutting an old whisk broom at a 45-degree angle.

• To avoid bacteria from breeding in your bathroom use products with built-in antimicrobial protection. Products with antimicrobial protection, such as those with Microban protection, provide continuous protection against bacteria, mold and mildew that can cause stains and odors. By keeping microbes in check, you bathroom will be easier to c lean and stay cleaner between cleanings.

Remember, the right antimicrobial protection won't wash off or wear away, providing protection for the lifetime of the product. Microban protection is found in products as Aqua Glass tubs, showers and whirlpools, CorStone sinks, DAP Kwik Seal Plus caulk, flooring adhesives from Parachem, paint from David Paints, California Paints, Hirshfield's, Color Wheel and Miller Paint Co., and many more products throughout your home.

To learn more about antimicrobial protection and other products available with this protection visit the Microban Web site (www.microban.com).

Real Estate in the New Era

by Vin Moscardelli Owner/Broker

CENTRAL REAL ESTATE

SOLID GAINS

After reviewing their stock portfolios, most homeowners are probably happy that rising property values have shored up their financial lives. The simple reality is that selling a house is nothing like selling a stock, which has definite advantages. While median home prices may be up 16% since 1999, most homeowners are looking to sell their homes to pocket profits. Home sales have risen only moderately, thereby helping the housing market avoid the fate of the stock market, where emotional selling can produce unwanted results. Moreover, price gains in real estate are very likely to remain relatively permanent. A shortage of housing, combined with a demographic surge in potential buyers, translates into a very safe investment for the foreseeable future.

During these unpredictable economic times, homeowners can take comfort in the stable investment they have in their homes. Potential investors are likely to find homes a safer investment than stocks. Whether you are buying or selling, CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can help make the process enjoyable and stress-free. Buyers, we can review your wish list of features and price range and show you a wide range of homes that meet your criteria. Sellers, we implement an aggressive marketing strategy to expose your home to qualified buyers. Call us at (617) 328-1312 to arrange a consultation. Visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway. Happy New Year!

HINT: Rising home prices , provide homeowners with a "substitute savings policy."

Making Painting Projects Easier

(NAPS) — A fresh coat of paint can change the entire look of a room. In fact, painting is one of the most commonly embarked upon do-it-yourself projects. However, painting can also be a time consuming and messy process. To help make painting easier, try brushing up on a few tips from home improvement experts:

Before Starting

• Set up a small table as a "tool station" in the center of the room or just outside the door stocked with everything you'll need to paint. Use large canvas drop cloths to cover floors and large furniture that can't be moved.

• Prep the walls and doors by removing knobs, hinges, door handles, switch plates and outlet covers before painting. Also, fix plaster cracks and doorknob holes punched in drywall. For a professional appearance use painter's blue tape to keep edges clean.

Let's Paint

• Use a paint tray, such as the Close-N-Go Covered Paint Tray from Roman Decorating Products, to save time and eliminate messes. While you're painting, the Close-N-Go can be used to hold the paint can (no drips) and other accessories. When the day is done — and the project isn't — the paint and roller can be sealed inside and used again days or even weeks later. This saves time (no clean-up) and money (no wasted paint).

• To use a roller correctly, remember the "M" technique. Roll out a large letter "M" on the wall. Then run the roller horizontally to spread the paint. Finish with lighter roller strokes in a perpendicular direction.

Clean-Up Time

• A package of rags can be a painter's best friend. Use them to wipe up spills, dab off excess paint, fix mistakes or clean your hands.

• To easily clean latex paint off paint brushes and rollers, add two capfuls of laundry fabric softener to a bucket of water. When you're finished paintings, simply place the items in the solution, agitate, rinse and then air dry.

Simple Things Make A Difference

Winterizing Your Home

(NAPS) – The Department of Energy's Energy Information Administration expects winter to be 12 percent colder than it was last year.

But, cooler temperatures don't have to equal increased heating bills. Simple things, such as caulking windows and doors or closing curtains and shutters at night, can make a big difference in your heating bills – and this season, every little difference may count.

Before you fire up the furnace, try these tips:

• Be sure your furnace is working properly. American Standard Heating and Air Conditioning recommends homeowners schedule annual inspections of their heating units. That can help assure furnaces don't pose potential fire hazards and that they burn more efficiently.

• Seal gaps between heated and unheated spaces, such as areas around pipes, ducts, fans or vents.

• Lower your thermostat to at least 68 degrees during the day. For each degree you lower the thermostat, you can save five to ten percent on cooling costs.

• Add adequate insulation to your attic (R-30 in ceiling, R-13 in exterior walls and R-11 in interior walls and floors).

• Wrap the water heater with an insulated water heater blanket in severely cold climates.

• Avoid losing heat out of your fireplace. Fireplaces pull warm air out of your home through the chimney. Turn the heat down when you have a fire and keep the damper tightly closed when the fireplace is not in use.

Operation Winter Weather Warning:

American Heart Association Tips For A Heart Safe Winter Season

Deaths from heart attacks appear to be seasonal, peaking after Thanksgiving and extending through the holidays and winter season.

While there may be a variety of factors that play into the rise in deaths, the American Heart Association advises certain cautions during the very coldest of months.

Higher risk individuals are people who have existing heart disease or who have had a stroke, high blood pressure, are overweight, smoke, have high cholesterol, lead a very sedentary lifestyle, or have a strong family history.

Several factors may influence the trend toward more deaths at this time of year — including an increase in respiratory infections in the winter, increased workload on the heart from activities such as shoveling of heavy, wet snow; environmental factors such as the use of fireplaces, which can deplete oxygen in the blood and place stress on the heart, and changes in atmospheric pressure, have been identified. Dietary influences are also implicated, as we increase our food, alcohol and salt consumption.

For these individuals the physical stresses of the season may pose extra concern and the American Heart Association is urging individuals to take a few simple precautions to avoid becoming a victim of sudden cardiac death:

• Avoid sudden exertion, such as lifting a heavy shovel of snow — even walking through heavy wet snow or snow drifts can strain the heart.

• If the snow must be shoveled, try to identify a young person in the neighborhood who is physically fit.

• It's not safer for a woman to shovel, particularly after menopause when risks for women are comparable to those of men.

• For those at high risk, ask your physician how much physical exertion is acceptable for you.

• Avoid Hypothermia, a drop in body temperature to a subnormal level. Signs are lack of coordination, mental confusion, slowed reactions, shivering and sleepiness.

• Don't drink alcoholic beverages before going outside. This will draw heat away from the body's vital organs.

• Wear layers of clothing to trap the air as protective insulation — and don't forget to wear a hat or head scarf, gloves and warm socks, to maintain body heat.

Know the warning signs of heart attack

• Uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of the chest lasting more than a few minutes.

• Pain spreading to the shoulders, neck or arms.

• Chest discomfort with lightheadedness, fainting, sweating, nausea or shortness of breath.

Know the warning signs of stroke

• Sudden weakness or numbness of the face, arm or leg on one side of the body.

• Sudden dimness or loss of vision, particularly in one eye.

• Sudden loss of speech, or trouble talking or understanding speech.

• Sudden severe headaches with no known or apparent cause.

• Sudden, unexplained dizziness, unsteadiness or sudden falls, especially along with any of the previous symptoms.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SOMETHING TO SINK YOUR TEETH INTO

People aged 65 years and older are more likely to have retained their own teeth than either their parents or grandparents did at their age. Thanks to better dental care, fluoridation of water, and better nutrition among other things, the rate of edentulism (toothlessness) among older individuals has been declining in this country. However, the rates of toothlessness vary widely from state to state. In states where smoking rates are high, the levels of toothlessness are elevated. And, nationwide, older people who never finished high school are more likely to have lost their teeth than college-educated individuals, perhaps due to lower income and inadequate dental care. In any case, edentulism should not be viewed as a necessary part of aging.

When you look your best, you feel better about yourself. Cosmetic dentistry is coming of age with new materials and procedures that make a beautiful smile accessible to everyone. Let us, we're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, help you make the decision that is right for your special dental needs. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Nationwide rates of toothlessness among smokers (41%) tops that of non-smokers (20%).

Raiders Ice Hanover, Host Falmouth Saturday

ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School hockey team accomplished its goal for December with a 3-2 win at Hanover last Saturday afternoon.

The victory improved North Quincy to 2-1, all against strong non-league competition.

"I'm definitely pleased," said head coach Bob Doyle. "It was a good road win. I wanted to make sure we got out of December above .500 and we did."

North Quincy will host Falmouth Saturday night at 7:50 at Quincy Youth Arena to kick off a three-game home stand before it heads out on the road for the rest of the month.

"I'm real pleased with what we have in the locker room," Doyle said. "The attitude is much improved. We had so many hardships last year. The kids are a close-knit bunch. Hopefully that will lead to better camaraderie and more wins."

North Quincy should only get stronger when three top players return sometime this month from injures. Senior winger Rob Mooney (ankle) and senior defenseman Mike McGunagle (ankle) have not played this season and sophomore Pat Casper (knee) went down in the second game against Quincy.

One thing the Red Raiders do have going for them is a potent first line, which has accounted for all eight goals. Senior quad-captains Matt Grazioso (6) and Bryan Cooper (2) have been a headache for opposing goaltenders.

The second line consists of senior Billy Barter, junior Rich Stone and sophomore Paul Graham. Doyle said the third and fourth lines are interchangeable but will look to give the fourth line more time on JV to gain more confidence.

Leading the way defensively is senior quad-captain Tim Duggan, who will shoulder more of a load at the blue line with the loss of Steve Kelley, who left to play for a junior hockey team.

Senior quad-captain Bruce Maggio is the starting goaltender and will be backed up by John O'Driscoll.

Against Hanover, the Red Raiders took a 1-0 lead when Cooper scored at 10:00 of the opening period with assists from Grazioso and junior Kyle Carmody.

Hanover tied the game in the second when Brendan Mulligan scored with an assist from Rich Mulcahy.

North Quincy quickly answered with a two-goal eruption. Grazioso tallied the go-ahead goal at 5:08 with assists from Carmody and Cooper — and 50 seconds later he struck again on a breakaway set up by Carmody.

In the third period, the Red Raiders outshot the Indians, 11-4, but the momentum switched in Hanover's favor when Ryan Truman scored at 11:00 with assists from Jack Rafftery and Mark McGinness.

"Even though we outshot them, the momentum kind of swung in Hanover's direction," Doyle said. "Bruce Maggio made some nice saves in the four-minute flurry at the end of the game."

After opening the season with a 3-2 win over Duxbury, North Quincy dropped a 3-2 game to rival Quincy — the Presidents' fourth straight win after a season-opening loss to Dennis-Yarmouth.

North Quincy jumped out to a 1-0 lead when Grazioso scored with assists from Casper and Cooper. Three minutes later the Presidents tied the game on a goal by senior quad-captain Liam Powers assisted by junior Brendan Craig.

In the second, Grazioso struck again just three minutes into the fame with assists going to Barter and senior George Snowling.

At 8:00, Quincy tallied the equalizer when junior quad-captain Josh Giordani converted on a 5-on-3 power play. Senior quad-captain Matt LaCorte and Powers picked up assists.

In the third, Quincy netted the game-winner only nine seconds into the period when senior forward Joe Bohan tapped home a puck in front of the net.

The Red Raiders had plenty of chances the rest of the game, as they went on three power plays and showered senior goalie Keith Flaherty with 15 shots.

"There was plenty of hockey left," Doyle said. "Keith Flaherty played an outstanding game. He stopped several quality chances in the slot by Grazioso, Cooper and Carmody."

With the graduation of the dynamic goaltending duo of Shaun Flaherty and Tom Shruhan, Flaherty has been a great fit for the Presidents in his first year between the pipes on the varsity level.

Defensively, LaCorte and Lavery will shoulder much of the work at the blue line.

Quincy will use three lines on offense. On the White Line, Giordani centers freshman Michael McKeon and junior Dan Sullivan. On the Black Line, Powers centers Joe Bohan and senior Ryan Conley. The Blue Line features Craig and senior quad-captain Jamie Chiocchio and Tommy Walsh.

Giordani is the main offensive cog as he scored 10 goals last season, including tournament play. Also expected to add some offensive punch are Powers, Bohan and McKeon, the younger brother of sniper Bill McKeon who graduated last year.

NQHS Grad Joe Rogers Presents Audio Tapes Of Early School History

North Quincy High School alumnus Joe Rogers recently presented audio tapes of the first 10 years of the school's history to Principal Lou Ioanilli at a ceremony in the school's amphitheater.

The tapes will be on display in the school's media center and will be available for student research.

The 1935 graduate has been researching school life at North Quincy High for the past several years, and has recreated school history from September of 1927 through June of 1936. He delves into the academic, athletic and social events of the era.

Much of his information has come from the Manet, the school yearbook. The first athletic teams, aptly named North Sports Pioneers, along with athletes and coaches from those teams are mentioned throughout the 11-tape set.

Quincy-North Girls Hockey 3-1-1

The Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey team is off to a fast start in its second season, first at the varsity level.

Although QNQ lost Sunday night at Wellesley, it has posted a 3-1-1 record in its first five games.

QNQ hosted Everett yesterday (Wednesday) at 6 p.m. at Quincy Youth Arena and has a mini-break before its next game Jan. 11 against Martha's Vineyard.

Against Wellesley, QNQ couldn't knock the puck in the net and it suffered a defensive breakdown in the second period en route to a 3-0 setback.

"We moved the puck well," said head coach Laura Prisco. "We had a tough time scoring goals. We had a little lull in the second period when they scored all three of their goals."

Defensemen Lauren Struzik, a senior co-captain, and Rose Devlin turned in strong efforts as well as goalie Jessi Poggi.

Recently, QNQ hosted its first home game of the season at Quincy Youth Arena and skated away with a 4-1 victory over Wilmington.

After a scoreless opening period, QNQ seized a 2-0 lead in the second on goals by Nicole Murray and Kristina Manganaro, her sixth of the year.

In the third, Murray struck again, her fourth of the year, just 21 seconds into the frame and Lindsey Langille extended the lead to 4-0 with 7:32 left to play.

About 30 seconds later, Wilmington finally got on the board to account for the final score.

Struzik played a strong defensive game. Poggi stood out as well, lowering her goals-against average to 2.00.

"This was a team effort, everyone was involved in this win," Prisco said.

In previous action, QNQ played Division 1 Arlington Catholic to a 2-2 tie in a non-league game.

QNQ struggled in its own end for the first half of the game but was able to turn it on in the second half to secure the stalemate. Poggi recorded 33 saves to keep her team in the game.

"I have never been more proud of this team than I was tonight," Prisco said.

Arlington Catholic took a 1-0 lead in the first period before QNQ tied it in the second with a power-play goal by Manganaro.

Arlington Catholic regained the lead with 1:26 left in the frame. In the third, though, Murray tallied the equalizer with 2:43 left in the game.

GETTING VALUE

Those who lease vehicles may find that two different vehicles may sell for the same price yet have different monthly lease payments -- even though the lease terms may be exactly the same. This occurs because vehicles devalue at different rates, and devaluation affects the lease, which is related to how much the vehicle is expected to be worth at the end of the contract. Vehicles that devalue slowly are generally high-quality products that can be sold for more money down the road. As a result, they will have lower lease payments than vehicles that do not hold their value as well. Thus, choosing a vehicle that holds its value is a critical factor in obtaining a good lease.

In celebration of Epiphany, the Inter-Church Council of North Quincy and Wollaston will sponsor its 27th annual Festival of Lights Sunday, Jan. 5 at 7:30 p.m. at Sacred Heart Church, Hancock St., North Quincy.

Many clergy and lay persons from the member churches will participate as preacher, readers, singers, instrumentalists, and live performers of all the parts in this commemoration of the visit of the Wise Men to Bethlehem to see and worship Jesus.

Candlelight will also play a large part in this pageant.

The offering received will go to several agencies and groups helping the people of Quincy and the South Shore when they are in need.

Following the service those attending will gather for fellowship in the school cafeteria across the street from the church. Coffee, tea, hot chocolate, and homemade refreshments will be served.

The Council invites the public to join with them in this celebration.

Both the number of items contributed and the total weight of food received will be compared.

The competition gets intense as the weekly results are printed in the next week's bulletin. But of course, it is all in fun, and the real winners are the people who county on The Pantry Shelf for assistance.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

HAPPY NEW YEAR... What kind of a year will it be? We at the Deware Family Funeral Home hope that the coming year will be well-endowed with supplies of faith, courage and determination -- a sufficient supply for everyone -- for private citizens as well as public officials . . . Without faith, not only in God but in the abilities of our leaders at all levels and in ourselves, accomplishments will be few.

All of us must develop the type of courage it takes to speak out when a wrong needs righting. Too many sit back and hope that somebody else will make the first move or speak the first word . . . Too many "don't want to get involved" -- a decision that can feed the fires of greed, incompetence and dishonesty. . . And finally, we must acquire determination to assure that those things which we have become involved through use of our courage reach fruition.

Without these three -- faith in the future, the courage of our convictions, and determination in our efforts -- the coming year will not be a good year . . . But with these three, we can do much to shape a better community, state, nation and world.

Day conducted by Hanna.

• A section of the New Horizons for Youth Program at the Point Webster School.

• The Squantum Halloween Party conducted by Officer Robert Edgar of the Community Policing Unit.

• The Safe Boating program conducted by the Quincy Police Marine Unit.

• The After School DARE program.

• The Health & Welfare programs conducted by the Quincy Police at the local middle schools.

• RAD (Rape Aggression Defense) Training, the newest addition to the QPD's programs which should begin by the spring.

"This infusion of funds is absolutely essential to furthering the current Community Policing Programs and will assist in the expansion of these programs into the future," said Police Chief William Falco.

For the past 10 years, the Quincy Police Department has also been receiving Federal Block Grant money from the Department of Justice. In past years the grant was used to enhance the department's computer system, technical programs, booking and reporting systems and the placement of computers in the patrol cars.

This year the amount of the grant was $52,233 and will go toward the purchase of new digital photography equipment for the department.

"Federal and state funding similar to these grants is essential for the advancement of these types of programs within the city of Quincy," Phelan said. "It is a testament to the department for staying on top of these opportunities as they arise and incorporating them into the department's budget in the most effective manner."

Raymondi Proposes His Solutions To Problems

By TOM HENSHAW

Daniel Raymondi, freshly reelected to a second one-year term as president of the City Council, used his mid-term address to urge the mayor to "guarantee" the preservation of Engine 4 at the Wollaston Fire Station and other Fire Department equipment.

"The neighborhood firehouse is more than a garage. It's a safe haven in our neighborhood," he said. "As Council President and on behalf of the City Council, I urge the mayor to bring in an appropriation that guarantees that no fire apparatus is taken out of service."

Elimination of Engine 4 in Wollaston was one of the solutions to an $800,000 shortfall recommended by acting-Fire Chief Paul O'Connell and passed on to the City Council by Mayor William Phelan.

Raymondi, considered a potential challenger to Phelan, gave no hint in his address that he would run this year. He later said the speculation was premature but he did not close the door.

Raymondi also suggested a laundry list of short-term and long-range proposals that he said would solve many of the problems facing

At Mid-Term:

'City On Firm Fiscal Foundation' Phelan Declares

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

After a year of challenges and sacrifices Quincy is beginning 2003 "on a firm fiscal foundation" Mayor William Phelan declared in his mid-term address Monday.

But he warned that the city faces challenges because of "a tough economy and threatened cuts in state aid."

To meet those challenges Phelan proposed the creation of the position of Chief Financial Officer to work with all city departments to deal with budget problems and plan for the future.

"You simply cannot make these long-term future investments without a firm grasp of the overall financial health of the city.

Also accented in his 26-minute address were:

• The future use of the Fore River shipyard property.

• Extension of the Quincy Center Concourse.

• Revitalization of the downtown business area.

• Sidewalk and street repairs.

Phelan said he planned to leave for Washington, D.C., yesterday (Wednesday) to meet with the Massachusetts Congressional delegation regarding the sale of the shipyard property.

Phelan said the city has overcome severe budgetary problems and is ready to move forward and tackle a number of upcoming obstacles, including possible cuts in local aid and a continued slow economy.

Sheets Absent From Mid-Term Ceremonies

Four former mayors were in the audience at Mayor William Phelan's mid-term address — Walter Hannon, Arthur Tobin and Joseph LaRaia as guests, Frank McCauley as a current member of the City Council.

But no James Sheets, the former mayor that Phelan defeated in 2002, whose administration has been the target of criticism by the current mayor.

"There's nothing to read into that," said Sheets, explaining his absence. "I had a couple of appointments that I couldn't break. I need to get on with the rest of my life."

He said he has a cordial relationship with the current mayor.

"We have had lunch together," he said.

The former mayor has said he has been doing some parttime teaching, parttime consulting and has obtained a license from the state to sell real estate.

Three Officials Raise Doubts Over New QHS

Three local officials are raising serious concerns over whether a new Quincy High School will be built.

Asked by the Sun for their reaction to Mayor William Phelan's mid term address, state Senator Michael Morrissey, School Committee Vice Chairwoman Christine Cedrone, and School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg commented on the school which Phelan did not mention.

Under CERT Program

Emergency Preparedness Planned At Senior Housing Complexes

Patrolman Robert Hanna, the crime prevention officer, and five members of the Citizen Police Academy Alumni Association have been certified as instructors in the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.

The program entails a 24-hour training program conducted over three days and certified by the Massachusetts Emergency Management Association (MEMA).

The six also completed a MEMA certified one-day course in disaster related needs of the disabled and elderly. The goal is to present an Emergency Preparedness for Seniors program at the 14 senior housing complexes in Quincy.

"Since the tragedy of Sept. 11, 2001, many of our seniors are apprehensive about the possibility of an emergency situation," said Hanna.

"Many seniors have no idea how to prepare for an emergency or how the city will respond to an emergency situation. Our presentation will help seniors better understand their roles and the role of the city of Quincy in an emergency."

The training program will cover such emergencies as floods, hurricanes, blizzards, natural disasters and terrorist attacks.

It will cover such topics as how to prepare for an emergency, how to lay in a n emergency supply of food and equipment, how to prepare for evacuation, emergency first aid and fire suppression and working together with your neighbors.

The program would be presented two hours a week over a four-week period at each of the 14 senior complexes.

"The presentation is intended to calm the fears of our seniors by teaching them how to take care of themselves in an emergency as well as to familiarize them with the excellent emergency plan the city of Quincy has in place," said Hanna.

"The Senior Citizen Police Academy has had an excellent response from our seniors and I believe that this program will continue to draw a large population of our seniors."

Once the Emergency Preparedness for Seniors program has been completed, Hanna and his group plan to offer a full CERT training program for up to four people in each senior complex.

"This program will train individuals to be team leaders in their respective buildings," said Hanna.

"Their duties would consist of coordinating efforts in case of an emergency in their building and to assist other emergency personnel that have responded to their respective buildings."

The program will be offered at no cost either to the city or to the participants. Cost of basic materials and refreshments will be picked up by the Citizen Police Academy Alumni Association.

The first three senior complexes to undergo training were 125 Granite St., Town Brook House on Brackett Street and O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St.

AN EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS training class for seniors was held recently at 1000 Southern Artery. Instructors Patrolman Robert Hanna and Donna Lymneos (right) are shown here with two of the participants, resident Virginia Swallow and Lucy Parlee, activities director at 1000 Southern Artery.

Hanna noted that individual response to an emergency is important because when disaster strikes, communications, transportation and utilities are often overwhelmed. Whole neighborhoods are cut off from outside support.

"Individuals, neighborhoods, schools and businesses might need to rely on their own resources for food, water, first aid and shelter for at least 72 hours," said Hanna. "The ability to fend for oneself during this period will be critical to survival and recovery.

"Volunteers will always be the to do initial search and rescue and first aid."

License Granted For Babe Ruth World Series

The License Board granted Dick Lombardi, a representative for the Babe Ruth World Series, the necessary licenses for the event which will be held Aug. 13-23.

The series will be held at Adams Field.

A committee will be formed to gather donations for advertisements for the program book.

Chairman Joseph Shea said that all other events including any parades or canning will be held at other times so as to not conflict with any parking and traffic problems.

Shea, who said the city is "proud to be host of this tournament," told Lombardi to come back before the board in the spring to solidify the arrangements.

Income Tax Assistance Program

The Quincy Council on Aging will be providing free tax assistance three days a week to all lower and middle income seniors who need help with their taxes.

The program begins in February and ends April 15. Anyone interested can call 617-376-1246 after Feb. 1.

Taxpayers' Group Has Warning On City's Financial Future

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers' Association, calls for caution in estimating the city's financial progress over the past year.

Cousin issued his statement in anticipation of Mayor William Phelan's midterm address Monday, and as a follow-up to press reports regarding an independent audit by the Melanson and Heath accounting firm.

"I expect Mayor Phelan to say he stepped into a financial quagmire and has done a great job clearing it up," Cousin said. "Well, he did step into a quagmire, and he has done a lot to clear it up, but we think there are still important areas of concern — some old, and some new."

The most important area of concern, Cousin said, is the heavily backloaded contracts the city recently concluded with the teachers' and police unions.

"I just don't understand how the mayor thinks the city can afford those contracts," Cousin said. "The city will be losing state aid for at least the next year and probably more. We see no way to afford these contracts without cuts to city services, which are already inadequate, or further, unfair tax increases."

The next most important area of concern, according to Cousin, is the rolling over of bills from one fiscal year to the next.

"I think the mayor would have us believe this problem is solved," Cousin said. "It isn't solved. Former City Auditor Michael McFarland issued a plan in May to prevent this from happening again at the end of fiscal 2002, but it did happen.

"How and why are we to believe that it won't happen yet again? Granted, the school department — which rolled over $392,000 in bills from fiscal 2002 to 2003 — waited to pay those bills until they got a special appropriation, but that's not the solution. The solution — the only way taxpayers, bond investors and the state can be sure of the city's real financial situation — is for this kind of rollover never to occur at all."

Cousin re-released minutes of School Committee budget subcommittee meetings in which, he said, Phelan participated as a school committee member before being elected mayor.

"These minutes show that Phelan knew about these rollovers before the Quincy Taxpayers' Association publicized them, though he didn't make them an issue until after we did. He's been trying to paint a picture of himself as shocked and surprised at these rollovers when he became mayor, and determined to stop them. The historical record indicates some problems with that picture."

Cousin also reiterated the QTA's concerns about budgetary legerdemain in the past year.

"We had obvious mathematical fudges in the fiscal 2003 budget, such as unprecedented negative numbers in personal services," Cousin said. "We have employees being added to the payroll who were not in the approved budget. We had an unexplained $7.5 million increase in the employee benefits budget. Perhaps worst of all, we have a so-called surplus of $3.4 million, which was actually achieved by adding to the tax rate. That is not a true surplus."

To resolve these issues, Cousin said, the City Council can begin by being more assertive and proactive, taking a harder look at the city's finances and not just raising red flags, but acting on them. More importantly, Cousin said, these issues again highlight the need for a professional, independent finance director.

"We're very glad the mayor wants to hire a finance director," Cousin said, "but we think it's critical that this not be a political appointment by the mayor. It will be a valueless position unless it is a municipal finance professional appointed jointly by the mayor and the council, with a long-term contract, so that he or she can speak the factual truth and act independently."

McCauley May Not Run

Frank McCauley has just started his 30th year in elective office.

And, it may be the final chapter in one of Quincy's most successful political careers.

McCAULEY

McCauley reportedly is thinking of calling it a career and not seek re-election as a councillor at-large this fall.

The former mayor who just turned 73 but hardly looks it, isn't saying whether he will or will not run again.

"You can say I'm weighing my options," he says.

If he decides not to, there will be a scramble for his seat.

McCauley is an historic Quincy political figure.

He is the only person in the city's 114-year history to hold the four elective municipal offices: mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee member.

He's been the winner in 14 elections: four terms as mayor, five as councillor at-large, three as a school committee member and two terms as Ward 1 councillor.

His 30 years of municipal elective service ranks him second in the city's history. The longevity champ: Dr. Nathaniel Hunting who served 36 years, all of them on the school committee.

During his administration as mayor -- 1982-1989 -- McCauley, a former banker, built a reputation of a no-nonsense, penny-pinching chief executive who believed in spending for necessities but balked at unnecessary extras.

He is somewhat like another Republican mayor, Amelio Della Chiesa, for whom he has great admiration.

DELLA CHIESA

City Hall observers who remembered Della Chiesa thought McCauley had even a tighter grip on municipal dollars. He was dubbed "the Jack Benny of Quincy politics" after Benny's tightwad character image.

McCauley also called the shots as he saw them and didn't worry whether it cost him votes as long as he thought he was right.

He is also remembered for his fourth mid-term address in 1989 and his surprise announcement at the conclusion that he would not seek a fifth term, ending with: "Sayonara!"

Since his return to the City Council in 1988, McCauley has taken on the role of fiscal watchdog, keeping close tabs on where the taxpayers' money is going -- and why.

For that reason alone, he will be missed by many if he decides to step down at the end of this year.

Although he isn't saying what he intends to do, there is one sign indicating he won't seek re-election.

One close source notes that McCauley has no plans for fundraisers. At least not at the present time. And you can't run -- and win -- without money to finance an effective campaign.

If McCauley does not run, it will mean two at-large seats that should attract a number of candidates.

Tim Cahill leaves this month to assume new duties as state treasurer.

The other eight councillors will convene to decide who will fill out the year left on his term.

KEENAN

John Keenan, executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets and now executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement Board, was the runner-up in the 2001 city election with an impressive 10,282 votes -- only 801 behind McCauley.

And if past tradition holds, he would appear to be the front runner for the appointment.

But at least two others have been campaigning among the councillors for their vote: Jimmy Liang and Denis Tardo.

LIANG

TARDO

Liang, a Quincy restaurant owner, became the first Asian-American candidate for the city council when he ran that same election. He polled 7,173 votes -- 3,109 behind Keenan.

Tardo, a real estate broker and a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars, was one of nine candidates in the council at-large preliminary election but failed to win a nomination.

Whoever gets to fill the Cahill seat will not be an "elected" incumbent in this year's city election.

That fact, plus McCauley's potential departure, should bring out a large field of candidates.

Two well-known names are believed to be interested in running for councillor at-large, regardless of whether there is an open seat or not.

They are Christine Cedrone, vice chairman of the School Committee and Jo-Ann Bragg, school committee member and past vice chairman. Both have strong vote-getting records.

CEDRONE

BRAGG

Cedrone is up for re-election to the school committee. If she decides to run for the council, it would open up a school seat.

Another potential council candidate is Michael McFarland, school committee member and former city auditor now business manager at Norfolk County Agricultural School. If he runs, that would open a school committee seat.

McFARLAND

Brian McNamee, who is already busy building a campaign fund, says he will either run again in Ward 6 or go for council at-large.

McNAMEE

Another possible candidate: Jennifer Logue, McCauley's daughter, who has her own opinions on issues affecting the city.

And, no doubt, there will be other names popping up in the week's ahead.

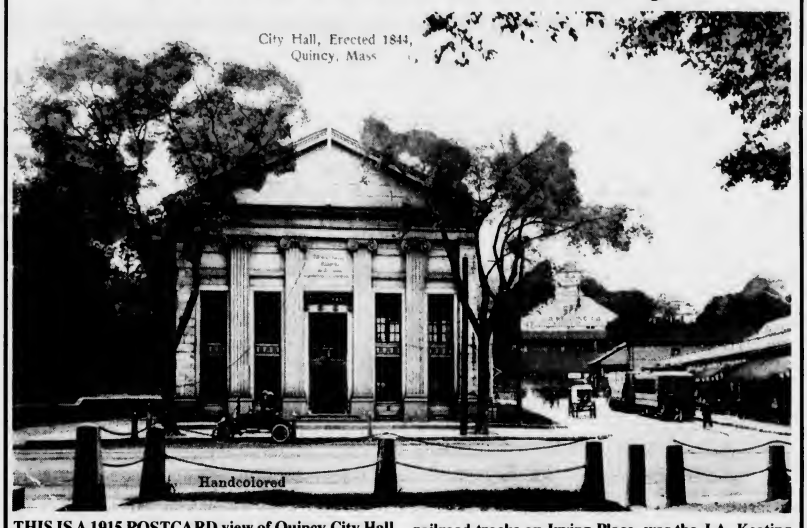
BILL DRAICCHIO, the former "Officer Bill" now a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars, is recuperating and "doing well" at home following surgery last week at Quincy Medical Center.

DRAICCHIO

"He's doing well," reports City Clerk Joseph Shea.

He was popular "Officer Bill" to thousands of pupils at the old Pollard School and St. Joseph's School he crossed then at the busy intersection of Washington St. and Southern Artery in Quincy Point.



Draicchio is also known as the "Candy Man" around City Hall, keeping something like 40 jars of varied candy in the city clerk's office for anyone to dip into.

A speedy recovery, Bill.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 POSTCARD view of Quincy City Hall with a good look down the old Depot Street on the right. Depot Street is now Constitution Plaza and is the temporary site of the new World War II memorial. A plot of grass outside the city clerk's window was later the site of the granite glazing ball presented to the city on its tercentenary by the Granite Manufacturers Association. The ball was moved to the Fore River rotary in 1938. At the end of Depot Street, but actually across the railroad tracks on Irving Place, was the J.A. Keating furniture company located in the Coliseum building. This building was also used for boxing matches and similar events. When it burned down Keating's son-in-law opened the W.G. Shaw Furniture Co. in the buildings that became the Bargain Center. The electric trolleys looped around the Faxon Block on the right to the depot and came back onto Hancock via Saville Street.

Salon Helps Raise Funds For Breast Cancer Detection

The fourth annual "A Thing of Beauty" salon event was held recently. Thirty-five salons from the greater Boston area opened their doors with event day proceeds supporting the early detection of breast cancer.

The beneficiary was the Faulkner-Sagoff Breast Imaging and Diagnostic Centre at Boston's Faulkner Hospital. Breast cancer affects one in eight women and takes more than 45,000 lives annually. But nearly nine of 10 women could survive with early detection.

The staff of A Step Beyond Beauty & DeVicci Salon in Quincy participated in this year's event. This wonderful event has raised nearly $250,000 in four years for the early detection of breast cancer.

The generosity of the participating salons has allowed the Faulkner-Sagoff Centre to purchase computer-aided detection equipment and full-field digital mammography and to continue to provide free mammograms for patients who are uninsured and underinsured.

Since its founding in 1971, the Centre has seen more than 100,000 women. This event has been able to help supply state-of-the-art equipment and support the vital mission of finding breast cancers as early as possible.

During this holiday season, you should be proud to have such giving people in your community. On behalf of all that come to the Faulkner-Sagoff Centre for care, I extend my thanks to A Step Beyond Beauty & DeVicci Salon for this successful fund-raising event.

Norman L. Sadowsky, M.D.

A 'Thank You' From Interfaith Social Services

On behalf of the volunteer staff and clients of Interfaith Social Services, I would like to thank the individuals, faith communities and businesses that supported during the holiday season.

The enormity of your generosity is heart warming. The donations of food, store certificates and presents were overwhelming. There were many who gave the gift of their time by organizing a food drive, helping to stock the shelves and working in the pantry.

To each and everyone, thank you for helping our neighbors in need at the holidays and throughout the year. Best wishes for a healthful, happy new year.

Happy New Year, Quincy

Happy New Year, Quincy. Another year in which all of us stand up and speak out on issues affecting our everyday lives.

Kudos to the staff at The Quincy Sun for keeping us all up to date on what ails Quincy and what makes us better.

Last year (2002) saw the passing of both Paul Harold and Susan Connolly, two great political people. Both passing too soon.

Mayor Bill Phelan has done a good job in his first year as mayor. He isn't perfect but none of us is.

In March, I will be celebrating the 35th anniversary of my first printed newspaper letter (Sunday Advertiser, March 3, 1968).

I'll be writing for as long as I can write.

Best wishes to all in this New Year.

$1.5 Million Sought For Incinerator

This Week
1961
42 Years Ago

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa was planning to ask the City Council to approve a bond issue of nearly $3 million to finance a capital outlay program for the city of Quincy.

"With the bonded debt reduced considerably we are in a better position to undertake such improvements than we have been for some time," said the mayor.

He noted the new issue would bring Quincy's bonded indebtedness to $13,328,500.

Included in his plans were $1.5 million for an incinerator, $500,000 for a new X-ray building at City Hospital, $150,000 for a new branch library in North Quincy, and $300,000 for an enlarged gym at North Quincy High School.

Largest January Commencement

Quincy College Graduates More Than 200

Quincy College's largest ever January Commencement was held in its new venue Saturday -- in the President's Ballroom of the Quincy Marriott.

More than 200 graduates represented the Winter Class of 2003. The graduates, surrounded by family and friends, received Associates in Arts or Science, as well as program certificates in the afternoon program.

Quincy College celebrated its 47th anniversary year during the commencement ceremonies, as well as welcomed four new governors of the college to their first commencement: Simon Chan and Rev. William Harding of Quincy; Barbara Cannon of Hull and Rich Nici of Jamaica Plain, himself a graduate of Quincy College, assisted in the ceremony.

The event was highlighted by a special recognition awarded to City Council President Daniel G. Raymondi by College President Sean L. Barry. Raymondi, also a member of the Quincy College Board of Governors and former chair, was honored for "his decades of tireless advocacy for the college," said Tom De Santes, spokesman for the college.

Also recognized by Barry during the ceremony were adjunct professors Frank Sullivan, Gordon Acha, and James Downy who were honored for their commitment to excellence and presented with awards of appreciation. Sullivan, former Quincy Fire Captain, who was greeted with a lively applause from the audience, was recognized for his work creating the successful Fire Science Technology program and for leading the recent five-year program review.

Acha and Downey, both instructors in the Business Management program, were singled out for their contributions to the campus community as well as for their selfless commitment to their students.

"After a tumultuous year focusing on the future of the College, we thought it appropriate to recognize individuals who have wholeheartedly contributed to the success of the College in leadership both in and out of the classroom," Barry said.

In a light-hearted moment of Barry's address, he answered a call to his cell phone. After the crowd laughed at his obviously staged conversation, he hung up and remarked to the crowd of 600, "Now you know how rude it is when you pull those out in my class."

Quincy attorney Theresa M. Lord-Piatelli, chairperson of the board of governors congratulated graduates on their work, and commended faculty and staff for continued improvements in the institution.

"This college has grown in so many positive directions, we're fortunate to have it here in Quincy and to see the accomplishments of these men and women," Lord-Piatelli said.

College Governor John Farmer assisted in the distribution of degrees, and was acknowledged by Barry for his service to the campus and his financial advice to the executive staff of the college.

Academic Vice President Patricia Gales, of Quincy, presided at the ceremonies, both congratulating and challenging the graduates to embrace the opportunities awaiting them after graduation.

De Santes noted the Massachusetts State Police Color Guard generously volunteered to serve at the ceremony. "We were thrilled by their service, and we hope they will become a part of the tradition of the ceremony. They added a solemn and respectful prelude to our national anthem," he said.

the city in these times of slumping economy.

"The seniors of our community need our help," he said. "They're looking to us in government for solutions. The people who drove the economy and created the standard of living we enjoy today should not bear the burden themselves.

"Unfortunately, many of our seniors are house-rich and cash-poor. As the chair of the Senior Citizens Committee, I made the improvement and expansion of programs and services to the seniors of our community a top priority.

"I established the senior workers abatement program. This program enables senior homeowners to work off a significant portion of their real estate bills. I filed legislation to provide rental protection and tax relief for our seniors.

"We need to expand our senior transportation services. We need to continue to support Quincy Medical Center. A quality medical facility is vital to the quality of life for our seniors. As a city government we need to continue to support senior housing."

Raymondi noted that government is built on a foundation of trust between city officials and employees in which "the promises we make today must be honored next year and every year thereafter."

"As the Council President and on behalf of the City Council, I urge the mayor to keep the promise (made by a previous administration) to increase the death benefit from $7,500 to $10,000," he said.

He also suggested that Mayor Phelan and the Public Works Department do something about the condition of the city's sidewalks and streets, which he called "the most visual representation of local government."

"The sidewalks our children walk to school and the streets we travel to work and to shop need immediate attention," he said.

"Any public works plan must focus on the people who can deliver that service repairing sidewalks, filling potholes in roadways and not on additional layers of management."

Raymondi also proposed a solution to the problem of how much Quincy College should pay the city for the city-owned facilities it uses.

"I propose that the parties develop a process that would result in an agreement as to the fair market value of Coddington Hall and the two houses on Saville Street," he said.

"Once fair market value has been determined, the college would pay a predetermined annual amount until payment of the fair market value is reached; then stewardship of the property is transitioned to the college for its exclusive use in perpetuity without future payments."

He proposed that the first payment be $450,000, the same amount budgeted by the School Committee for Fiscal 2003.

Faced with forecasts of a reduction in local aid, a "significant" decrease in MWRA payments and deferment of many financial obligations, Raymondi proposed two long-range solutions for a more stable economic future.

"In addition to our yearly budget-building process, I propose that the auditor prepare and submit to the City Council a five-year fiscal analysis that would include anticipated revenues and expenditures," he said.

"I am also proposing that the city establish a capital improvement planning committee. This committee would have the responsibility for identifying and prioritizing the capital needs of the city.

"Such a program has many benefits including the enhancement of our credit rating, the stabilization of our tax rate, controlling debt, identifying potential revenue sources, including grants.

"And it focuses attention on community needs in a way that emphasizes priority over politics."

Lest anyone misinterpret his proposals as critical of the city administration, Raymondi noted that even John Adams and Thomas Jefferson disagreed and they helped establish a government that "is a place to not simply exercise government but to examine it."

"You elected us to do that," he said. "We represent the city as a whole and in part. We are duty bound to discuss, dissect, and where appropriate, dissent. The passage of history indicates that sometimes we have done that well, and sometimes not so well.

"To suggest that is not our role is to do a huge disservice to our citizenry."

Family History Mural Adorns Windows At Mignosa's Fruit Basket

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Passersby and customers can receive a small history lesson at Mignosa's Fruit Basket.

Lately, shoppers may have noticed something different about the delicatessen/fruit market, which has been servicing Quincy residents and dedicated patrons for more than 35 years.

Decorating the multiple windows of the 148 Granite St. business is a picturesque winter scene, replete with a small history lesson for those who are interested to know the origin of the three-generation family business.

Last month, owner and manager Bill Mignosa, of 70 Clement Terrace, decided to decorate the front of the business with a window painting. Mignosa asked longtime friend Steven MacDonald of 95 Martinsen St., to come up with a colorful winter scene for the painting. What began as a simple idea blossomed into something entirely different.

After hearing details of the origin of the food market dating back to 1908, MacDonald decided to include the history in his window painting.

MacDonald produced his window painting in three days.

"This has been a family-run business for many years, and we wanted to tell our customers about our family," said Mignosa, who works alongside his wife, Cindy; their daughter, Jennifer; and their son, Jimmy. "Three generations of Mignosas have been involved in this business, and third-generation customers have been coming here as well."

As a result of MacDonald's work, onlookers can view the story of how Mignosa's grandfather, Camello, first came to America on a clipper ship in the early 1900's.

Bill Mignosa told The Quincy Sun that his Sicily-born grandfather was a cabin boy on the clipper ship. His grandfather seized the opportunity to live in America after the captain of the ship lost his wrist watch. Camello found the wrist watch but hid it from the captain. Days later, Camello offered the captain a deal: If the cabin boy could find the watch then the captain would set him free to live in America. MacDonald's window painting depicts the clipper ship docked in New York Harbor.

After moving to Massachusetts, Camello Mignosa opened the first Fruit Basket on 365 W. Broadway in South Boston in 1908. The window painting allows the viewer to see Camello driving the store truck up a snowy hill circa 1908.

BILL MIGNOSA, owner and manager of Mignosa's Fruit Basket, stands in front of the 148 Granite St. location, with a newly adorned painting depicting a family history of the origins of the fruit market/deli. Mignosa is the third generation owner of the popular business.

Camello Mignosa owned and operated the South Boston location for many years, eventually passing it on to his son, Cosmo. The South Boston location was a neighborhood fixture for 90 years until its eventual closing in 1998.

The second generation Mignosa opened Quincy's first Fruit Basket in 1965 on Upland Rd. Eventually, he would move the business to its current Granite St. location in 1969.

A young Bill Mignosa started working for his father in the mid 1960s.

Although Cosmo handed control of the business to his son, the younger Mignosa still thinks of his dad as the boss.

"I call him all the time for advice," Bill said of his father. "I keep him in the loop all the time. As far as I'm concerned he is still in charge. He is the smartest person I know, and also the fairest."

The 90-hour work week is demanding, but Mignosa said his job is very satisfying. "Everyone who comes here is considered family," he said. "Its more of a lifestyle – we know our customers very well and get involved in their personal lives." It is not out of the ordinary for Mignosa to put in a 14-hour workday.

In addition, he said customers who shopped at the Upland Rd. location still frequent his store.

Among his many regular customers are Mayor William Phelan and City Council President Daniel Raymondi. In addition, the Fruit Basket services local businesses and churches, supplying them with food baskets and party platters for special occasions.

Mignosa said he has no intention of removing the window painting anytime soon. On the contrary, he and MacDonald have decided to make it permanent part of the store.

MacDonald said he will make periodic changes to the painting to reflect the change in seasons. Viewers can expect to see blooming flowers, birds, and tree buds in the spring, he said.

THREE FORMER MAYORS, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia and Arthur Tobin, were among those attending Monday's mid-term ceremonies at City Hall. To their right are Tom Stansbury of the Veterans Services Department, who led the Pledge of Allegiance, and Tom Largey, Mayor William Phelan's director of operations. Former Mayor James Sheets was also invited but said he was unable to attend. (Quincy Sun photos/Trish Bossart)

Saying the city was forced to make great sacrifices to puts its fiscal house in order, Phelan outlined his agenda for the second half of his first term.

"Through our combined efforts - doing less with more while striving for excellence – I am happy to report that we begin the new year not under a cloud of deficit, but on a firm fiscal foundation," the mayor said in his address.

"In the past year, many challenges have been overcome," he said. "In the year ahead we will surely face more, with a tough economy and those threatened cuts in state aid. But the people of Quincy should know, together we have made a good start."

Phelan made several proposals during his address:

• The creation of the position of Chief Financial Officer (CFO). Phelan said the CFO will work with all city departments as a means of dealing with budget problems and planning for the future. "You simply cannot make these long-term future investments without a firm grasp of the overall financial health of the city," Phelan said.

• In addition, Phelan said the city must tackle the issue of repairing the streets and sidewalks. He said his administration already has created a "master-plan" designed to improve the roadways and sidewalks. Phelan proposed using a portion of the city's revenues from the Quarry Hills project to fund improvements for the city's roadways and sidewalks.

"When the spring brings warmer weather you'll begin to see the results," Phelan said of his plans.

• Phelan touched upon the future of the former Fore River Shipyard, saying he wants to make sure that the eventual sale of the property meets the city's long term economic, ecological and aesthetic goals. He said he will ensure that the city's best interests are represented when he meets with the state's congressional delegation in Washington, D.C. next week to discuss the sale of the property.

• Phelan said he will urge the state to move forward on the second phase of the Quincy Center Concourse. Phase one – which connects Burgin Parkway to the Parkingway - was completed last month. The concourse was proposed during former Mayor James Sheets' administration.

• Phelan also focused on the need to revitalize Quincy Center, saying he wants to make sure the city's commercial tax base remains strong.

• Phelan said he is also looking at the possibility of developing the Hancock parking lot as a residential-commercial complex. This idea also was first proposed during the Sheets' administration.

• Phelan said he has taken the first steps in creating a downtown cultural center in the city.

• He said he will push the MDC to fund the flood remediation project as a means of remedying the city's flooding problems.

When he first came to office last year Phelan said he was unaware of the depth and breadth of the fiscal problems that were waiting for him at City Hall.

"I promised to be truthful with the people of Quincy," Phelan said. "And the truth is, this administration came to office faced with a budgetary process in unprecedented fiscal disarray."

Phelan said many factors contributed to the city's fiscal problems, including a $2 million budget deficit, underfunded city departments, $4.6 million in unpaid bills rolled over from previous years and overestimated city revenues.

Phelan praised the work done by an accounting firm hired to audit the city's finances. He said the firm's findings have been very helpful in plotting the city's financial status.

"The information we received helped us to meet the enormous challenge of simultaneously balancing the budget deficit we inherited, while working to fully fund our first budget," the mayor said. "We made tough and unpopular decisions. And we put Quincy's financial house in order."

The mayor hailed the City Council, saying the body has supported him on a number of important issues, such as the restructuring of the payment schedule with Quincy Medical Center, the establishment of the Office of Constituent Services, and allowing the renegotiation of a better health insurance program for city employees.

Phelan touted the city's new contract with the developers of the Quarry Hills recreational facility. He said the new agreement guarantees millions of dollars of additional revenue for the city.

In addition, Phelan hailed the work done by his administration in dealing with the city's workforce. He said for the first time in 32 years Quincy's teachers "had a ratified contract when they reported to their classrooms."

"By restoring fiscal stability and establishing a climate of mutual respect, the city is today enjoying an unprecedented labor peace," Phelan said. "We have signed sensible, fair contracts with teachers, police, library workers, and the members of 1130. I again thank our city workers for their dedication and their excellent work under difficult conditions."

FR. WILLIAM McCARTHY, former pastor of St. John's Church, in his benediction at the mid-term ceremonies, called on city officials to work together in harmony for the good of the city. The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church, gave the benediction.

CITY COUNCIL PRESIDENT Daniel Raymondi presents a commendation to City Councillor and former Mayor Francis McCauley, who is starting his 30th year in municipal elective office. McCauley's service is second only to Dr. Nathaniel Hunting, who served 36 years on the school committee.

Don't Let The Cold Keep You From Staying Active

(NAPS) — According to statistics at the Mayo Clinic, more than 65 million Americans suffer from back pain each year, preventing them from enjoying weekend leisure activities. Fortunately, there are steps you can take to help you stay active.

According to David Draper, Ed.D., A.T.C., professor, certified athletic trainer and director of the graduate program in sports medicine/athletic training at Brigham Young University, neck and arm pain is the most common exercise-related pain, which often results from a wide variety of activities including unaccustomed exercise, physically demanding work, and overuse or repetitive use of a muscle or joint.

"Pulled muscles are more likely to occur in the fall and winter months because your muscles tighten and contract in the cold weather," Draper said. "But sometimes sore muscles occur despite taking the right precautions. In these cases, I recommend continuous, low-level heat therapy."

Here are his tips to help you perform at the top of your game:

Stretch your muscles: Not only does stretching improve performance, it helps prevent injuries and improves flexibility. One of the best times to stretch is right after a workout, such as running, skating or skiing. Stretching fatigued muscles immediately following the exercise that caused the fatigue helps enhance the promotion of muscle growth, and will actually help decrease the level of post-exercise soreness.

Treat sore muscles: If stretching didn't do the trick, don't think sore muscles will just go away; beat them to the punch with heat therapy. ThermaCare is an air-activated heat wrap designed to provide at least eight hours of continuous, low-level heat therapy, powerful pain relief and deep muscle relaxation. Once exposed to air, ThermaCare HeatWraps reach a therapeutic temperature of up to 104 degrees within 30 minutes, thereby enhancing the body's natural restorative process.

Eat right: Smaller, more frequent meals are easier to digest and increase your metabolism, helping keep fuel reserves at their peak. Your body can only handle so much food at one time, and the digestive process is much more efficient with smaller quantities of food, making nutrient absorption more complete. Also, it's extremely important to stay hydrated throughout the day, so drink a lot of water.

Dress appropriately: Layer your clothes. Wear tights under sweatpants, and a turtleneck under a sweatshirt with a light jacket. Once your warm up, layers can be removed.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GUARDS AGAINST INJURY

While high school and college football and hockey players have long accepted the requirement that they wear mouth guards to protect their teeth, basketball players have been a bit more reluctant to do so. Now, new research shows that wearing mouth guards significantly reduces basketball players' dental injuries. This finding is based on the researchers' ability to persuade 50 basketball trainers at colleges around the country to provide weekly reports of dental injuries for 20 weeks. About 13 percent of the players wore mouth guards. During the 20 weeks, there were reports of 45 dental injuries, none of which involved players wearing mouth guards. Researchers hope that this evidence provides further impetus for basketball leagues to require mouth guards.

This column on mouth guards has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We would like to increase dental awareness and the importance of regular dental care. We believe that with preventive dental care, daily brushing and flossing, and a well-balanced diet, people can maintain their teeth and gums in good health well into their later years. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. P.S. Custom-fitted mouth guards do not hamper basketball players' ability to speak.

Finals Days To Drop Off Christmas Trees In Quincy Evergreen Program

The Quincy Evergreen Program is celebrating its 14th year by accepting trees for mulch once again.

Quincy residents can drop off their old Christmas trees today (Thursday), Friday and Saturday at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Center, 1 Merrymount Parkway, from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

In exchange for their Christmas trees, residents will receive a coupon entitling them to receive a 10-inch evergreen tree on Saturday, April 26 or Sunday, April 27.

Used gift wrapping paper may also be exchanged for an evergreen coupon.

The Quincy Evergreen Program consists of Mayor William Phelan, Program Chairman Leo Kelly, and Jay Cashman, owner of Jay Cashman, Inc., who has served as the program's sponsor since its inception.

"We would like to welcome Mayor William Phelan to the program, and we thank him for his support," said Kelly.

The program chairman also thanked Cashman and the efforts of the DPW and the Parks and Recreation Department for their help.

The trees are broken down into wood chips and then swapped for mulch, which is then used around the city, thus saving money and landfill space.

Kelly estimated that more than 17,000 trees had been recycled because of the program.

MICROSOFT PROJECT 2000

Projects large or small require a work breakdown structure to optimize planning and scheduling. Most companies are project based and require their associates, contractors, sub-contractors, and even vendors to contractually provide a formal project schedule. Because of the popularity of the Microsoft Office Suite and its integration capability with other software, the common sense approach to project scheduling is to use Microsoft Project 2000. This class takes participants through the creation of the work-breakdown structure, critical path, resource allocation and leveling as well as the tracking process, reporting and printing. Other topics include use of macros, custom filters, grouping, customizing views and forms and creating master projects.

How To Help Keep Your Home Mold And Allergen Free

(NU) Many homeowners are unaware of the harmful levels of allergens and molds in their homes. Molds, dust mites, cat and dog allergens, and cockroach allergens can trigger asthma and allergy symptoms and make your family sick.

Therefore, it's important to eliminate these molds and allergens as much as possible. If you have respiratory problems, allergists say that improving the air quality in your home can make a big difference.

However, a comprehensive home allergen analysis can cost thousands of dollars if performed by an industrial hygienist.

"Testing the home for allergens and molds is an important part of disease management and one that is often overlooked due to the difficulty of testing the home environment," said Dr. Jonathan Bernstein, an allergist and associate professor at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine.

That's why Bernstein recommends Allergen Alert, a kit that tests the levels of the most common indoor allergens and molds in the home. It sells for $99.98 and comes with two allergen collection traps, a video and instructions on how to use the traps to collect dust samples for a professional analysis. The traps attach to your vacuum cleaner, so you simply vacuum the rooms you want to test and then send the collected dust samples to the laboratory in a postage-paid return box.

About two or three weeks later, you'll receive a report detailing the levels of allergens and molds in each room you tested. You'll see if the levels are high, medium or low for each allergen the kit detects.

In the meantime, there are things you can do to help rid your home of allergens. Bernstein and Mike Vogel, director of Healthy Indoor Air for America's Homes, offer these tips.

• Dust your home often. Use a vacuum cleaner with a high efficiency particulate air (HEPA) filter to help keep settled dust from becoming airborne when your vacuum.

• Wash your bedding once a week. Beds tend to harbor dust mites, so wash bedding in temperatures higher than 130 degrees or with a special detergent designed to eliminate dust mites. Placing specially designed covers over mattresses, comforters and pillows also can help.

• Keep humidity low. Mold and allergens thrive in humid areas, so keep indoor relative humidity below 50 percent with air conditioners and dehumidifiers.

• Keep your kitchen clean. Keep food covered in sealed containers. Wash dishes and sweep the floor frequently. Clean places where crumbs can accumulate, such as near the toaster, stove and counter tops. Take out the trash often.

• To control mold, keep your home free of damp areas. Repair leaks and clean your bathtub regularly, as well as sinks and other areas where mold is likely to accumulate.

Help Reduce Slips, Falls In Your Home

By WERNER BRAUN
For News USA

(NU) – It only takes a second to lose your balance, but the consequences could last a lifetime. Slips and falls within the home are the leading cause of injury among children and adults over 65.

For families living with a grandparent or young child, reducing the risk of slips and falls is a primary concern in creating a safe home. According to the Carpet and Rug Institute, the foundation for at-home safety is right underneath your feet: carpet.

The softness and cushioning nature of carpet is ideal for family activity – whether it involves the first steps of a toddler, the deliberate steps of a grandparent, or the hurried steps of a busy adult or teenager.

Carpet provides a stable, non-slip surface. If carpet gets wet, it maintains its ability to create traction and secure footing. Carpet not only reduces the likelihood that a slip will occur, it softens the impact of the fall and its softness reduces the chances of injury. Most carpet has an additional layer of cushioning underneath, further decreasing the chance of bruising or injury.

While decorating, there are simple measures that homeowners can take to reduce the chances of tripping and falling within the home. Choose patterns that do not disguise the edge of steps, height differences and level changes. This is helpful with "sunken" or "raised" rooms.

Another way to reduce the probability of slip and fall injuries is to place rugs or mats by entrances, kitchen sinks and other areas where flooring is most likely to get wet. Rugs and mats will absorb the moisture.

Certain carpet styles, such as shag carpet or carpet with a thick pile height, are more likely to get caught on walkers or shoes, causing tripping and possibly an injury. Level loop or cut pile styles or styles with low pile height will provide all of the benefits of carpet without the risk of tripping.

For more information about carpet, log on to www.carpetrug.com.

Werner Braun is the president of the Carpet and Rug Institute, a trade association for the carpet industry.

Quincy's Defense Excells In 38-35 Win

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Usually, the Quincy High School girls' basketball team relies on its potent offense to win games.

After last Friday's 38-35 win at Whitman-Hanson, it now knows it can turn to its defense when it has the cold hand.

"Defensively we really excelled," said head coach Jeff Bretsch. "It pretty much won the game for us. We won with guts and effort and not so much with our shooting. We missed a lot of shots and easy opportunities. It was a dog fight. It wasn't pretty."

Quincy (5-1 overall, 2-0 Atlantic Coast League) hosted Nauset Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it takes on Sandwich at home. Next week, it travels to Randolph Tuesday and Plymouth North Friday.

"If we can come out of this week with two wins," Bretsch said Tuesday morning, "then we'd be the No. 1 team in the league. The kids are getting excited. They're getting a taste for winning."

Last Monday, Quincy routed Brighton, 52-28, in a non-league game. Junior guard Bonnie Hirtle poured in 18 points and had six steals and center Alysia DiMuzio tallied a double-double with 16 points and 15 rebounds. Senior co-captain Shannon Paine added six points.

In the W-H game, the Presidents held a 16-14 lead at the half and were up by as many as 10 in the second half. But the Panthers, the defending league champs, rallied back to take a one-point lead. Quincy, though, pulled out the win with solid free-throw shooting.

Hirtle and DiMuzio (17 rebounds) each scored 12 points to pace the Presidents and junior guard Sarah Shea chipped in with seven points.

"It certainly feels good to beat the defending league champions," Bretsch said. "It should give us confidence the rest of the way."

One reason for Quincy's strong start this season has been the transformation of DiMuzio from a shy freshman to a fearless sophomore.

DiMuzio has added another dimension to Quincy's offense — a consistent inside game to complement the team's outside shooting. She's averaging 12 points and 15 rebounds.

"Last year we lived and died by the outside shot," Bretsch said. "Now we have a consistent presence down low. She's 5-10 but she plays like she's 6-1. She's so physical, strong and aggressive. She was very timid last year and this year she's come out with confidence."

ANAS MASSAADI, 7, of Quincy recently graduated from Junior Race School at F1 Boston in Braintree, the region's only indoor race track. He is eligible to participate in F1 Boston's Junior Leagues and Practice Sessions.

Key Players Return For Red Raiders

BOYS' BASKETBALL

After a slow start, head coach James Rendle expects his North Quincy High School boys' basketball team to show some progress over the next couple of weeks and for the remainder of the season.

Beginning this week, the Red Raiders will dress a full team for the first time all season. Senior guard Kevin Holleran, who separated his shoulder in the Thanksgiving Day football game, was slated to start Tuesday's game at Barnstable.

Last Friday, junior power forward Brandon Neves, who had been out with an ankle sprain, played several minutes in a 48-42 loss to Bridgewater-Raynham at home and will receive more playing time this week.

"We'll have a full team for the first time all year," Rendle said Tuesday morning. "I expect us to make a little noise now. I'm looking for the fruits of our labor to show the next couple of weeks."

Holleran's return strengthens the backcourt as freshman Kyle Costa and junior Jimmy Burke have been logging many minutes.

"They're playing a lot of time at the guard position," Rendle said. "With Kevin back, they'll have little more of a breather and the position will be more productive."

North Quincy (2-5 overall, 1-2 Old Colony League) hosts Plymouth South tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30. Next week, it travels to Silver Lake Tuesday and Marshfield Friday.

In the B-R game, North Quincy stumbled out of the gate and quickly fell behind, 14-2, as the Trojans buried three 3-pointers.

"They came out hot as a pistol," Rendle said.

North Quincy — which was also playing without its second leading scorer, junior Adam Smith (broken nose) — fought back and pulled within 20-19 at halftime. A close game in the second half, the Trojans hit their foul shots at the end to hold on to the win.

"I was pretty pleased with our effort," Rendle said. "We were minus a couple of players. We've been working hard. We haven't quit in any games."

Junior Darryl Costa scored a team-high 16 points and senior center Sean Bowes scored eight points to go along with four blocks and eight rebounds.

'Generous' North Quincy Falls To B-R, 57-52

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team has been very generous this holiday season.

After spotting Quincy a 12-1 lead in their 45-40 win Dec. 23, the Red Raiders felt even more charitable last Friday night at Bridgewater-Raynham.

A match-up pitting the defending Old Colony League co-champions, North Quincy knitted B-R, the league's powerhouse this season, a 17-0 cushion to start the game.

Subsequently, North Quincy spent too much time and energy playing catch-up the rest of the night and eventually fell, 57-52.

"We couldn't do anything right," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "They came out with aggressive defense and completely took us out of our offensive schemes. It was very depressing for a while."

North Quincy (3-3 overall, 2-1 OCL) hosted Barnstable Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it travels to Plymouth South.

"We're right there," MacFarlane said. "We're playing great defense. Offensively, we're having trouble putting the ball in the basket. But we knew that before the season started. There are a couple of humps we have to get over."

Against the Trojans, the Red Raiders cut the deficit to 28-21 at the half behind nine points from senior quad-captain and forward Kristen DiMattio.

"We called a couple of timeouts to right the ship," MacFarlane said. "When we settled down we played very well."

In the second half, senior quad-captain April Suprey, the team's leading scorer with 17.5 points per game, heated up, scoring 15 of her 17 points to continue North Quincy's rally.

The Red Raiders did grab a 48-47 lead with about five minutes left to play but did not have enough to complete the comeback. Junior guard Beth Goodrich turned in a strong game with 11 points.

"The kids don't quit," MacFarlane said. "I'm proud of them. They easily could have folded the tents. They played their hearts out. If you can call a loss a quality loss, this was it."

Raiders Boys' Basketball Play Alumni Saturday

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team will take on an alumni team Saturday night at 7:30 at the high school gym.

The varsity team is coached by Jim Rendle and Scott Madden and the alumni team will be led by Ted Stevenson and Ed Miller.

Player's fee is $10, which includes a T-shirt. General admission is $2 and children under 12 are free. There will be a concession stand and 50/50 raffle.

Those interested in playing are asked to contact either Jim Rendle (617-984-8748 or 617-773-8522), Peter Johnson (617-471-0973) or Kevin Worley (617-328-5369).

Presidents Start Year With Win Over W-H

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Exchanging losses and wins, the Quincy High School boys' basketball team is right in the middle of things through six games this season.

Coming off four straight non-league games on the road, the Presidents kicked off the New Year last Friday night with a 55-49 home victory over Whitman-Hanson.

"The difference in the game was we were able to sustain our defense throughout the game," said head coach John Franceschini. "We used 13 kids and played a full-court game."

With the win, Quincy (3-3 overall) evened its record to 1-1 in the Atlantic Coast League — the first loss a 56-52 overtime heart-breaker to Dennis-Yarmouth to open the season.

And now Quincy embarks on an important stretch of league competition. The Presidents headed to Nauset Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 they travel

ONE EYE ON THE RATINGS

A battery's cold-cranking rating is the one that matters most on cold mornings. It defines a battery's ability to start an engine in cold temperatures. The rating is the number of amps that a new, fully charged 12-volt battery can deliver at 0 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 seconds while maintaining a voltage of at least 7.2 volts. On the other hand, the reserve capacity rating will help you in an emergency. It defines how long the battery will power a vehicle with an inoperative fan belt or alternator. The rating is the number of minutes a battery at 80 degrees F. can be discharged at 25 amps and maintain a voltage of 10.5 volts for a 12-volt battery.

Colder weather is here. Make sure your battery can handle it. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. If you need us to look at any system in your car or truck, our ASE Certified service technicians have the skills to handle it. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. You'll find us located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: The higher the cold-cranking amp rating, the greater the starting power of the battery. The higher the reserve capacity rating, the longer the vehicle can operate should the alternator or fan belt fail.

to Sandwich. Next week, they host Randolph Tuesday and Plymouth North Friday.

"We've made it through a tough part of the schedule with those non-league games," Franceschini said. "Hold the kids if we could be 3 and 3 or better, we'd be in pretty good shape."

Trailing the Panthers, 31-25, at the half, Quincy increased its defensive pressure in the second half which led to easy scoring chances and a higher shooting percentage. With about six minutes left to play, Quincy tied the score at 41-all and never looked back.

"We were down at the half and what got us going in the second half was we were able to wear them down with our defense and shoot better," Franceschini said. "For the most part, we've held teams around the 50-point mark. It's a prime example of our defense helping our offense."

Senior Kevin O'Connell led the team with 14 points, senior Anthony Boyle added 13 and senior Matt Ramponi chipped in 10. Senior Craig Keenan also stood out with eight points and six steals.

"Craig Keenan played an absolute great effort game on both ends of the floor," Franceschini said. "We had nice balanced scoring throughout. We got a lot of quality minutes from our bench."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said that the greatest needs for a vast number of churchgoers is not more spiritual food but more spiritual exercise. . . Millions of people attend church every Sunday, listen to the most commendable sentiments expressed from the pulpit, give silent, or audible consent, and then leave the church and do not do anything about the truth they have listened to and approved.

As Jesus sent out his disciples He said to them: "As ye go, preach..." Only a comparatively few people are ordained to the preaching ministry, but every Christian believer is supposed to preach. Not necessarily, of course, by gathering a group of people around him and addressing a sermon to them, but rather by his way of life preaching Christian faith, joy, and fellowship.

A man's actions and attitude constitute the most effective sermon he can deliver. Yes, the greatest sermon a man ever preachers, whether he be a minister or a layman, consists not of the word he utters, but the life he lives.

Couldn't it be said that if the lives we lead have serious flaws, these flaws are sermons also, and they reflect very little credit upon us and do little good to others? . . Emerson was right when he said that what we are speakers louder than what we say. . .

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Shutting people out to avoid distractions, even under a deadline, can cause hurt feelings. Instead, return calls and e-mails and explain why you need a zone of privacy for now.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Although your keen Bull's eyes can usually discern what's fact from what's faux, that upcoming decision will need really solid data before you can risk a commitment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) As your confidence grows, you should be able to work toward your goals with more enthusiasm. Open your mind to suggestions. Some of them might even work for you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Reconnecting with someone from your past stirs up that old sense of adventure. But before you do anything else, be sure to get answers to those still-lingering questions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some people might resent the way you plan to resolve a difficult situation. But your commitment to making tough but fair decisions soon wins you their respect and support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Mixed signals could be causing that vexing workplace problem. Before you choose to leave the project, ask for a meeting where you can get things out in the open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your good intentions could backfire if you're not careful with other people's feelings. Try using persuasion, not pressure, to get others to see your side of the situation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your dedication to finishing the task at hand is laudable. But be careful not to overdo the midnight oil bit. Take time for relaxation with someone very special.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although your intuition will help you make some tough choices in the first half of the month, you'll need more facts to back up your actions later on.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) All that hard work and research in the workplace finally pays off as you hoped it would. Ignore comments from jealous types who are out to get the Goat riled up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unfair decision creates unnecessary problems. But avoid anger and move carefully as you work this out. Expect to get support from an unlikely source.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A fuzzy financial vista persists until midmonth, when things begin to clear up. You'll also gain a better perspective on how to handle those pesky personal problems.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful way of being there for those who need your help in difficult times.

concerned about whether the Commonwealth will be able to follow through on its commitment to reimbursing the city at a 90 percent rate for the construction of a new high school. City officials should be cautious with their expectations because the state is facing a tough fiscal environment, he said.

"Given the present budget constraints, will the state be able to reimburse cities and towns at a 90 percent rate?" he asked.

Cities and towns that have been approved for state reimbursements sometimes wait six to eight years for their portion of the pie, Morrissey said. Since Quincy has not completed the application process the wait could be even longer, he said.

The state's fiscal situation remains uncertain in the near term, so it is difficult to predict whether the 90 percent reimbursement will be available, he said.

Morrissey said impending cuts in local aid will put the city in a difficult situation.

"The city could see cuts of up to 20 percent in local aid from the state this year," he said. "This translates into cuts of four to nine million dollars. This is going to be the most difficult time in state and local government in the past 25 years."

Cedrone blasted Phelan for not mentioning the Quincy High School issue in his speech.

"The mayor had a great opportunity to show the people he is supportive of building a new Quincy High School," said Cedrone. "Instead, he didn't mention a word about it. This is an insult to the people who have put in so much time and effort toward building the new school."

Cedrone said if the mayor does not move on this issue the city could lose its 90 percent reimbursement from the state. "The construction of the high school is so far away as it is, and the longer we wait the more difficult it will be for the state to reimburse us. We may not get this opportunity again," she said. "It saddens me because it appears that this issue is falling apart."

Bragg, school committee member, said the mayor's speech was a mixed bag. She said Phelan needed to be more specific on how he plans to balance the needs of the school department with impending cuts in local aid.

"The mayor can point to a number of accomplishments during his first year in office, but he needs to be more specific on how he intends to solve other problems. This year could prove to be more difficult than last year," said Bragg.

Specifically, she wants to know how Mayor Phelan intends to honor the school teachers' contract, which calls for pay raises this year.

"The Mayor talked about level funding in the school departments, and I want to know how he will reconcile that idea and honor the teachers' contract," said Bragg.

She echoed Cedone's sentiments regarding a new Quincy High School : "I wanted to hear about his (Phelan) commitment to Quincy High School, and I didn't hear it," said Bragg.

Bragg said she is hearing ominous words from state officials with regard to local aid, and she wants to know how the mayor intends to address the issue. "I was glad to hear that he reaffirmed his commitment to public safety and education, but we need specifics on how he intends to do it with cuts in local aid."

In November 2002, Mayor Phelan said the city was "on track" to receive the 90 percent reimbursement for a new high school.

"The plans to build it are on schedule," Phelan said at the time.

In other reaction to Phelan's address:

Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3 councillor, regarding the tone of the mayor's speech: "Overall, the speech was balanced," said Coughlin. "Initially, I was concerned that the mayor was simply rehashing some of the city's foibles of the past. This was a very difficult year. It is important that we stress the positive and try to be optimistic for the future."

Coughlin said it is important for Phelan and the City Council to concentrate on addressing the "bread and butter" issues, such as repairing the city's roadways and sidewalks.

Marilyn Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, regarding development of the Hancock parking lot andextension of the concourse as Phelan goals: "We are glad the mayor is keeping Quincy Center on his radar scope."

Ron Cogliano, community development manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce: "I thought the mayor did a good job with his speech. He was very positive about the future. It looks like he has a good plan to help stabilize the city's financial problems. Initially, it looked like there would be some rough sailing for the city, but the mayor has made some moves that have turned out to be pretty good fiscal management." To his credit Mayor Plelan has righted the ship, and I'm sure he will do everything he can to lessen the blow in the upcoming year."

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

• Continued a hearing regarding Dunkin' Donuts, 366 Center St., for permission to open 24 hours a day, pending a neighborhood meeting as requested by Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly.

• Continued a hearing from Thomas F. Tuffo, doing business as Cafe Baldaria for an all alcoholic common victualer and entertainment license at 247 Quincy Ave. pending plans and meeting with the Zoning Board. The alcoholic license was purchased by Tuffo from the Quincy Brewing Co., of Southern Artery, which closed last summer and had filed bankruptcy. The meeting will be held on or before March 4.

Tuffo is planning to rent half the building which was formerly the bike shop for an Italian restaurant.

• Granted a change of managers from Gerard Mallgraf Jr. to David B. Gill.

For Three National Guardsmen

Quincy's City Flag Going To Afghanistan

Quincy's city flag will join the American flag in Afghanistan.

Mayor William Phelan is sending the flag on behalf of the city and the Quincy families of three National Guardsmen stationed there.

Phelan met with the families in his office Monday where he and they signed the flag which shows the city seal. Phelan said he will have it sent to the guardsmen in Afghanistan.

"I hope they fly this flag proudly," Phelan told the families.

All three men are members of the Military Police with the Army National Guard from Quincy.

The meeting was attended by the parents of Michael Eastwick, 33, a Military Police sergeant with the National Guard. Eastwick's parents, Frances and David Eastwick of Chickatabot Rd., said their son has been in Afghanistan for six months.

Also in attendance were the parents of Daniel Parisi, 25, who was been in the National Guard for seven years. His parents, Enrico and Mary Parisi of Wilson Ave., said their son has been stationed there for six months.

"I am very proud of my son," said Dottie Standrick, whose son, Frederick, 26, is stationed there also.

Standrick said her son has been in Afghanistan for approximately eight months. He has been part of the Army National Guard for six years, she said.

Acting On Raymondi Proposal

Committee Named To Solve College Rental Dispute

By TOM HENSHAW

Both sides in the long impasse over rental payments by Quincy College to the Quincy Schools have agreed to form a subcommittee to consider a solution proposed by City Council President Daniel Raymondi.

Raymondi proposed in a mid-term address that the School Committee and the college determine a fair market value for the property, then work out a schedule of modest payments, ultimately resolving the disagreement.

The first year payment would cover the $450,000, up from $217,000, budgeted by the School Department for the current year. Subsequent payments would be made until fair market value is reached, at which point the property would be transferred to the college.

"We see great potential in the solution because it provides a healthy revenue source to the schools while it pays the value of the buildings," said Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chair of the Board of Governors of the college.

"It has an end in sight and both sides can plan accordingly. Best of all, it proves that cooperation can creatively resolve a matter with the benefit being shared by our schools and our college."

Lord-Piatelli has appointed herself, Governor John Farmer and Raymondi, who is also a governor, to represent the board in negotiations with the School Committee.

"John Farmer's longstanding experience in banking and finance will greatly assist us," said Lord-Piatelli. "We're working closely with College President Sean Barry for the necessary insight and administrative concerns.

"What we hope to accomplish here is an agreement that allows for both the School Department and the college to thrive in the coming years as well as to assure the college that it will continue well beyond this, its 47th year."

Christine Cedrone, vice chair of the School Committee, has named members Michael McFarland, Joanne Bragg and Evelyn Dwyer to represent the School Committee in the negotiations.

"We're encouraged by this potential solution," said Cedrone. "I have every confidence that the School Committee and college can work together to resolve this issue."

Barry said that, in addition to the monthly install-

Romney Cuts Could Cost City $2M In State Aid

The draconian cuts in the state budget for the fourth quarter of the current fiscal year projected by Gov. Mitt Romney could cost the city of Quincy a worst case figure of $2 million in local aid.

"It would be devastating," said Mayor William Phelan, noting that the city derives 22 per cent of its annual operating budget from the state in some form of local aid.

Romney had been governor for little more than a week when he laid out his gloom and doom predictions of state budget cuts to a meeting of the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

Phelan pointed out that the governor's estimate of a possible $450 million to $600 million state budget deficit for the current fiscal year, which is only half over, are far from final.

"When he gave the speech he was still working on the figures to see if they were accurate," he said. "Then he would have to go to the Legislature for permission to cut local aid."

Most municipal budgets are constructed on the certainty of their local aid figure, which the governor is prohibited by law from changing in mid-stream, unless the Legislature allows it.

"When he makes a final determination and asks the Legislature to let him trim local aid, then it's time to worry," said Phelan.

"I understand we are in this together — the state, the city and the whole country. Some sacrifices will have to me made."

City Already $100,000 Over Budget For Snow Removal

The city of Quincy is already $100,000 over budget in snow removal expenses, according to Mayor William Phelan — with the two months of usually heaviest snowfall still to come.

It is customary for a community, which has no idea how much snow is going to fall, to insert a token figure in the municipal budget and make up the deficit in the next fiscal year.

Quincy budgeted $300,000 for snow removal in the Fiscal 2003 budget and the early winter months have brought more snow than normal to the city.

Most of the snow removal is done by outside contractors who are hired, along with their equipment, on a storm by storm basis.

Cahill Plans Busy First Day In Treasurer's Office

By TOM HENSHAW

Tim Cahill is planning a busy first day at the office.

The 44-year-old Quincy man was to be sworn in as state treasurer by Gov. Mitt Romney yesterday (Wednesday) at 1:30 p.m. in State House ceremonies presided over by House Speaker Tom Finneran in the House Chamber.

A reception was to follow in the Nurses' Hall on the second floor of the State House.

TIM CAHILL

After that, it's back to work presiding over a 600 person staff, including 400 employees in the state lottery, and contributing his bit to the solution of the state's fiscal problems which include a budget shortfall in the millions and a possible $3 billion deficit in Fiscal 2004.

"My first priority is to help the governor and the legislature to solve the fiscal crisis," he said. "Then my focus will be on lottery revenue to fill the gap in local aid and try to regain value in the state pension fund."

Cahill said he plans to take on all three priorities simultaneously when he sits at the treasurer's desk officially for the first time today.

"My priority will be on the cash crisis," he said. "I plan to work closely with the governor's financial staff and the legislature."

He might even look favorably on casino gambling in Massachusetts.

"The challenge is on the table for legalized gambling," he said. "I'm what you might call an agnostic on casinos. If it helps and does not adversely affect the lottery, I'm in favor of it but I'm not going to push it."

Cahill has already spoken to Gov. Romney and Speaker Finneran but the meetings were social rather than business.

"We didn't talk about specific ideas," he said. "They were more social meetings. I hope I can begin talking about my ideas again when I'm sworn in."

And one more thing — his seat on the City Council.

"Next Tuesday will be my last meeting," he said. "I'll resign the seat possibly the next day. I'll work out the details with the city clerk, Joe Shea."

"I haven't talked to Tim about his resignation," said City Council President Daniel Raymondi. "I don't know what we will do to pick a successor. I'll have to talk to my colleagues on the Council first."

Broken Water Main Leaves 200 Homes Without Water

An estimated 200 homes in the Germantown area were without water at varying times Tuesday after a 10-inch water main burst on Palmer St.

The water main break occurred at approximately 4 a.m. and forced school officials to close the Snug Harbor School for Tuesday's half-day session. Officials said the school had no heat or water on Tuesday morning.

George Clark, superintendent of the Sewer, Water and Drain Department, said water pressure was restored to 100 homes Tuesday morning but another hundred homes were still without adequate pressure in the afternoon.

Clark said a six-man crew was dispatched to the area and was prepared to work into the evening to repair the broken water main, which is located near the intersection of Palmer St. and Bowes Ave. He said the burst water main had caused significant water damage to the surrounding street pavement.

Snug Harbor School Principal Allan Osbourne said the school would be open on Wednesday barring any unforeseen situation.

Assistant Principal Robert Limoncelli said Snug Harbor school teachers were sent to other schools to work while city employees fixed the water main.

Phelan To Hold Thursday Office Hours For Residents

Mayor William Phelan will be available Thursdays between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m. beginning Jan. 30 to meet with residents wishing to discuss issues of concern.

"It is critical that any citizen who wants to be heard is afforded that opportunity," Phelan said. "I look forward to meeting with folks who take the time to come to City Hall to hear their concerns or ideas."

Residents may go to the mayor's office at City Hall and express their concerns directly to him.

Laurie Allen, executive secretary to the mayor, stressed that residents may continue to contact the mayor, members of his staff or city employees by telephone, letter, fax or email on the city's newly-expanded website. "This is another way in which the mayor is making city government more accessible to the people," said Allen.

Although no appointment is required to meet with Phelan, Allen suggest that residents check the city's website to be sure that inclement weather or unforeseen events have not affected the scheduled office hours.

Quincy's State Delegation To Forego Pay Raises

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Citing a floundering economy and the need to share in sacrifice, Quincy's state lawmakers said they will refuse a 6.5 percent pay hike this year.

Senator Michael Morrissey was one of 49 senators who voted not to accept the pay raise.

Representatives Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Stephen Tobin said they will forego the pay hike after House Speaker Thomas Finneran left it up to each representative to decide for his or her self.

The pay raises would increase the base salary of state legislators 6.5 percent, from $50,123 to $53,381.

Morrissey said it is important for lawmakers to set an example by refusing the pay hikes.

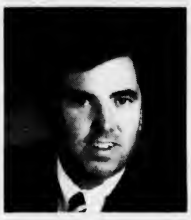
"People are losing their jobs and others are really struggling, so I think it is important for legislators to take the lead on this issue," said Morrissey. "We want to send a message to the people that we understand their situation and will go through this together."

The city's representatives agreed.

"It is very difficult for me to accept the pay raise at this time," said Mariano. "There will be pain felt throughout the entire state, such as layoffs and cuts in state services. Although this is largely a symbolic gesture it needs to be done."

Tobin said he will not accept the pay hike.

"The timing of this issue is very unfortunate," said Tobin. "We didn't ask for this pay raise and I feel very uncomfortable accepting it. Given the state of the economy I will not accept it."



Ayers echoed Tobin's sentiments, saying the state's fiscal situation precludes him from accepting the pay raise. "I feel if we are participating in the process we should be participating in the pay cuts," said Ayers. "We are facing tough economic times where we all have to work through this financial crisis."

In 1998 voters approved a Constitutional amendment which adjusts lawmakers' pay up or down every two years according to changes in the state's median household income.

The amendment mandates the governor to determine how much the household income has changed the past two years.

Gov. Mitt Romney recently said the state's household income increased 6.5 percent between January 2001 and December 2002.

Morrissey said the 1998 Constitutional amendment does not mandate legislators to take the pay raise. "As much as we'd like to follow the Constitution I think it is important to waive the pay raise, in light of the present financial difficulties."

City Reaches Agreement With Library Union

Mayor William Phelan announces the city has signed a Memorandum of Agreement with the membership of the Library Union, which was ratified Jan. 8.

The union ratified a four-year contract during this process, which is valid from July 1, 2002 through June 30, 2006. The first wage increase is 1 percent effective Nov. 15, 2002. Phelan said this is a significant benefit to the city in that the increase is for less than a full fiscal year due to the fact that the increase was not retroactive to the start of the contract.

It also includes several staggered increases between Dec. 1, 2003 and June 30, 2006, totaling 14 percent. The overall success of this contract rests in the long-term planning outlook that both parties took during negotiations, Phelan said.

The staggered dates and incremental increases over the four-year period makes any increases per fiscal year less costly to the city's budget than a full increase would be, Phelan said.

"I was particularly impressed with the professionalism and cooperation that both negotiating teams demonstrated," Phelan said. "The union membership worked very hard with the city to ensure a four-year agreement that benefits both the city and the library employees."

Part of the benefit to the library employees was the agreement that appropriate emergency signal devices be initiated and located in various places throughout the library, Phelan noted. This will enhance the public safety of the library employees as well as patrons, he said.

Also in this agreement, the language used to describe the policy of recall procedure was refined and Sunday part-time labor was excluded from the overtime requirement.

No Salary Nothing New

When Gov. Mitt Romney and Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey announced they were not going to take their salary it got a big play in the media.

Like it was a political "first."

But foregoing a public office salary is nothing new. It actually happened here a quarter century ago.

A. TOBIN

That was when Arthur Tobin took office as mayor in January, 1978 and declined his $25,000 salary.

Like today, the city was going through tough fiscal times and Proposition 2 1/2 was taking effect.

But Tobin's check technically had to be cut, it was ruled, and withholding taxes were taken out of it.

But the net figure did not go to staff salary increases like Romney's and Healey's salaries are.

Instead, it went into a special account and was distributed to worthy causes such as someone needing financial help after having been burned out of their house, youth organizations like the Little League, people needing a temporary helping hand, various charitable and non-profit groups.

S. TOBIN

Tobin, now clerk magistrate at Quincy District Court, may be Quincy's only mayor to decline his salary.

Coincidentally, 25 years later, his son, state Rep. Steve Tobin, is among legislators declining this year's pay raise called for under a state Constitutional amendment.

FORMER SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN Charles Sweeny appears to be the front-runner to succeed the late Richard Hart on the Quincy College Board of Governors.

SWEENY

Hart, former vice president and treasurer of Dunkin Donuts who was active in the community, died last May.

The college's six-member Appointing Council will meet tonight (Thursday) to fill the vacancy.

Member Daniel Raymondi says he will nominate Sweeny, a nomination he feels most appropriate.

RAYMONDI

Sweeny was a co-founder of the college as a member of College Courses, Inc., its predecessor and in which he is still active and helping the college.

"Having Charlie succeed Dick Hart would be a fitting tribute to both," says Raymondi. "The college was important to Dick and has been to Charlie from day one.

"Charlie Sweeny has been dedicated to Quincy College since the beginning and to education all his life."

Sweeny is a graduate of Dartmouth College, a Purple Heart Army veteran of World War II, retired VA contact officer, and presently a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars.

The Appointing Council members, in addition to Raymondi, are Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairman of the Board of Governors and member Geraldin Lewis, School Committee members Michael McFarland and Elaine Dwyer and Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton.

It would seem Sweeny would have some strong support among them.

College President Sean Barry doesn't have a vote on this but he has an opinion.

BARRY

"I think Charlie Sweeny would make an outstanding selection," he says. "He has been one of the college's biggest boosters. He would be a real asset to both the college and Board of Governors."

The college has done a heap of growing since it opened its doors in September, 1958 with an enrollment of 35 students. And Sweeny has been there with it all the way.

Today's enrollment is 4,600 -- on two campuses -- Quincy and Plymouth.

Charlie Sweeny's role as a co-founder with continuing interest and still an active member of College Courses, Inc. helped to bring that about.

He'd get our vote.

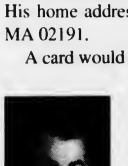
He underwent surgery Monday and is expected to be home shortly, reports Lionel (Shine) Buckley, one of his former players.

SULLIVAN

Sullivan, now 89, has been ill but hasn't let it keep him from QHS alumni sports get-togethers which are sentimental to him and his former players.

He was the line coach and right arm to the also legendary coach Munroe MacLean from 1939 to 1951 at QHS. And took over as head coach in 1952, retiring in 1959.



Members of the Quincy High School Alumni Benefit Fund honored him two years ago, retiring the No. 15 he wore as an all-scholastic football star in the late 1920s.

And he was there last October to help honor the memory of his good friend, Munroe MacLean, when the same group retired the latter's No. 1.

Buckley says Sully, as he is affectionately known, would like to hear from some of his former players. At this writing he is in room A 340 at the Medical Center. His home address is: 55 Thompson St., Weymouth, MA 02191.

A card would mean a lot.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view of the new Quincy Senior High School on Coddington Street when it opened in September, 1924. It featured a 1500-seat auditorium, a gym that held two classes at once, a cafeteria large enough for half the students and a large modern library. Next door, Faxon Field, then a swamp, was being filled in to build athletic fields. This new complex was a welcome addition to the city, which at that time was faced with a burgeoning school population. Citywide each teacher had an average class of 39 pupils with many exceeding 50. In the early 1920s, the School Committee had adopted the three-year junior-high system to help solve the problem. Within a five-year period four new upper grade schools were built. The new three-year senior high school above was first, at a cost of $1.068 million. This allowed the old high school on Hancock Street to become Central, the first three-year junior high. Then in 1927 the new North and South Junior Highs were opened at a cost of $500,000 each. Point Junior High followed in 1928 as an addition to the Daniel Webster grammar school. All the overcrowded eight-year grammar schools were then allowed to operate with just six grades, although, to handle the growth, additions and new buildings were also being put up for those grades. It's interesting to note that during this period the school system had almost 600 foreign-born students in an Americanization program to teach them English and civic responsibility.

City Has Never Shown New QHS Best Solution

Mayor Phelan was absolutely right to omit a new Quincy High School from his mid-term address.

City officials have pushed for a new high school since 1997, but have never shown that it is the best solution for our school building needs. The School Building Needs Task Force recommendations of November, 1997 are a superficial effort at best.

A report on renovating and reusing QHS in its current use, issued in 2001 by Cole and Goyette, is not convincing, because it is written by -- guess who? -- the firm charged with planning and designing the new high school! These are the only documents the city has to show that it has considered all the options and alternatives, as required by Mass. Department of Education regulations for school building assistance. If the DOE were to do its job, it would deny the city's application for funding.

The mayor rightly calls for a new chief financial officer for the city, and not until we have one can we go forward with a new high school. Even if we were to apply for funding and be approved, reimbursement might not come for eight years; there would be enormous costs for taxpayers to bear in the meantime. There would also be costs that are not reimburseable, which no one has bothered to add up for us.

It appears that city officials don't know, and don't want to know, how much this project will really cost. Certainly no one knows, or wants to know, how much any of the alternatives would cost. So how do we know a new high school is the best solution?

The problem isn't specific to siting considerations. Yes, building at Faxon Field would cost a lot for site remediation, but building at the current Department of Public Works site would entail site remediation, preparation, and replacement costs as well. How much would this take out of taxpayers' pockets?

The mayor wisely didn't close the door on a new high school, but intelligently stepped back from it. Perhaps it is the best solution. But if so, let someone prove it with more than hype and sentiment. If they can't, or won't, the project should not go forward.

A Beautiful Victory

It seems appropriate at Christmas time to recall what Reverend Friedrich Riesendorf, a German Protestant clergyman, recorded about the Serbs in the year 1945.

"The Russians, the Americans and the British won the war. It was an explicit material victory, while the Serbs won another much more beautiful victory: a victory of honesty, a victory of peace, a victory of the heart and Christian love. When the wires of the prisoner of war camps were torn down, 5,000 living skeletons came out. We truly expected that those living skeletons would revenge. Instead, they caressed our children.

"Only now we understand why our greatest poet, Goethe, studied the Serbian language. Only now we can comprehend why the last word of Bismark, on his deathbed, was — Serbia."

Deegan Resignation Stuns Dinner Party

This Week

By TOM HENSHAW

William J. Deegan Jr. stunned a dinner party at the Neighborhood Club that included five city councillors by announcing his resignation from the $16,000 a year post of city manager.

Deegan, the first city manager appointed after Quincy adopted the Plan E form of government in 1950, had served five years and 11 days. His resignation would be effective Feb. 21.

Deegan said he planned to go to work for the Agnew Foundation for Municipal Research to develop the idea of building schools with private capital and leasing them to municipalities.

CITY UNIONS NEEDED

Kenneth J. Kelly, legislative agent for the State AFL, told the annual banquet of the Quincy Firefighters Association that unions are now a necessity for public employees.

"I only wish school teachers and other city workers would take a page from the Firefighters Association's book and attempt unionizing. It would help their economic lot," said Kelly.

"I have seen at the State House an effective organization of other groups, such as the taxpayers, selectmen, chambers of commerce, tending to stifle the legitimate aspirations of city workers."

QUINCY TAKES CITY CROWN

The line of Dave Wong, Ralph Younie and Ed Mattie accounted for four goals as the Quincy High School hockey team defeated North Quincy, 5-3, for the city title.

Asparagus, Cheddar Calzone

It was our granddaughter Sophia's fifth birthday and she is one of those children that loves vegetables...all of them from broccoli on.

And so I decided to make her a veggie calzone with asparagus. (Also a favorite of our grandson John who lives in New York, but was here that day.) Mixing it with some cheddar cheese made it even more tasty. I have to admit that I rarely make the dough anymore as the supermarkets sell it by the pound and I think it is just as good as homemade. This way, I always have some dough in the freezer and when I want to make a pizza or calzone it takes a short time to defrost it.

In the following recipe, I used some fresh asparagus, about a half bunch and a can of long asparagus spears. I cooked the asparagus just until it got tender.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

Asparagus, Cheddar Calzone
Fresh asparagus
1 can of long stemmed asparagus
1/2 cup shredded cheddar (or a favorite cheese)
1 package of dough
corn meal for cookie sheet
1 egg for egg wash

Cook the asparagus. Set aside. Roll out the dough as you would a pizza. What I usually do is layer first the cheese, then the asparagus and then top it with the rest of the cheese. Roll the dough carefully and tuck in the sides. Place on a cookie sheet after sprinkling corn meal on the bottom so the calzone doesn't stick.

Brush the calzone with the beaten egg.

Bake for 30 minutes or until top is browned. As soon as it comes out of the oven, free it with a spatula and cut it when cooled.

P.S. This can also be made with just the canned asparagus.

Kao T. Li Named First Executive Director At Quincy Asian Resources

The Quincy Asian Resources, Inc board of directors has hired Kao T. Li as the agency's first executive director.

"We are extremely excited to have Kao has our executive director," said Tackey Chan, board president. "Kao has a strong professional background that will be applicable to the tasks at hand and is eager to work with the Quincy community."

The recently incorporated Quincy Asian Resources (QARI) is the result of a joint effort of Quincy Asian residents and human service providers servicing Quincy with support from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and the Harold Brooks Foundation.

Li is originally from Taiwan. He grew up in Libya and came to the United States as a foreign student and attend public high school and college in the Pacific Northwest. He studied fish feeding behavior and received a Masters of Science in Zoology from the University of Rhode Island. After receiving the green card, he embarked on a career in sales at Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, which spanned 18 years and earned an executive MBA from the Adam Smith University. His last position was to oversee a unit of Pfizer's hospital sales force in the Northeast region.

While at Pfizer he was a founding member of the company's Field Diversity Team and served as the liaison to many diverse medical associations. He still serves as an advisor to the board of the Charles B. Wang Community Health Center in New York, formerly the Chinatown Health Clinic.

Prior to joining QARI, Li was self-employed as a business development consultant working with early stage companies in the healthcare field.

"I am delighted to join QARI and apply my passion for entrepreneurship in a not-for-profit setting," he said. "The challenges facing many Asians in Quincy are common to immigrants – linguistic and cultural. What is needed is strong leadership to advocate for the community that has traditionally been quiet. I hope to help increase access to services important to the Asian community by forming partnerships and developing culturally competent and sensitive programs" said Li.

QARI has its office at 1509 Hancock St., Suite 209, Quincy Center. The telephone and fax number is 617-472-2200. QARI's mission is to be an advocate for the Asian American community and to serve as a catalyst that enhances services for the community.

QARI also announces Paul Shaw has been added to the board. Tackey Chan and Sheri Adlin were re-elected president and treasurer respectively. Ken An joins the executive committee as vice president. Mary Sweeney as secretary and Nareen Shibli as assistant clerk.

Other board members are Jim Chen, Peter Jae, Esther Lee, Gene Lee, Richard Hung, Bethann Strollo, Venson Tang and David Zou.

Departing from the board are Bill Heran, Cindy Lam and Simon Ho, M.D.

"We, at QARI, thank Bill Cindy and Simon for their work on the board," said Chan. "There time and effort as founding board members were invaluable in guiding us as a new agency."

State, County Probe Death At Mental Health Facility

South Shore Mental Health (SSMH), a social service agency at 8 Fort St., Quincy, is under fire from state and county following the death of a 39-year-old client in a group home for the mentally retarded in Weymouth.

Both the State Disabled Persons Protection Commission (DPPC) and the Norfolk County District Attorney have launched investigations into responsibility for the death of David Malcolm and any other possible problems at the agency.

Malcolm suffered a seizure and fell into a coma Dec. 29 after the staff at the home, according to his sister Lisa Malcolm Sanford, failed to give him his anti-seizure medication. He died at South Shore Hospital on Jan. 4.

Officials at South Shore Mental Health declined to comment since the case was under investigation but spokeswoman Tamara Crosby issued the following statement:

"We at SSMH are deeply saddened by this tragedy and our sympathy goes out to the family. We are in the midst of conducting an internal investigation according to our policies and procedures. Additionally, we are fully cooperating with both DMR and DPPC in their investigation.

"We have a long proud tradition — over 75 years — of working together with public and private partners to help over 10,,, individuals per year in our communities. We have become one of the largest human service providers in Southeastern Massachusetts and we enjoy an excellent reputation among our colleagues and payors.

"SSMH offers a wide range of housing options throughout the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts for adults with mental retardation and other developmental disabilities. Each residence works to promote and enhance independence and participation in community living. Our staff is highly trained in meeting the needs of individuals with challenging behavioral, psychiatric and medical issues."

South Shore Mental Health has been running the Weymouth group home under contract with the State Department of Mental Retardation (DMR) for about two months since taking over from a for-profit agency. It has similar agreements with 43 other state facilities.

Phelan Attends MMA Annual Meeting

Mayor William Phelan joined more than 1,000 local officials from across the state at the Massachusetts Municipal Association's 2003 annual Meeting and Trade Show at the Sheraton Boston Hotel and the adjoining Hynes Convention Center.

Mayors, managers, councillors and finance committee members participated in special sessions and workshops on local concerns during the two-day event.

The workshops were designed to provide the latest information on issues such as the future of municipal finance, affordable housing, emergency preparedness, and a variety of other major topics of interest to municipalities.

Gov. Mitt Romney and Boston Mayor Thomas Menino welcomed the participants. Other key state leaders discussed their priorities at the conference.

"The MMA's annual meeting is a unique opportunity for municipal leaders to discuss major issues that have a direct impact on the ability of their communities to provide essential services," said Geoffrey C. Beckwith, MMA executive director. "By participating in this important event, local officials have shown their commitment to effective public service. We applaud their dedication and hope the conference will help them as they provide leadership in communities across Massachusetts."

QHA Facing 'Catastrophic' Cuts In Federal Housing Subsidies

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) faces drastic reductions in services, layoffs and increased vacancies unless the federal government shores up a huge budget deficit for public housing, the authority's executive director said.

Administrative layoffs, a scaling back of service contracts, and putting off families in need of housing would be the likely result if the US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) does not cover the deficit, according to QHA Executive Director Jack Mather.

HUD recently revealed a $250 million shortfall in its 2002 budget, which translates into cuts in the amount of money it sends to public housing authorities.

QHA was informed recently that the authority will receive only 70 percent of its operating subsidy from the federal government for the upcoming year. This translates into a cut of $400,000 of the $1.3 million it receives in federal subsidies, he said.

Mather told The Quincy Sun that the severity of the cuts would affect about 900 city residents – the elderly, disabled and low income families - that live in four public housing facilities, Pagnano Towers in Quincy Point, the Riverview Development and O'Brien Towers in Germantown, and Drohan Apartments in West Quincy. He said there are approximately 650 apartments in those facilities.

The cuts would be "catastrophic" if HUD does not receive supplemental funding to make up the shortfall,

JACK MATHER

Mather said.

"I have had a lot of sleepless nights," he said. "We have financial obligations to our staff, service contractors, support services and maintenance people. If this funding is not restored all these things could be put at risk."

Mather said any possible cuts could affect QHA's anti-drug program, which helps to identify and solve crime issues at the city's public housing facilities. QHA receives federal subsidies for this program, he said.

Apartments would remain vacant for longer periods of time due to cuts in services, Mather said. Potential residents would be put off for affordable housing, he said.

HUD officials blamed the shortfall on shoddy accounting in the agency. Mather said the situation is disconcerting because the agency has not addressed the issue since it first became apparent in Spring, 2002.

Mather said Congress and HUD officials should have addressed the deficit long ago. Instead, they have chosen to roll over the deficit to the 2003 budget, he said.

"This means HUD is working with a huge shortfall to begin the year, and this will only exacerbate an already alarming situation with regard to affordable housing in this country," said Mather.

Mather said he and other state Housing Authority officials contacted members of Congress urging them to propose supplemental funding and make up the shortfall.

"To their credit the Massachusetts congressional delegation has been very cooperative and helpful in addressing the issue of public housing," said Mather.

Mather said there is a window of opportunity in which Congress and HUD can avoid the cuts. He said he is hopeful Congress will make a supplemental appropriation soon.

QHA's fiscal year begins in July, so any possible cuts would not be felt until that time, he said. Mather said it is imperative that Congress and President Bush be made aware of the effect of such cuts.

"I want to stay optimistic about this," said Mather. "But it makes you wonder where is the commitment from HUD and the Bush administration with regard to affordable housing."

In addition to possible subsidy cuts, Mather said QHA's employees have been hampered with increases in their pension contributions to the city's pension plan.

Mather said QHA is working with the mayor to address the issue.

"These are problems that will be with us for awhile," said Mather. "Our main concern is addressing the needs of our residents and potential residents. We will not be able to do this with these proposed cuts."

Coughlin Urges Passage Of Computer Waste Bill

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin recently urged state lawmakers to pass legislation which would require computer manufacturers to provide a system for retrieving and recycling their own equipment.

At a State House event on Jan. 9 in support of the legislation, Coughlin said the bill shifts the costs of retrieval and recycling away from cities and towns. Currently, those costs are creating an undue burden on taxpayers and cash-strapped local departments, he said.

The City of Quincy handles more than 25,000 tons of electronic waste on an annual basis, he said.

"The costs of this process siphons important financial resources away from other valuable municipal tasks," said Coughlin. He said millions of dollars in local revenues are expended each year to collect and dispose of computer monitors, peripherals and televisions.

The legislation, called Producer Takeback, has 60 co-sponsors and the support of more than 100 cities and towns across the Commonwealth, he said.

During the event, Coughlin was joined by legislators, local officials and leaders of Clean Water Action.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

A Challenge For The Fleet Of Foot: Join A Winning Boston Marathon Team

Training for the Boston Marathon certainly provides runners with health benefits. Some even run fast enough to help improve the health of others.

The Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge (DFMC) team is looking for qualified runners who want to add a new dimension to their training by running for others as well as themselves.

Runners who have run a qualifying time at a certified marathon since Sept. 28, 2001, can join the DFMC team and run to raise money that supports researchers at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston. These researchers have taken on another type of challenge, curing cancer.

Each DFMC runner agrees to raise at least $2,000 by June 2003, a sum that is easier to raise than most think. The average amount raised per runner in 2002 was $6,000, and 100 percent of the money goes to the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Research done by Barr Investigators addresses many types of cancer affecting people of all ages and translates to increased cure rates, improved quality of life and hopefully, one day, a world without cancer.

The DFMC provides participants with unparalleled support services. The training program is led by 1976 Boston Marathon winner Jack Fultz. There is an extensive calendar of group training runs and social gatherings as well as special access to leading health and fitness facilities throughout the Boston area.

On race day, DFMC runners enjoy exclusive use of an indoor facility in Hopkinton on marathon morning, and a post-marathon recovery zone with showers and massages. Runners with the DFMC also enjoy a unique camaraderie that results from working toward a common cause.

Dana-Farber runners receive commemorative DFMC apparel and race singlets. The distinctive singlets let the huge crowds lining the course know of the runners' extra dedication, ensuring that DFMC runners receive heartfelt cheers as they pass.

Nowhere is the cheering louder than in Kenmore Square where Dana-Farber patients, families and friends gather to give the DFMC runners a boost for the final mile. Most DFMC participants dedicate their run to someone in their life who has battled cancer.

Qualified runners make up nearly 20 percent of the DFMC team. These runners have helped the DFMC enjoy tremendous growth and success since the program began in 1990. The DFMC has raised nearly $16 million in the 13 years of the program. The goal of the 2003 Marathon Challenge is to raise $3 million for the Barr Program.

Interested qualified runners are encouraged to call the DFMC at 617-632-1970 or e-mail dfmc@dfci.harvard.edu for an application as soon as possible in order to take full advantage of the program's benefits.

Don't Forget Sunblock For The Eyes This Winter

(NAPS) — While the sun may seem like a distant memory during cold and cloudy months, the danger from invisible UV radiation is a reality year-round.

Even in winter months, exposure to UV lights can result in "sunburn" to the eye's surface. If there is snow on the ground, up to 85 percent of UV rays can be reflected upward. Cumulative damage from UV exposure may contribute to serious eye diseases.

While some Americans remember to protect their skin from UV, they are less likely to think about their eyes. According to a recent national survey from Transitions Optical, Inc., 79 percent of Americans know about the damage UV rays can do to the skin, but only 6 percent know it can harm the eyes.

Consider these ideas to help protect the eyes from harmful UVA and UVB radiation as part of an overall sun protection regimen:

• Choose eyewear with convenient, everyday protection. Because damage from UV rays is cumulative, eyeglasses with 100 percent UV protection should be worn any time you are outside, even in winter months and on cloudy days.

• Think past sunglasses. While sunglasses can provide UV protection, people typically only wear them when it is bright outside, and ignore them on cloudy days when UV is still a threat. Consider everyday protection like Transitions Lenses that are as clear as regular glasses until dangerous rays are present. Then, the brighter the sun, the darker they get — getting as dark as sunglasses in bright sunlight. Since they darken only as much as needed, they can be worn comfortably year-round to provide convenience and automatic UV protection every day — sunny, cloudy or in between.

• Consider frame size. The larger the frames, the more the eye area is protected from UV rays.

• Hats on. Even in the winter, wear hats with wider brims because they offer more protection from UV rays.

• Don't forget the kids. Even though children spend more time outdoors than adults, they are less likely to wear everyday UV protection for the eyes. Since the damage from UV exposure is cumulative, protection should begin early in life.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BRUSHING TECHNIQUE

At least one carefully designed study has shown that a manual toothbrush cleaned teeth better than an electric toothbrush when users applied the correct technique. For the best results, keep the bristles angled 45 degrees toward the gumline. If the brush's head will not fit horizontally to clean the inside surfaces of the front teeth, turn the brush vertically. Either way, hold the bristle tips in one spot against the teeth and gums, and vibrate the brush head with a short back-and-forth motion. Then, move on to the adjacent teeth. To avoid damaging the gums or any exposed root surfaces, brush no more than twice a day for two to three minutes, holding the toothbrush gently.

We can provide you with complete general dental services, from a professional cleaning (preventative) to full mouth reconstruction (repair), periodontal treatments, and cosmetic dentistry. Good preventive dental care can help avoid unnecessary pain, expense, and possible tooth loss. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular professional dental health care. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Whether you use a manual toothbrush or an electrical model, flossing is also necessary.

MICROSOFT PROJECT 2000

Projects large or small require a work breakdown structure to optimize planning and scheduling. Most companies are project based and require their associates, contractors, sub-contractors, and even vendors to contractually provide a formal project schedule. Because of the popularity of the Microsoft Office Suite and its integration capability with other software, the common sense approach to project scheduling is to use Microsoft Project 2000. This class takes participants through the creation of the work-breakdown structure, critical path, resource allocation and leveling as well as the tracking process, reporting and printing. Other topics include use of macros, custom filters, grouping, customizing views and forms and creating master projects.

Make Your Home Cozy And Cut Energy Costs

(NU) – Did you know your home heating and cooling system holds the key to making your home more comfortable while you cut your home energy costs?

Try these ideas and see how much money you can save on your energy expenses:

1. Better windows provide better insulation. Install storm windows over single-pane windows, or replace them with double-pane windows for double the insulation of single-pane windows. This also reduces drafts, water condensation and frost formation.

2. Draperies and shades can cut your costs. During the winter, open the draperies on your south facing windows during the day and close them at night. This allows the warming sunlight to enter your home during the day and keeps the cold night air out. In the summer, close them in the daytime and open them at night.

3. Insulate ducts. When heated air leaks out of ducts and into unheated spaces, it wastes energy and money. By insulating ducts in unconditioned spaces, you can cute your heating bill. If you are buying a new duct system, ask your contractor about ducts with the insulation already installed.

4. Choose the best system for your climate. If you live in a warm climate, choose a heat pump. It is the most efficient form of electric heating – three times as efficient as electric resistance heating. If you live in a cold climate, choose a gas furnace if natural gas is available in your area.

5. Wash your windows. By keeping all south-facing windows clean during the winter months, you allow more heat to enter your home.

6. Keep your system clean. Clean warm-air registers to allow your heating and cooling system to work with less strain. An easy-running unit uses less electricity in the summer and less gas in the winter.

7. Consider an ultra-high-efficiency furnace. If you are in the market for a new furnace, ask your heating contractor about an ultra-high-efficiency gas furnace such as the Heil QuietComfort line of efficient gas furnaces, which have an annual fuel utilization efficiency rating above 90 percent.

For more energy-saving ideas, see the Heil Home Comfort Tip of the Day at www.heil-hvac.com. To find a home comfort contractor near you, check out the dealer locator at the Heil Web site.

What's Your Home's 'Retirement Rating'?

(NU) — Want a new way to judge the value of a home? Today, it has less to do with resale value and energy ratings and more to do with comfort.

If you'd like to find out whether your home is helping or hindering your quality of life during retirement, a free pamphlet distributed by the nonprofit American Innerspring Manufacturers can help.

Using a pamphlet as a guide, assign a score to various areas of your home. The scores are based on how well different elements of the home contribute to comfort, relaxation and safety.

After adding up the scores, the home is given one of our ratings, with a Level Four retirement rating being the highest relaxation level possible. Conversely, a Level

Real Estate in the New Era
by Vin Moscardelli Owner/Broker
CENTRAL REAL ESTATE

YOUR BEST INVESTMENT

According to Fannie Mae's latest housing survey, 70% of respondents said they believe owning a home is the best investment they can make. This is hardly surprising, in light of the facts that interest rates are at record low levels and the stock market is very volatile. Despite the recent recession, many Americans have seen their net worth increase because of a rise in their homes' value. The survey also suggested that many people are not aware of how easy and affordable it has become to purchase a home. They are impeded by issues such as lack of knowledge about the home-buying process and saving for a down payment, all of which can be explained by a real estate agent.

The poor performance of the stock market combined with low interest rates have helped make housing a popular and reliable investment for people of all ages. If you're currently renting, you may find that a monthly mortgage is the same or less than your rent. CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can help you determine how much home you can afford based on your income and savings. Call us at (617) 328-1312 to arrange a consultation. We are conveniently located at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

One retirement rating means your home's environment is stressful and draining.

The booklet also includes tips on how to make small improvements that can make a big difference. Here are some things to consider to help give your home a higher score:

• Install proper lighting both in and around the house. Well-positioned lighting, especially at walkways, stairs and entrances, helps ensure homeowners and their visitors won't fall when arriving or leaving at night. Your home receives a higher score for any automatic outdoor lighting.

• Choose high-wattage, incandescent bulbs with longer life spans and fixtures that allow for easy replacement. Avoid ceiling lights with globe-shaped bulb covers.

• Ensure that your bedroom is comfortable. Sleep is an important part of one's ability to enjoy a healthy and active lifestyle. Because a restful sleep surface is so important, the bedroom scores points if the bed is large enough (a double bed for one person, a queen-sized bed for two) and if the mattress is a supportive innerspring mattress less than 10 years old.

"Find Your Home's Retirement Rating" is available by calling AIM at 1-800-TUCK-ME-IN (1-800-882-5634) or online at www.aiminfo.org.

Design Tips For Couples Ready To Renovate

(NU) — The nation's decorating dialogue has changed dramatically from yesteryear when an ugly, old recliner was generally at the heart of the debate. Now it's more common to find couples arguing over which countertop color they want: aubergine or sage green.

Today, it often takes two for a "re-do," and men are getting much more involved in the renovation and design process.

A new survey, conducted by Harris Interactive/Yankelovich Partners for EXPO Design Center, found that 71 percent of Americans disagree with their significant others about something when it comes to home decorating.

"The 'Yes, dear, whatever you want!' attitude is definitely on the decline," said Alison McKenzie, a kitchen designer for EXPO in Atlanta, Ga.

Women prefer a relaxed, informal style — colors like light green yellow and rose, weathered wood, and big, soft furniture, the survey said. Conversely, more men than women embrace a contemporary style, a color scheme dominated by white, black and beige, stainless steel appliances and fixtures, and very simple furnishings.

Men and women also differ in their renovation priorities, the survey found. For example, men prefer exterior home renovation projects, such as new landscaping, outdoor lighting and grilling systems, while women choose kitchens as their highest priority.

Couples say their main decorating disagreements focus on color, style and quality.

If you need to get beyond the initial argument in order to come to a collective decision, a designer's professional and neutral expertise can help you make the best choices.

When faced with a difference of opinion, sometimes a literal approach works best. In one situation, for example, a husband had a difficult time understanding his wife's choices. Diane Lamparter, an EXPO designer in Commack, N.Y., brought samples of the products to the couple's home.

"When he saw how the marble and carpet his wife picked looked in their home, he loved the choices — it was a matter of seeing them in his own home," Lamparter said.

But although initial arguments are common, when it comes to making the final decorating decision, the survey found 48 percent of couples say they always agree.

While women may dominate the decorating decision-making process, 66 percent of women surveyed said their husband's opinion has an influence on their decision to purchase a decorative item. And 18 percent said their decorating decisions are completely influenced by their partner's opinion.

Win Snaps Three-Game Losing Streak

North Quincy Cruises Past Plymouth South

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

A banged up and sick North Quincy High School girls' basketball team picked up a much-needed win last Friday night.

Although it came against winless Plymouth South, the 53-44 road victory snapped the short-handed Red Raiders three-game losing skid and pushed their record back to the .500 mark.

The victory turned out to be even more important because the Red Raiders fell at Brockton, 57-39, Monday night.

North Quincy (4-5 overall, 3-2 Old Colony League) hosted Silver Lake Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it tips off against Marshfield at home.

In the Brockton game, North Quincy reverted back to its generous ways, allowing Brockton to build a 17-point halftime lead (32-15). The Red Raiders committed 10 turnovers that Brockton capitalized on.

In the second half, North Quincy executed a full-court man-to-man press and played last year's state finalist even.

"Again, we spotted a team big points in the first half and played good in the second half," said head coach Doug MacFarlane.

Senior forward/center and quad-captain April Suprey scored a team-high 20 points and grabbed five rebounds. Sophomore forwards Sarah Goreham (six points) and Amanda Saylor (five points) turned in strong outings.

In the Plymouth South game, North Quincy played without senior forward and quad-captain Kristen DiMattio (knee) and Saylor (sick), and Suprey played despite feeling under the weather.

DiMattio reinjured her knee in last Thursday's practice and MacFarlane said she is out at least a week and perhaps the rest of the season.

"That really hurts us," MacFarlane said. "She's a senior with veteran experience. She's tall, 5-11. She's our best shooter. Losing her is big."

The Red Raiders trailed 18-16 at the break before it settled down in the second half to stay in control of the game.

Suprey scored 14 points, handed out four assists and pulled down five rebounds. Goreham also scored 14 points but also had four steals, four assists and four rebounds in a terrific all-around game. Senior forward and quad-captain Kathleen McCarthy added 10 points and seven rebounds.

"As much as it was against a lower level team, it was still a good win because of our physical condition," MacFarlane said. "We very easily could not have won. Historically we don't play well down there."

Presidents Defeat Sandwich, Bow To Nauset

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' basketball team revealed two versions of itself as it split a pair of games on the road last week.

Last Friday, the Presidents shot a blistering 57 percent and hit 16 free throws in a 74-51 victory over Sandwich.

This followed last Tuesday's 64-41 loss to Nauset in which it shot 23 percent from the floor and 40 percent from the free-throw line (Brrr!).

Quincy (4-4 overall, 2-2 Old Colony League) hosted Randolph Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it battles Plymouth North to complete the first-half of the season.

"The kids are very optimistic," said head coach John Franceschini. "If we can get a little more consistency, we'll be fine."

In the Sandwich game, Quincy held a 35-30 advantage at the break and ran away with the game in the second half as it cranked up its defensive pressure.

"The difference in the second half was that we just upscaled our defense," Franceschini said. "We got a lot of transition points off our defense. That was one of our best shooting nights in a long time."

Senior Kevin O'Connell poured in a team-high 22 points. Senior Anthony Boyle registered a double-double with 16 points and 13 rebounds and senior Matt Ramponi added 10 points while handing out six assists.

Sophomore Parker Scott scored nine points from the point guard position. "He did a nice job of running the team," Franceschini said.

In the Nauset game, the Presidents trailed 32-21 at halftime. Still within reach, they ended any chance of a comeback by suffering through a scoring drought in the second half.

"We couldn't get back in the game because of our shooting percentage," said Franceschini, whose team hit 16 of 71 shots. "There was a six-minute stretch in the second half where we scored no points. That was the difference in the game. It was the complete opposite of the Sandwich game."

Quincy Hangs With Sandwich Before Falling

With two dangerous perimeter players, the Quincy High School girls' basketball team never feels it's out of a game.

Trailing by 11 points with under five minutes left in last Friday's home game against Sandwich, junior point guard Sarah Shea canned back-to-back 3-pointers and backcourt partner and fellow classmate Bonnie Hirtle added a pair of free throws to pull within 53-50 with 2:18 left.

Indeed, the Presidents were back in the game. But it turned out they couldn't catch the Blue Knights after they answered Quincy's 8-0 run with a 3-pointer of their own and hit all six free throws down the stretch for a 62-52 victory.

"We certainly don't believe we're ever out of a game," said coach Jeff Bretsch, who saw his team's three-game winning streak end. "We always believe we can come back against anybody. We know we're capable of running off several threes in a row.

"It's a tough loss. We were excited to try to win the game. It would have put us in first place. But it's still early."

Quincy (6-2 overall, 3-1 Atlantic Coast League) traveled to Randolph Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it heads to Plymouth North.

The turning point in the game came at the beginning of the second half when Quincy stumbled out of the locker room. A 25-24 lead at the break quickly turned into a 37-27 deficit after a 13-2 run by Sandwich.

"We kind of had a drought there at the beginning of the second half," Bretsch said. "Turnovers and missed free throws hurt us. That usually is the story."

Quincy shot 55 percent (12 of 22) from the line compared to Sandwich's 85-percent shooting (23 of 27). In the second half it was even worse as Quincy hit only four of 12 attempts while Sandwich drained all 11.

"They hit their free throws and we didn't," Bretsch said.

In the first half, Quincy came out attacking the offensive boards and making a concerted effort to get the ball inside to sophomore center Alysia DiMuzio (15 points, 12 rebounds).

It proved to be effective as it was a close game before Quincy hit a little rut and fell behind 21-16. Quincy, though, closed the half with a 9-3 run to grab a one-point lead.

Hirtle finished with a team-high 21 points and Shea chipped in 11 points, three 3-pointers in the second half.

In a 65-56 win over Nauset last Tuesday, Hirtle scored 20 points and had six assists and DiMuzio had 18 points.

Shea added nine points and handed out six assists. Junior Brittany Tobin chipped in with six points and senior Shannon Paine grabbed 10 rebounds.

In the first half, sophomore Nicole O'Sullivan came off the bench when DiMuzio got into foul trouble and played well, scoring five of her seven points.

SPRINGING TO LIFE

Most vehicles use coil springs on all four corners. Some of these are the variable rate type, which change their stiffness as they deflect. A variable rate spring uses coils of varying thickness or spacing to provide a soft ride when the vehicle is lightly loaded but a firmer one when the load increases. As the metal fatigues, it will not return to its normal position, even without a load. If a coil spring is deeply nicked or gouged, it will twist more easily around that point and eventually break. While most vehicles run their entire lives without ever having to replace their original springs, replacement coil springs are readily available and are not usually difficult or expensive to install.

For most of your car's maintenance needs, including its springs, rely on our ASE Certified technicians LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Tough Loss For Raiders Against Barnstable

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

Engaged in close games all season, the North Quincy High School hockey team suffered a 4-1 loss last Saturday night at Barnstable.

Continuing a bad trend, the Red Raiders gave up late goals in the first and second periods and couldn't climb back into the game.

"It's a tough loss," said head coach Bob Doyle. "I felt we got off to a flat start. We had a couple of scoring chances early on and then we were standing around watching Barnstable."

North Quincy (2-3-2 overall, 0-2-1 Old Colony League) traveled to Plymouth South yesterday (Wednesday) and backup goalie John O'Driscoll was scheduled to make his first start this season. North Quincy heads to Silver Lake Saturday night at 5 and Monday it plays at Duxbury at 5:15 p.m.

With 1:05 left in the opening period, Barnstable's Sean Daley deflected a shot from the point past goalie Bruce Maggio for a 1-0 lead. During the intermission, Doyle ripped into the team to try to ignite a spark.

It worked. Nine seconds into the second period Matt Grazioso took a pass from Paul Graham in the corner and pocketed his 10th goal of the season to even the score at 1.

"Right after our chat in the locker room, it looked like we had fire in our eyes," Doyle said.

The Red Raiders had a chance to continue the momentum but failed to score on a couple of power plays. Grazioso just missed his second goal of the night when he clanked a shot off the post on one man-advantage.

With under a minute left in the frame Barnstable struck again to regain the lead, 2-1.

"I told them we were very fortunate to be in that position," Doyle said. "Barnstable is a strong team. We've been in a lot of close games so far and maybe we could take something from that."

In the third, though, Barnstable delivered a back-breaking goal at 3:06 for a 3-1 lead.

"Down two goals, we knew it was going to be an uphill battle," Doyle said. "We became a little undisciplined and had a couple of penalties as a result of frustration."

Last Wednesday at home North Quincy battled Bridgewater-Raynham to 3-3 tie, which Doyle said felt more like a loss.

Holding a 3-2 edge, North Quincy allowed the Trojans to score with only 19 second left in the game as they pulled their goalie.

The Red Raiders had a 2-0 lead earlier in the game. Rich Stone scored at 2:00 of the first period and Grazioso found the back of the net at 9:00 of the second with Stone and senior captain Tim Duggan assisting.

However, B-R got on the board about a minute later and at 3:11 it netted the equalizer.

"We didn't take care of our zone and we let B-R creep back into the game," Doyle said.

In the third, Grazioso received a great outlet pass from Graham and scored a break-away goal at 12:13 to temporarily put the Red Raiders back on top, 3-2.

Quincy-North Girls' Hockey Ice Martha's Vineyard, 4-3

The Quincy-North Quincy High School girls' hockey team traveled to Martha's Vineyard last Saturday afternoon and pulled out a 4-3 victory to snap a two-game losing streak.

Juniors Kristina Manganaro and Lindsey Langille each netted a pair of goals to provide the offense while goalie Jessie Poggi backboned the defense by stoning 34 shots.

"This was a complete team effort," said head coach Laura Prisco. "Everyone was involved and our goalie Jessie Poggi kept us in it with 34 saves."

QNQ (4-2-1 overall, 2-0 South Cape Conference) hosted Duxbury yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday it faces off against Westwood at 6:40 p.m. at Quincy Youth Arena.

QNQ grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first period. Manganaro struck first with assists from sophomore Marissa Powers and Langille. Langille tallied the second with Manganaro assisting.

Early in the second, Langille pocketed her fourth goal of the season with another assist from Manganaro.

After Martha's Vineyard scored at 10:48, QNQ responded when Manganaro knocked home her eighth goal of the season for a 4-1 lead.

Martha's Vineyard added two goals in the third period to account for the final score.

Coached by William Ketchen, the Bullets program is part of TILL (Toward Independent Living and Learning), a Dedham-based nonprofit group that helps develop mentally disabled young adults.

Presidents Route Randolph, 8-1

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School hockey team received the perfect remedy for its recent ailments last Saturday night at Quincy Youth Arena — a game against Randolph.

Having already whipped the Blue Devils, 6-2, on Dec. 18, the Presidents routed them 8-1 in this second meeting to snap a four-game losing streak, in which two of the losses came by forfeit.

Athletic Director Ed Miller did not return a call before The Sun went to press Tuesday as to why Quincy forfeited the Dec. 28 home game against Plymouth North and the Jan. 4 game at Whitman-Hanson.

Against Randolph, junior forward Dan Sullivan recorded a hat trick to power the offense and senior quad-captain Matt Lavery added a pair of goals. Backup goalie Jim Carita replaced starter Keith Flaherty for the third period and turned in a shut-out.

"We've had unbalanced games," said head coach Bob Sylvia in summing up the season to this point. "We haven't had consistent scoring and that has kind of hurt us a bit."

Quincy (5-5 overall, 3-4 Atlantic Coast League) traveled to Nauset Tuesday and Saturday night at 7:50 it hosts Dennis-Yarmouth, which it fell to in the season opener, 4-0. On Monday it hosts Rockland at 1 p.m. at Quincy Youth Arena.

"If we can get two wins in our next three games then we'll be 7-6 with five games left. We'd need to win two more games and we'd be in good shape," Sylvia said in regards to qualifying for the state tournament.

After four straight wins to improve to 4-1, Quincy's league championship hopes were dashed when it had to forfeit its next two games.

The Presidents proceeded to drop the following two games — a 5-2 setback against Plymouth South last Monday and a 6-2 defeat at Sandwich last Wednesday — before getting back on track against Randolph.

"Our goals have changed a bit," Sylvia said. "We're looking at just making the tournament rather than first place, which is something we set out for at the beginning of the season.

"We have to pick up our game. The idea is to be playing your best at the end of the year going into the postseason."

'Four Chaplains' Sunday Observance Feb. 3

The Veterans' Services Department reminds residents that Sunday, Feb. 3, will be observed as "Four Chaplains" Sunday, as mandated by the United States Congress.

Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of the Quincy's Veterans Services Department, recalled the story behind the fateful day.

In February, 1943, the troopship Dorchester was struck by a German torpedo in the frigid waters in the North Atlantic ocean, Bradley said.

During the melee on the ship, four chaplains, George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic, provided comfort and handed out life jackets to the wounded men, Bradley said.

The four chaplains gave their own life jackets to those without them. It is said that the four men of faith linked arms and bowed their heads in prayer as the ship sank.

Only 230 of 902 men survived the attack, Bradley said.

Survivors will never forget the sights and sounds on the ship while the four chaplains performed a completely unselfish and heroic act, he said.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Volunteerism is a wonderful state of mind. It urges us to step outside the routine of our daily lives. It encourages us to act when we see a need. It reminds us that even though our actions are not always selfless, there is a great reward in accomplishing a worth while task in service to something beyond oneself.

What are some of the benefits of volunteering? The vast majority of individuals who benefit in one or more of the following ways: (1) feel good and relieve stress by helping others, (2) help make a difference for the better, (3) meet new people, (4) reinforce participatory decision making, or (5) learn new skills.

Volunteers are the folks who make communities tick -- by tutoring or visiting or running errands, by donating units of blood, by teaching or leading or promoting, by serving on boards of directors for non-profit organizations and groups. All of them, young and old, from communities large and small, with full capabilities and limited skills, from numerous ethnic groups and cultural backgrounds . . . all of these volunteers provide that something extra makes volunteering so unique and special.

Many thanks and God Bless You. . . the many volunteers of our community.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be hurt by a colleague's harsh criticism. But don't let it shake your confidence in what you're trying to do. A more positive aspect starts to appear by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're torn between your sensible self and the part of you that enjoys acquiring lovely things. Best advice: Wait for an end-of-month sale and then buy something wonderful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your artistic side has practical applications this week, such as redecorating your home or redesigning your personal stationery. Whatever you do, someone special will like it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You could be drawn into a problem 'twixt friends or family members. Best bet: Ask the questions that go to the heart of the matter, then get them all together for a group hug.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you love being the center of attention, your big Lion's heart impels you to share the spotlight with a colleague who helped you with that well-praised project.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your eagerness to act on a challenge is wisely tempered early in the week by a lack of necessary information. Things begin to clear up during the weekend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A relationship you'd hoped would keep going seems to be going nowhere. Close it out and move on to a brighter romantic aspect just beginning to manifest itself.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things don't go completely as planned this week. But enjoy the surprises, even if you have to adjust your schedule. Some of them could be quite delightful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Making choices is usually easy for straight-shooting Archers. But a new development could deflect your aim. Try to put off decisions until you know more.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While part of you might prefer taking a more familiar path, let your more daring and — admit it — supercurious self see what the unexplored has to offer.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Those nasty types have slithered back under the rocks and present no more problems. Now's the time to move ahead on that promising new relationship.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new offer could clear up that lingering money problem. Also, a more confident attitude on your part might well help get that personal situation back on track.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of turning chaos into order. You're also generous with your help for those who seek it.

Tedeschi Ownership Transfer Approved

The License Board Tuesday approved the request of a transfer of stock and ownership from Mark Shanahan and John Whalen to John Whalen, at Tedeschi's 751 East Squantum St.

According to Atty. Gregory F. Galvin, Shanahan owned 49 percent of the stock a year ago. However, since Shanahan has started a similar business in Marshfield, he found the commute to Squantum more than he had expected.

Whalen has been operating the store since March, 2002.

According to Chairman Joseph Shea, the request now goes to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission for approval.

Committee Named To Solve College Rental Dispute

ments of the annual $217,000 fee paid for the space, the college pays the cost of maintaining and operating the nearly 100-year-old Coddington Hall and two houses on Saville Avenue.

The School Committee has increased the fee for the space from $217,000 to $450,000, more than double the current expense and Barry said deep cuts this year and freezing unfilled positions has enabled him to come close to raising the funds to pay for an increase.

However, he said, after this year significant tuition increases greater than those in previous years or deep cuts in staff and services will be required unless an arrangement is reached.

"I'm confident that both sides can reach an equitable arrangement and that the college can meet the financial expectation placed upon it by the School Department this year," said Barry. "The future arrangements will need to be hammered out by the subcommittee."

Barry expressed concerns that Quincy College is not regarded by some as an integral part of the city.

"There is a mindset that when developers look at the college buildings, there is a huge amount of money for the city to make if it sells the space and evicts the college," he said. "Some believe that in order for the college to continue in that space it should pay as much as a developer or private interest.

"We're worried, since we are a department of the city of Quincy. We are public employees. We don't look at the Fire Department or the cemetery as possible revenue sources or for development, so we're puzzled when the city looks at us as tenants."

Lord-Piatelli said she was pleased the two sides in the dispute could get together peacefully to seek a solution.

"There is no wisdom in forcing a court battle, pitting two departments against one another," she said, "or doing anything that might imperil the college's ability to exist. Nor do we wish to see the School Department continue to worry about their budget this year.

"This couldn't happen without cooperation. There is a sense of optimism and positive energy, which was not there a few weeks ago."

Quirk Pledges 'Best Use' Of Shipyard

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Dan Quirk, the new owner of the Fore River shipyard, said he intends to move his auto auction to the site and "develop the remainder of the yard for the highest and best use."

Quirk, who won the property with a bid of $9 million at auction last week, announced Tuesday he would set up a "Quincy Shipyard Development" team to determine the best use for the site. He said the team would consist of environmental specialists, land use experts, a business development specialist, and Attorney Frank Marinelli of Braintree, who has been involved with development and re-use projects for more than 20 years.

Marinelli said Quirk is interviewing candidates for the team, but no one has been selected yet.

"Now is the time to get the shipyard back on the tax rolls and produce jobs for local people," said Quirk.

"We don't want another Hingham Shipyard in Quincy. This yard will not remain idle for 30 years."

Quirk said one of the reasons for purchasing the property was to move his car auction on Ricciuti Drive. He said the development of the Quarry Hills golf course and housing project prompted

Homeless Crowd Shelters As Mercury Dips To Zero

With wind chill temperatures below the zero mark, Father Bill's Place entertained 132 homeless men and women in facilities designed for 95 beds Monday night.

And, said Executive Director John Yazwinski, the homeless shelters were preparing for a similar onslaught Tuesday night when the wind chill was expected to dip well below zero.

"It's the worst I've ever seen," said Yazwinski. "We had emergency army cots in the hallways, the cafeteria, the conference room, wherever there was an empty space."

The shelter in the old motor vehicle registry on Broad Street housed 100 men Monday night and the women's shelter in the old St. John's School on Phipps Street held 32 ladies.

In preparation for Tuesday night, said Yazwinski, the First Baptist Church in Braintree and the Union Congregational Church in Wollaston volunteered their premises to handle the overflow.

"We're very thankful for the offer of the space," said Yazwinski.

Father Bill's Place had a nurse, a drug abuse councillor and a man from the shelter in a van combing the streets of Quincy and Dorchester for the homeless. Active drug users were taken to Quincy Medical Center.

"We are seeing people we have not seen for two years," said Yazwinski, noting many homeless persons are reluctant to go to shelters unless the cold is life-threatening.

"We're concerned for the next few nights," he said. "I hope we don't see an increase."

City Census Forms In Mail Monday

City census forms, 42,000 of them, will go into the mail Monday to Quincy residents.

"It is important that they be filled out and returned as soon as possible because we get our reimbursements and draw up our jury lists from them," said City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The city's population the last time it was counted by the federal government in the year 2000 stood at 88,025.

Sean McArdle Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

Sean McArdle, a union representative for the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, has announced his candidacy for the City Council from Ward 1 in the November election.

The seat is being vacated by Greg Hanley, who has moved his residence to Pembroke.

A campaign reception is planned for McArdle Friday, Feb. 7, from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. at the George F. Bryan VFW Post.

A lifelong resident of Hough's Neck, McArdle is a graduate of Quincy High School. He received degrees in criminal justice/business management from Quincy Junior College and the University of Massachusetts.

He currently presides as exalted ruler of the Quincy Lodge of Elks and is an active member of the Quincy Yacht Club, serving on the house committee from 1998 to 2000. He is also a member of the Hough's Neck Community Council.

Bids Farewell After 15 Years

Cahill: 'Proud To Have Served City As Councillor'

Tim Cahill, newly sworn as state treasurer but still a member at large of the Quincy City Council, attended his last Council meeting Tuesday night.

He said he planned to submit his letter of resignation as councillor to City Clerk Joseph Shea Wednesday.

"I'm proud to have served the city for 15 years as a city councillor," he said, by way of previewing his farewell speech to his fellow councillors.

"I will always remember my years on the City Council as one of the best experiences of my life.

"I am honored to have served with such fine public servants from 1988 to the past year."

Cahill was in the midst of his eighth two-year term on the Council when he was elected state treasurer. He topped the ticket four times.

He noted that he had held office on the council under three mayors — Frank McCauley, James Sheets and William Phelan.

TIM CAHILL

"I think my years on the council will help me with the problems I'll face as state treasurer," he said.

Cahill had no comment when it was pointed out to him that the state's last two treasurers, Joseph Malone and Shannon O'Brien, had given up the office to run for governor.

"And they both lost," he said "I'm looking forward to not running a political campaign for the next four years."

He said he hopes his fellow councillors will move swiftly to appoint his replacement.

"It's important," he said, "to have three citywide voices to balance the six ward councillors in facing the problems of today.

"I wish the city well as it grapples with the serious challenges that confront them.

"I hope to be able to help the city as state treasurer."

Approximately 300 Attend Breakfast Tribute

MLK's Dream Of Equality, Justice Alive Here

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Dr. Martin Luther King's dream of equality and justice for all is alive and well in Quincy, as more than 300 guests celebrated the civil rights leader's legacy at the city's annual breakfast tribute Monday.

Sponsored by the Quincy Human Rights Commission and held at the VFW Bryan Post, the event featured guest speakers and entertainment designed to urge attendees to renew their commitment to continuing Dr. King's dream of racial equality.

This year's keynote speaker, Gayle Anne Kelley, an educator and filmmaker, paid tribute to Dr. King by telling guests that peace, social justice and equality begin from within each individual.

"No individual or nation is exempt from the law of cause and effect," she told listeners. "Therefore, it is incumbent upon the entire human community to face these issues and resolve these issues together in solidarity."

She urged the need for diversity and said each person must play a part in improving today's society. And differing viewpoints ultimately lead to harmony and unity, she said.

"Honoring our diversity is the process by which we can find the solutions and heal many of the problems that plague us," Kelley said.

Kelley urged guests to work together for the common good and bring about positive change regarding social injustice, racism, human rights, war, and the environment.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER Gayle Anne Kelley, an educator and filmmaker, told listeners there is hope for a more peaceful world. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

"Simply put, we need each other," she said. "Without all these viewpoints and voices, we are limited in our ability to problem solve and advance as a species. It is only through finding the value or our diverse nature and the interconnectedness and interdependence with one another can we know peace."

Kelley founded A Circle of Women, an organization that seeks to educate and inspire women to take leadership roles in developing a new generation of peacemakers.

Mayor William Phelan attended the breakfast and praised those in the community that promote Dr. King's values and tenets.

Phelan called Dr. King a "personal hero," and said the civil rights leader "shaped the ideals of an entire era."

Phelan said: "When we come together we honor his (King) lifelong, nonviolent struggle and his commitment to equality and justice for all."

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating told listeners that today's society has made progress regarding diversity, but "racial harmony is being tested again today."

"The life and legacy of Dr. King was in making sure those who came after would follow his ideals and legacy," said Keating. "We must rededicate ourselves to make sure his life is with us this very moment."

The event kicked off at 9 a.m. with a salute to the flag, the reciting of the Pledge of Allegiance and a rousing rendition of "God Bless America" by Gaetano DeGrazia, deputy commander coordinator for veterans hospitals in Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury.

Other Photos On Page 16

In addition, guests heard "When the Saints Go Marching In," and "Go Fish" by Worcester music group The New Revelations. Later in the morning, a brownies troop from the Girl Scouts of America sang, "Wave in the Water," and "He Has The Whole World in His Hands" to delighted listeners.

The event was attended by many state and local officials, including State Senator Michael Morrissey, Representative Bruce Ayers, Council President Daniel Raymondi, Ward Councillors Kevin Coughlin and Brian Coughlin, Police Chief William Falco and acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell.

The Quincy Human Rights Commission includes: Gaetano DeGrazia, Maria D'Arcangelo, George Clark, David Ezickson, Donna Johnson, Sandra Pimental, Dr. Joseph McDermott, Nancy MacDonald, William Murphy, Rev. Esther Bowen, Peggy Farren, Lt. Paul Keenan, Ed Grogan, Zaida Hassan Shaw, Jonathan Yip and Yi (David) Zou.

How About Kan-see!

We pronounce it Quin-zee and always will. Despite the fact that all the other Quincys in the U.S. -- including our sister city, Quincy, Ill. -- insist it's really Quin-cee.

And in France, it's something else. Like, Kan-see.

Barbara Gilliland of Newbury Ave., North Quincy, whose hobby is visiting Quincys and collecting memorabilia about them was recently in Quincy-Voisin, France.

BARBARA GILLILAND of North Quincy presents Jean-Jaques Jego, the mayor of Quincy-Voisin, France with a copy of The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" supplement during recent visit.

"It is a town of about 4,500 inhabitants about 30 miles outside Paris and one of eight places with the name of Quincy in France," she says.

And there, she says, "The French pronunciation as close I could get it, is Kan-see."

Which is similar to the late Paul Harold's experience when he visited the Quincy vineyards in Loire Valley in France in 1994. There, he found, they pronounced Quincy Can-say.

HAROLD

"The name of Quincy is actually French," Harold said. "Or, more properly, Norman."

Harold brought back two cases of wine with the Quincy label. And when he received the William O'Connell Award at the Quincy Historical Society's annual meeting, he treated those attending to the wine. And presented other bottles to friends.

He thought some enterprising Quincy package store might have the Quincy label wine imported to sell as a special gift item.

While in Quincy-Voisin, Barbara presented the mayor, Jean-Jacques Jego with a copy of The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" supplement.

She said Quin-zee Sun. He might have said Kan-see Sun.

Barbara has visited 10 of the approximate dozen Quincys in the U.S.: Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Washington.

And is planning a trip to Quincy, Calif. this year and might make it to Quincy, Ore.

"People in the other Quincys know I'm from out of town when I pronounce it Quin-zee," she says.

Just like we know when someone says Quin-cee.

But here in the first of all the U.S. Quincys, it will still be Quin-zee as it has been since Colonial days.

Our Quincy, of course, was named for Colonel John Quincy, great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams and that's the way he and the family pronounced it.

And, that's good enough for us.

WINSTON CIARDELLI of Intervale St., isn't giving up.

He still hopes to get President George W. Bush and his father, former President George H.W. Bush to visit Quincy.

It would be a fitting tribute, he says, to the first father and son presidents -- John and John Quincy Adams -- by the second father and son presidents.

Ciardelli recently wrote a letter -- his second -- to President Bush stressing that the visit "is an opportunity that must be taken advantage of and not let slip away."

The letter reads:

"Almost two years ago I sent you a letter dated Feb. 19, 2002, requesting that you and your father visit Quincy, Massachusetts, birthplace and final resting place of the first father and son Presidents of the United States.

"I realize you are an extremely busy man under great pressure. However, I feel strongly that you and your father, President George Bush, should come to our city and visit the simple homes and graves (tombs) of President John Adams and President John Quincy Adams.

"I feel it would be a great honor and fitting tribute. While your father is still an active former President, I really feel this is an opportunity that must be taken advantage of and not let slip away: the second father and son Presidents of the United States honoring the first father and son Presidents of the United States.

"I humbly ask that you and your father please consider this request from a proud citizen who lives in a city rich with history. Thank you for your time and consideration."

ON THE POLITICAL front, Maryann Mahony is gearing up for another run for the Ward 6 city council seat.

MAHONY

It will be her third bid against incumbent Joseph Newton. Last time out she trailed by 847 votes.

"I have my campaign committee all set and ready to go," she says. "And you know what they say about the third time."

PERSONAL: Want to wish the very best for Ray McEachern of The Patriot Ledger, as he prepares for a kidney transplant.

McEACHERN

Ray, a good friend (as well as a good competitor,) has been a true "gentleman of the press" throughout his newspaper career. He's from the old school where being accurate -- and fair to both sides -- is more important than the size of the headline.

Good luck, Ray, as you begin what you call your "new adventure." And a happy ending.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 25, 1759, Scottish poet Robert Burns is born. Perhaps more famous for his lively lyrics in the Scottish dialect than for his longer, more literary poems, Burns is still beloved and celebrated today as the author of the New Year's anthem "Auld Lang Syne."

• On Jan. 26, 1838, the first Prohibition law in the history of the United States is passed in Tennessee, making it a misdemeanor to sell alcoholic beverages in taverns and stores.

• On Jan. 24, 1908, the Boy Scouts movement begins in England with the publication of the first installment of Robert Baden-Powell's "Scouting for Boys."

• On Jan. 21, 1959, Carl Switzer, better known as "Alfalfa" from the "Our Gang" comedies, is shot and killed in a brawl after an argument over a $50 debt.

• On Jan. 22, 1973, the Supreme Court decriminalizes abortion by handing down its decision in the case of Roe v. Wade. It was not the first time that abortion became a legal procedure in the United States. In fact, for most of the country's first 100 years, abortion as we know it today was not a criminal offense.

• On Jan. 23, 1990, Robert Morris, 24, is convicted for spreading a computer virus via e-mail in November 1988. The decision marked the first time a computer-virus perpetrator was convicted under federal law.

Pioneer Institute Plans Better Government Contest

The Pioneer Institute, a non-profit research group, is sponsoring its 12th Better Government Competition seeking ideas to improve the quality of government services and a more efficient delivery of them.

"Making government more efficient should always be our goal and I urge my constituents to participate by sending in an entry," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

This year's competition poses four problem statements in the areas of special education, the state's budget crisis, Medicaid funding and small business development.

One winning entry in each category will receive a prize of $1,000. Implementations of winning ideas from previous competitions have saved Massachusetts taxpayers more than $300 million.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1913 POSTCARD is a view of the Civil War Soldiers and Sailors monument at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. When the war began in 1861, Quincy was still a small town with fewer than 7,000 citizens. In the four years of the war it sent 953 of its men and boys to fight for the Union, and 113 of them died. Among them was Francis L. Souther, the first Union soldier to be killed. This monument was dedicated in 1868 to the memory of those 113 fallen heroes. The magnificent 34-foot tall Quincy granite monument was designed, carved and erected by the Mitchell Granite Co. for $4,300. It originally was to be placed in a prominent location in the Square at the corner of Hancock and Washington Streets, but for some reason Town Meeting decided to locate it in the then new Mt. Wollaston Cemetery. It was arbitrarily placed by a committee in the geographical center of the cemetery, which was not only an obscure site but also happened to be in a dale or small valley. Quincy's very disgruntled Civil War veterans fought for over 50 years to get the monument out of its low hidden-from-view location. Finally, in 1923, it was relocated to its present site, which is a prominent knoll in the southwest corner of the cemetery. The veterans, members of Quincy's Paul Revere GAR Post, were also instrumental in procuring the 19th century Naval cannons that surround the monument today. This postcard view is of the old location. If you are interested in the Civil War, it is worth a visit to read the bronze tablets on this monument.

Appeal From Broad Meadows School: Help Keep The USS Salem Here

The U.S.S. Salem might be leaving unless you do something about it.

I think the people should have the right to know what is going on in their community. If you have family that has lived here during World War II and work in the shipyard, then you should know what I'm talking about it.

At the end of June, the MWRA wants to take away the U.S.S. Salem. They say we don't have enough tourism here in Quincy for the ship to stay. In Salem they have a lot of tourism as all the people visit there. That ship belongs to us! Our families worked in that shipyard to build ships to protect our country.

The students at Broad Meadows Middle School heard about this on Jan. 16 when Mrs. Margaret McLean Laforest came to our school to talk to us about what is going on. Margaret was a student at Broad Meadows and she is one of the people who brought the U.S.S. Salem here in Quincy.

When Margaret heard that the MWRA wanted to take away the ship she was devastated. She thought where could I go to get help? She remembers how the kids at Meadows help people in so many different ways.

At Broad Meadows they have a group called O.D.W. operation day's work. With the help from our seventh grade teacher Mr. Adams and a group of students, they help raise money to build schools in different countries for all the unfortunate kids who don't have an education. O.D.W. makes many kids' dreams come true.

Broad Meadows is trying to help Margaret and keep our history in its home, Quincy not Salem, Mass. It is our history and with your help you will keep it where it belongs! It's your choice. Please help us.

A Resolution

The Boston Globe has reported that a 14-year-old girl, Kate Robinson, from Hillpoint, Wis., made this powerful promise for a New Year: "My resolution is to never sink to other people's levels when they are supermean."

Wouldn't it be divinely beautiful of our dear President, George W. Bush, would make the same resolution? That resolution would secure universal peace from Atlantic to Atlantic.

The newly-born Christ wants us to love the mean people because Christ came, specifically, to save them, all of them.

Plan E Defeat Celebrated By Plan A Committee

This Week
1956
47 Years Ago

The Citizens Committee for Plan A held a victory celebration to commemorate the defeat of Plan E in the November election.

Laurence J. Curtin, one of the prime movers behind the Plan A Committee, told celebrators:

"Plan E, promised lower taxes and better government. It produced nothing."

"Don't be carried away with the propaganda that we need an outsider to run our city," said former Public Works Commissioner Angelo P. Bizzozero.

"The task belongs in the hands of the people who love Quincy."

The Plan E Charter, under which Quincy was governed since 1950, was voted out by a margin of 14,378 to 12,851.

HOSPITAL OVERCROWDED

Dr. Joseph P. Leone, director of Quincy City Hospital, said "overcrowded conditions at the hospital are very bad and they are getting worse."

In the past few weeks, said Dr. Leone, it was necessary to deny admission to several acutely ill patients because the waiting list averages 25 to 35 and lengthening.

COMMUNISTS ASSAILED

Rev. Oswald A. Blumit, 45 Myopia Rd., Wollaston, told the Quincy Kiwanis Club that native communists and fellow travelers "are the most dangerous communists and enemies of our American way of life."

The way to handle the communist menace, he said, is to fight it and not practice appeasement.

Rev. Blumit advocated breaking off "every relationship with ungodly Russia. No matter how fair you are with Russians they won't be fair with you."

Quirk Pledges 'Best Use' Of Shipyard

him to make the move.

"With the purchase of the shipyard I have an opportunity to make even a larger contribution to the community and the local economy," said Quirk.

Marinelli, who represents Quirk, said the auto dealer is "working around the clock" since he purchased the site last week. He said it was too early to discuss how much of the site would be devoted to the car auction.

"This is a community undertaking," said Marinelli. "We intend to do good things there. We were a bidder that had a use for the site and can foresee other appropriate uses in concert with Mr. Quirk's use. Dan Quirk is open to suggestions, and he wants everyone to be involved."

Mayor William Phelan said he was scheduled to meet with Quirk this week on the subject.

Ward 2 Councillor and Council President Dan Raymondi said he invited Quirk to attend tomorrow's (Friday) meeting of the Fore River Redevelopment Committee to get a better idea of the auto dealer's intentions.

Marinelli said Quirk intends to attend the meeting, barring any unforeseen circumstances.

Regardless of his plans, Dan Quirk caught many by surprise. The auto dealer and two other bidders submitted their plans last week, even though the official deadline for bids had been Dec. 31.

The Maritime Administration, which controlled the auction as the largest creditor of failed shipyard developer Massachusetts Heavy Industries, said they reserved the right to extend the deadline for bids.

Raymondi criticized the bidding process, saying the city was left out of the loop.

"The public was led to believe that they would have some input regarding the sale of the shipyard property," he said. "But that didn't happen. The buyer came in late and was never part of the process.

Quirk said he was a qualified bidder for the shipyard and won the property "fair and square."

Raymondi said he is anxious to discover Quirk's plans for the rest of the property.

"It would be a shame if we lost the opportunity to provide good jobs for the community," he said. "My goal is to see that the buyer improves the infrastructure, cleans up the contaminants at the site and provides quality jobs."

Quirk said he has been in touch with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regarding environmental matters at the site. He said he intends to "reach an agreement with the EPA."

In addition, he floated the possibility of opening an "adult technical training center for the automotive industry" at the former shipyard site.

Quirk stressed the need for "proposals that produce jobs and that pay workers good wages."

"We have a lot to do in the next several months but I am excited about planning for future uses at the shipyard and creating good paying jobs for local residents," said Quirk.

Raymondi said the narrow defeat last year of his proposal calling for zoning changes to the property hindered the bidding process.

The proposed ordinance called for changing the zoning classification of the property from an Industrial B classification to one of Planned Unit Development. The proposal would have empowered the city with greater input regarding the redevelopment of the land, he said.

He said if the city council had approved the ordinance the sale of the property might have played itself out differently.

"The defeat of that proposal put the community at a disadvantage," said Raymondi, whose Ward the property is located.

Last week, the auction for the Fore River Shipyard began and ended with Quirk. The auction opened with his $9 million bid, the highest that had been offered in the qualifying round, and none of the other four bidders challenged it.

LAST WEEK'S AUCTION of the Fore River Shipyard in a warehouse drew a crowd of more than 100 to listen to the bidding.

The next highest bid, submitted by construction company Jay Cashman Inc., reportedly came in at $5.7 million.

Other bidders for the property were: developer Francis X. Messina, auto dealer Ernie Boch and Conroy Development of Stoughton.

The Maritime Administration disqualified another bidder, Dickinson Development of Quincy, because it placed a stipulation in its bid seeking a 120-day environmental review period.

The 130-acre property is assessed at $25 million. In 1997, the shipyard was appraised at $48 million.

Last Fall, Quirk bought 6.7 acres of undeveloped land located next to the former shipyard in Braintree for $2.3 million.

Quirk's dealerships and a wholesale auction reportedly sell about 20,000 cars a year. His company, of which he is the sole owner, includes dealerships for Mitsubishi, Mazda, Volkswagen, Ford, Chevrolet, Nissan and Kia automobiles.

Although Quirk purchased the 130 acres of land at the shipyard, the equipment on the property, including the 1,200-ton Goliath crane, was bought for $3.3 million by Myron Bowling Auctioneers of Ohio.

Under the terms of the purchase the company has one year to remove the equipment from the site.

In 1986, General Dynamics closed the Shipyard facility. Ten years later, the federal government approved loan guarantees that allowed Greek entrepreneur Sotiris Emmanuel to undertake a $100 million renovation of the decayed facility.

Emmanuel's company, Massachusetts Heavy Industries, defaulted on its loans and filed for bankruptcy in 2000.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Vegetable Casserole

As you must know by now, I love to cook and am always looking to serve something different. And so it was on the weekend after Christmas when we celebrated the holiday again with our son Jim and his family from the Big Apple.

I made a casserole including brocolli, cauliflower and artichoke hearts that was really delicious and easy to prepare. I used fresh vegetables, but it can also be made with frozen equivalents.

Broccoli, Artichoke, Cauliflower
1 pound broccoli florets (or a bunch)
1 head of caulifower
1 jar of artichoke hearts (or can)
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1/4 cup grated favorite cheese
2-3 tablespoons olive oil
2 garlic cloves (chopped)
1/4 cup whit wine (optional)

In the hot oil, saute the garlic, add the broccoli, cauliflower and artichoke hearts, add the wine at this point, or a bit of water if desired. Cover and on low heat, let it steam until the juices are all blended and the vegetables are as tender as you like.

When this is done, turn off the heat, and sprinkle the bread crumbs and grated cheese over the top, cover and let set for about five minutes. Place in a deep dish and keep in a warming oven. Or it can be microwaved just before serving.

George G. Burke Joins Quincy Medical Center Foundation

The Quincy Medical Center (QMC) Foundation announces Quincy attorney George G. Burke has joined the Foundation's board of directors.

GEORGE BURKE

Burke, a Quincy resident, is the founder and senior partner of the Quincy-based Law Offices of George G. Burke. During a long political career, he served as City Council president, state representative, and Norfolk County district attorney. As district attorney, he launched groundbreaking drug education courses in Massachusetts schools and was the recipient of a number of awards for his work in fighting crime and drug abuse.

Quincy Medical Center President and CEO Christine Schuster said Burke is an important addition to the Foundation.

"George Burke has dedicated his life to serving others through his work as an elected official, businessman, and community volunteer and Quincy Medical Center is proud to welcome him to the Foundation," Schuster said.

"The Foundation grows even stronger with his appointment. Mr. Burke has worked for the betterment of Quincy and he will bring that same kind of experience and commitment to the Foundation."

As a high school and college student, Burke was as an outstanding basketball player.

Burke is a 1950 graduate of Quincy High School, where he was captain of the basketball team. He is a member of the Quincy High School Hall of Fame. Burke spent 1951 at Thayer Academy, where he holds all basketball scoring records and is also a member of that school's Hall of Fame.

A 1956 graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Burke held many school basketball records that were later broken by the legendary Julius "Dr. J" Erving. He later joined the Boston Celtics.

The UMass Athletic Hall of Fame is named after Burke, who was inducted in 1981. The hall of fame lay dormant from 1982 until 1996, when it was revived through a generous contribution from Burke. The school's most valuable player award in basketball is also named after Burke.

In 1959, Burke received his law degree from Boston College School of Law, where he was class president. He also received an honorary doctorate of laws from the University of Massachusetts in 1996.

Burke is a member of the Quincy Bar Association, the Norfolk County Bar Association, the bar of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts and the Supreme Court of the United States of America. He operates a full service general practice law firm.

Burke has been the recipient of many awards and honors. From UMass, Burke received the Distinguished Public Servant Award, the Century Club Award, and the Chancellor's Award, the school's highest honor. Burke has also received the Distinguished Legislative Service Award, Munroe L. McLean Outstanding Achievement Award, Richard Koch Award for outstanding community service, Dennis F. Ryan Award for outstanding community service, Quincy City Democratic Award, Quincy Mayor Good Scout Award, and others.

Burke has been married to Sandra Backofen for 42 years. The couple has five children and nine grandchildren.

A TEE BOX and fairway -- among the 27 holes of the Quarry Hills Golf Course in West Quincy -- which should open for its first season of golfers this summer.

THE BOSTON SKYLINE provides a dramatic background for one of the greens at the Quarry Hills golf course in West Quincy. The course, officials associated with the project announced recently, will be ready for golfers this summer.

Lease Extension Ok'd By City

Quarry Hills To Host Golf This Summer

Residents will be able to tee off at the Quarry Hills golf course beginning this summer, according to officials associated with the enormous project.

Baseball and soccer fields should be ready for play this spring at the site, officials said.

During a recent City Hall press conference detailing a new, revised lease deal between the City and Quarry Hills developers, Mayor William Phelan said the recreation/golf course in West Quincy will produce substantial cash inflows worth more than originally promised.

A lease extension was drafted to enable developers to finish the upscale golf course and other recreational facilities. Under the original lease, the facility was to be completed by Dec. 31, 2002.

Phelan said the addition of five million tons of Big Dig fill, coupled with an expansion of the golf course from 18 to 27 holes, necessitated the extension.

A 2007 deadline has been set to complete the entire project. Quarry Hills officials say the facility should be completed well in advance of that date.

Representatives from Senior Tour Players, Inc., the company retained by Quarry Hills developers to oversee the project, said residents will be golfing on the first nine holes of the course this summer.

An additional nine holes will be open for play in September, 2004, officials said.

Tough, year-long negotiations between the City and Quarry Hills will prove to be beneficial, said Phelan. Under the new agreement, the city stands to take in 10 percent of nearly all revenue generated by the golf course and function facilities. This includes "Greens Fees" but not revenues from the pro shop, carts and range fees, according to the mayor's office.

This change will generate "millions of dollars" in added revenue to the city, the mayor said.

The new lease also guarantees rental payments of $1.3 million to the city.

"As we move from the construction phase to the actual operation of the facility, the City of Quincy is assured of broadened, well-defined revenue centers, as well as a public benefits package that did not exist before," Phelan said.

The city will receive $1 million when a portion of the Bates parcel - part of the Quarry Hills property – is sold, the mayor said.

Phelan said the new agreement includes other benefits for Quincy residents, including a 20 percent "green fees" discount for city residents four days a week, free use of the clubhouse for community groups and city events, and free use of the course for all Quincy high-school golf players.

Phelan praised Ward 4 City Councillor Bryan Connolly, who participated in the negotiations for the new lease. "The Ward 4 residents are lucky to have him (Connolly) representing them," said the mayor.

Councillors Want Cahill Seat Filled By Last Election Candidate

Two ward councillors want Tim Cahill's vacant City Council at-large seat filled from among the six unsuccessful candidates in the 2001 election and would like to see it done by Feb. 3.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly made the proposal in a joint resolve to be introduced at Tuesday night's council meeting.

The resolve noted that "it has been the practice of the City Council to select a successor, usually the runnerup, from the pool of candidates running for said position in the most recent municipal election."

The resolve noted that the council has had several 5-4 votes on important issues and that "the absence of a ninth councillor could have a significant impact on the decision-making of this body for the remainder of the calendar year 2003."

The resolve called for the "vote to fill Councillor Cahill's vacancy from the pool of candidates who ran for at-large city councillor in the most recent city election and . . . that the vote take place no later than the next scheduled meeting of the City Council."

The next meeting of the council is scheduled for Monday, Feb. 3.

The six unsuccessful candidates for councillor at-large in the 2001 election were John Keenan, Jimmy Liang, Brian McNamee, Denis Tardo, Julia Berberan and Robert Boussy.

Tardo, Berberan and Boussy were eliminated in the preliminary election. Keenan, Liang and McNamee finished in that order behind the three winners, Tim Cahill, Joseph Finn and Frank McCauley, in the final election.

Cahill, who was sworn in as state treasurer Jan. 15, attended his final city council meeting Tuesday. He said he would submit his letter of resignation as councillor Wednesday to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Patrolman's Union Opposes New Acting Chief Ordinance

The executive board of the Quincy Police Patrol Officers' Association has added its voice to those who oppose an ordinance that would allow the police chief to name an acting chief in his absence.

The current ordinance designates the senior captain to be acting chief when the chief is away or indisposed. Police Chief William Falco has proposed the change.

"At every situation where two police supervisors of equal rank are present, seniority dictates who is in charge," said Richard Praetsch, president of the QPPOA in a letter to city councillors.

"It's been that way since anyone can remember, and even if this ordinance changes, it will continue in all ranks except who becomes acting chief.

"Enacting the ordinance that Chief Falco wants would be tantamount to creating the position of deputy chief, outside the purview of Civil Service.

"If the Chief wants to create such a position, it should be within Civil Service, merit and exam-based, rather than designating whoever is in the Chief's favor at any given moment."

The Quincy Superior Officers' Association already has declared its opposition to the ordinance change.

"We wholeheartedly agree with the Superior Officers' Association that there is no need to change this ordinance," said Praetsch.

Charles Sweeny Named Quincy College Governor

Charles T. Sweeny, a co-founder of the school 47 years ago, has been named the 13th member of the Quincy College Board of Governors succeeding the late Richard A. Hart Jr., who died in May, 2002.

Members of the appointing council cited Sweeny's decades of public service and commitment to public education in making their choice.

"Charles Sweeny has been an advocate not only for Quincy College but for education in the city of Quincy his entire life," said Daniel Raymondi, a member of the appointing council.

"As someone who is deeply passionate about the institution he helped create 47 years ago, we're thrilled to give him the opportunity to join us in driving the future of Quincy College."

Sweeny served as a member of the Quincy School Committee for 22 years. He was also president of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees and a board member of the National School Board Association.

He has been a member of the National Committee for the Support of Public Schools, a member of the board of directors of Quincy Junior College and a member of College Course, Inc.

A resident of Quincy, Sweeny is a graduate of Philips Exeter Academy and Dartmouth College.

He will be sworn in as a governor by City Clerk Joseph Shea, himself a Quincy College graduate, at the Board of Governors' meeting Tuesday, Feb. 4.

CHARLES SWEENY has been selected to become the 13th member of the Quincy College Board of Governors. The former Quincy School Committeeman is congratulated by Appointing Council members Terry Lord-Piatelli and Dan Raymondi.

Beaches Commission To Create 'Coastal Heritage Trail'

The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission is seeking help from Quincy residents in creating a "Coastal Heritage Trail" of the city's 27 miles of coastline.

Leo Kelly, chairman of the commission, said residents this week would find a questionnaire along with the City Census in the mail.

The information gathered from the survey will assist the commission in creating a trail and map of Quincy's coastline, including historic locations and recreational areas.

The trail will serve as a link between, and gateway to, the city and the Boston Harbor Islands National Park.

Kelly said eventually the trail will be designated by signage, and a map/brochure will be available to residents and visitors.

The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission is working in conjunction with Save the Harbor Save the Bay and the Urban Harbors Institute.

McCauley Would Eliminate Special Elections To Fill Council-At-Large Vacancies

Councilor at Large Francis McCauley, long known as the watchdog of the city's pocketbook, has proposed three measures for the City Council's consideration, one of which may someday save the city $50,000.

The proposals were to be submitted to the Council Tuesday night and most likely referred to the Council's Ordinance Committee.

One is a home rule petition which would change the method by which vacancies are filled in the office of councillor at large.

The present statute calls for a special election if the vacancy occurs in the first year of the councillor's two-year term or appointment by fellow councillors if the vacancy comes during the second year.

In current terms, if Tim Cahill had resigned his seat when he was elected state treasurer last November, there would have been a special election to choose a successor.

By waiting until Tuesday night to resign, Cahill permitted the remaining councillors to choose his successor, thereby saving the city the expense (estimated at $50,000) of holding a special election.

McCauley's proposal would do away with the special elections and make vacancies in the councillor at large seats the subject of council appoints at any time during the two year term.

Ward councillor vacancies would be filled as they are now, by special election (costing some $6,000) during the first year and by appointment during the second.

McCauley said the change in picking councillors at large has the support of City Clerk Joseph Shea.

McCauley's second proposal is a petition to adopt Section 58A of the state's general laws which sets a maximum age of eligibility for appointment to the Police and Fire Departments.

At present there is no age limitation.

The act, if adopted, sets a maximum age of 32 s an eligibility requirement for civilians and 36 for eligible veterans.

McCauley said the age limit is endorsed by Police Chief William Falco, acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell and the Quincy Veterans Council.

McCauley also was to introduce a financial report that he had prepared which was referred to the Council's Finance Committee for future review.

Keenan Seeks Appointment To Cahill Council Seat

John F. Keenan, runner-up in the 2001 city council at-large election, has formally asked that he be appointed to the seat vacated by now state Treasurer Tim Cahill.

Keenan requested the appointment in a letter to Council President Daniel Raymondi for Tuesday's council meeting.

The Tuesday meeting was Cahill's last after being elected to eight terms, and at the end he submitted his resignation to City Clerk Joseph Shea effective yesterday (Wednesday).

Keenan, who served as executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets and is now executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement Board, polled 10, 282 votes in the 2001 election – 801 votes behind third seat winner Frank McCauley.

Keenan, in his letter, noted as the runner-up in that election, he was "the next choice of the people of Quincy."

With Cahill's resignation, Keenan said, "I am respectfully and formally requesting from the City Council the appointment to the Councillor at-large seat."

JOHN KEENAN

In the letter he also said:

"After spirited and well contested primary and final elections, a process during which the candidates revealed their educational and professional backgrounds, community involvement, positions on issues, and plans for the future of Quincy, the people of this city voted.

"They expressed through the ballot, in a fair and open election, their order of preference as to who should serve as Councillor at-large. As you know, I was the runner-up in that election, the next choice of the people of Quincy.

"Over the last few weeks I have spoken with each member of the City Council to express my interest in the appointment. I am grateful for their encouragement.

"Quincy faces difficult times but we all have great hopes for the future of our City. I would welcome the opportunity to work with the City Council, the mayor and all the people of Quincy to make those hopes reality."

Two other candidates for the appointment, Jimmy Liang and Denis Tardo, sent letters several weeks ago to the eight councillors who will make the appointment.

Liang, a Quincy restaurant owner and the first Asian-American candidate for the Quincy city council, finished in fifth place in the 2001 election. His vote was 7,171 – 3,109 behind Keenan.

Tardo, a real estate broker and a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars, was one of nine council at-large candidates in the preliminary election but did not win a nomination for the final election.

O'Donnell Land Court Assistant Recorder

William P. O'Donnell of Norwood. who succeeded the late Paul Harold as Norfolk County register of deeds, has been sworn in as assistant recorder of the Massachusetts Land Court.

By state statute, the register of deeds is also the assistant recorder of the state land court for his county.

"Both former Register of Deeds Barry Hannon and the late Register of Deeds Paul Harold left a great legacy here at the Registry," said O'Connell. "I hope to continue the outstanding work of these two men."

Something for nothing.

Lenient Building Codes May Contribute To Fires

(NU) — The United States has one of the worst residential fire safety records among industrialized nations around the world, despite having some of the best fire services, sprinkler coverage, designers and construction materials, according to the National Concrete Masonry Association (NCMA).

One reason could be that existing building codes, standards and construction practices favor the use of light construction, a practice that is not typical in other countries where fire safety records are better, said experts from the NCMA.

The National Fire Protection Association reported a total of 521,500 fires in structures across the country in 2001 (excluding the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks) resulting in 3,745 deaths and 20,300 injuries. In addition to lost lives, $8.9 billion in property damage resulted from structural fires.

While the nation's fire statistics have improved over the years, the NCMA maintains that those gains have been restricted by "trade-offs" made within building codes to reduce containment requirements provided by passive firewalls.

Fire safety experts say a balanced design requires buildings constructed with the equivalent protection of concrete masonry walls that won't burn and will withstand the impact of flying debris, explosions and the stresses of an everyday fire.

"One firefighter dies every 18 months in the collapse of a burning building constructed with lightweight wood construction," said Vincent Dunn, retired deputy chief of the Fire Department of New York. "And sprinkler systems, which rely on an available water supply, electricity and other mechanical features, do fail and are not arson-proof."

Mark B. Hogan, president of the NCMA, said citizens should demand the equivalent protection of concrete masonry firewalls in construction by asking elected congressional representatives to support the development of more restrictive fire testing and ratings for wall materials.

"Building codes that allow trade-offs without also requiring the equivalent protection of concrete masonry firewalls result in injuries, loss or property or, even worse, the loss of lives," Hogan said. "A change in building codes is long overdue."

Hogan urges voters concerned about lax building codes to send an e-mail to their elected representatives at www.nema.org/fire.

Bathrooms Built For Two

By BARBARA SCHMIDT
For NewsUSA

(NU) — Most of us can imagine our own glorious bathroom if space and cost were no object. We'd have our own private sanctuary where we could escape.

In reality, however, many of us have a small bathroom that we share with a spouse or other family members. Nothing shatters the dream of respite faster than toothpaste globs at the bottom of the sink, crusty medicine cabinets and collections of scummy shampoo bottles.

Creating a comfortable, functional bath that accommodates two isn't as difficult as you might think. Here are some tips for designing or remodeling your shared bathroom space to make it work for both of you:

• Double up. Installing two sinks is a simple way to keep the peace, allowing you to brush your teeth while your partner shaves. For added comfort, install the sinks at different elevations to accommodate your individual heights.

• Adjust the fixtures. If installing two sinks is not an option, make sure the height of the fixtures is comfortable for both of you. Many manufacturers now make sinks and toilets in various heights to meet the needs of different users. American Standard, for example, offers many sinks in their exclusive Right Height design. The sinks are a little taller, so bending over to brush your teeth or wash your face is more comfortable.

• Enhance the shower. Add a second showerhead opposite the original to transform a simple shower into a spa experience. A second showerhead adds more rejuvenating steam and can keep you both warm in a shared shower.

• Add some luxuries to make sharing easier and more comfortable. Install a whirlpool tub that's big enough for both of you to enjoy, alone or together. Add a built-in stereo with auto settings for both and separate CDs from your own private collections. Install a television with picture in-picture so you can both keep an eye on your favorite programs while getting ready for the day.

• If space permits, include separate areas for privacy in a shared bath. Separate rooms for the toilet or bidet provide privacy while allowing both to use the bathroom at the same time. Add a private steam room or sauna for absolute privacy and relaxation.

Finally, make sure that both of your tastes are represented in the design and décor of the room.

Consumer Tip

(NU) - Think light bulb shopping is a cinch? It might not be as easy as you think. A study by Philips Lighting Co. indicated that many consumers are in the dark when it comes to knowing what to look for in a light bulb.

To be a better light bulb shopper, look for these features on the package: life of the bulb; application; wattage; brand; type of bulb; bulb shape; and size of bulb base.

Keeping these things in mind at the store will shed some light on your light bulb shopping.

Prize Valued At More Than $23,000

Ann, Dick Aramian Win A Year's Free Rent At The Highlands At Faxon Woods

Ann and Richard (Dick) Aramian recently won a prize valued at more than $23,000 -- a year's free rent at The Highlands at Faxon Woods, a new luxury apartment community for active adults age 55 and over.

The Aramians, residents at The Highlands since last December, have been Quincy residents for the past 47 years. Previously, they owned a home in the Merrymount section of the city. Last spring, the couple decided they should looking into "downsizing" from the three-story house.

The Highlands recently held a special promotional event for its residents -- a drawing for one year's free rent. Asked what they plan on doing while living rent-free for a year, Dick Aramian answered, "Maybe I'll buy a new set of golf clubs." His wife added, "I'm sure the kids will benefit, too. We've never won a prize like this before."

ANN AND DICK Aramian, who recently won a prize worth more than $23,000 -- a year's free rent at The Highlands at Faxon Woods -- with Highlands Director of Operations Jennifer Landry.

After touring several communities in the area, Ann and Dick Aramian decided to make The Highlands at Faxon Woods their new home.

"We looked around, but kept coming back here. Nothing looked like this. It was beautiful," Dick said. "There is no more shoveling. I put the car in the garage and that's it."

"I was tired of running up and down three flights of stairs day in and day out," says Ann. "There were just the two of us in the house; our kids are now grown and have families of their own. It's a lovely change to come here and live with such great people."

Asked what they like best about their new home, Ann replies, "Everything! Everyone is so congenial and friendly. I'm meeting new people each day. The service is excellent and the staff goes out of their way to make us feel at home. They always have a smile on their faces, and they're always willing to help with any requests."

Dick adds, "Living here, this is the first time I've been able to play pool in 61 years."

The Highlands at Faxon Woods is owned and managed by New Jersey-based Roseland Property Company. This is Roseland's first development in the Massachusetts area.

Presidents Primed For State Tournament

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School hockey team appears to be hitting its stride as it closes in on a berth in the state tournament.

Senior Joe Bohan scored a hat trick to lead the Presidents to their fourth straight victory Monday afternoon at Quincy Youth Arena as they topped Rockland, 5-3.

Quincy (8-5 overall, 5-4 Atlantic Coast League) needs one win in its final five games to return to the postseason.

It traveled to Plymouth North yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night at 7:50 it faces off with North Quincy. Next week it plays Rockland Monday, Whitman-Hanson Wednesday and Nauset Saturday.

"We need one more win in our final five games to qualify," said head coach Bob Sylvia after Monday's game. "It's a nice time to be coming around. The tournament is just around the corner."

Quincy came out flying against the Bulldogs in an action-packed opening period. Just 44 seconds into the game, junior Josh Giordani converted a pass from junior Dan Sullivan on a 2-on-1 break for a 1-0 lead.

Rockland evened the score at 2:37 when Sean Kelleher knocked a puck past goalie Keith Flaherty in front of the net.

Quincy's explosive offense — the same offense that scored 23 goals in wins of Dennis-Yarmouth, Nauset and Randolph — revealed itself when Bohan tallied a pair of goals in less than a three-minute span.

At 5:39, Bohan took a pass from junior Brendan Craig, broke in on goalie Chris Garofalo and beat him with a deke move. At 8:17, senior Brendan Conley fired a shot from the point on the power play and Bohan redirected in front for a 3-1 advantage.

The Presidents were clearly in control of the game until a major fighting penalty, in which a Quincy and Rockland player were ejected from the game. For the Presidents that meant they had to shorten from three lines to two.

"I thought we had them in control until the fight," Sylvia said. "That took our momentum away. We skate three lines and when you lose that balance it takes away your rhythm."

Rockland delivered a back-breaker late in the period when Mike Celesting scored with only 30 seconds left on the clock to cut the deficit to 3-2.

About midway through the second period the Bulldogs almost netted the equalizer on a power play but Flaherty was able to grab the puck just before it crossed the goal line.

Quincy extended its lead to 4-2 when Giordani fed Bohan in the slot for a power-play strike at 8:16.

Rockland's Sean O'Connor beat Flaherty in front at 12:12 to make it 4-3. Soon after, the Bulldogs had a flurry of shots in close range but were unable to push the puck past a sprawling Flaherty.

Two minutes into the third, Rockland had another chance to tie the game but Flaherty stoned O'Connor's break-away attempt.

"He's making a believer out of me," Sylvia said of Flaherty. "He just gets the job done. Jim Fatseas (volunteer coach at North Quincy) has helped him out and has been more than generous with his time."

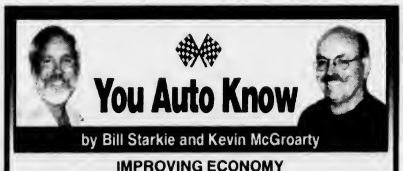
Quincy scored an insurance goal at 3:50 when senior defenseman Matt LaCorte blasted a shot from the point.

Red Raiders Fall At Silver Lake

The North Quincy High School hockey team dropped a 4-3 decision to Silver Lake on the road last Saturday night to extend its winless streak to five games.

The Red Raiders — 0-3-2 over that stretch — played Plymouth South last Wednesday to a 5-5 stalemate.

North Quincy (2-4-3 overall, 0-3-2 Old Colony League) took on Duxbury Monday, Marshfield yesterday (Wednesday), and Saturday night at 7:50 it clashes with rival Quincy at Quincy Youth Arena.



Silver Lake struck first six minutes into the game. In the second period, sophomore Paul Graham netted the equalizer with an assist from Rich Stone at 9:00.

Two minutes later, though, Silver Lake lit the lamp on a breakaway for a 2-1 advantage, and it increased its lead to 3-1 at 4:00.

With 40 seconds left in period, North Quincy made it 3-2 when senior Matt Grazioso scored with Bryan Cooper assisting.

In the third, Silver Lake scored what proved to be the game-winner at 7:00 for a 4-2 lead.

North Quincy closed the scoring when senior right winger Rob Mooney, in his first game of the season after recovering from an injury, beat the Silver Lake goalie with a slap shot. Grazioso and Tim Duggan picked up assists.

IMPROVING ECONOMY

One of the simplest steps that vehicle owners can take to improve fuel economy is to inflate their tires properly. The vehicle manufacturer usually displays a stated range of optimum tire pressure. Use the highest number in the range to maximize fuel economy. If tires are under-inflated, they can increase fuel consumption by as much as 6% by increasing rolling resistance. Properly inflated tires also last longer. It also helps fuel economy to be sure that your vehicle's wheels are properly aligned. Driving vehicles with front wheels out of alignment uses more fuel than necessary. In fact, periodic wheel alignments can help improve fuel economy by as much as 10%. Also have the brakes adjusted to minimize rolling resistance.

For your safety and comfort, as well as fuel economy, make sure your car's tires are properly inflated, whether it is owned or leased. Quincy Tops North

WRESTLING

One adage that has been tossed around the city of Quincy whenever the Presidents and Red Raiders lace them up in any sport is "to throw out the records."

Last Saturday morning at the Quincy gym that couldn't have been more true in a wrestling match.

Quincy High came in at 6-9-1 and North Quincy High at 9-1-2. Both were unbeaten in its respective leagues (Quincy 2-0 in the ACL and North Quincy 3-0-1 in the OCL).

What followed was a classic battle, with Quincy topping its neighbors, 34-29.

Quincy came out strong, winning the first five matches contested on the mat and opened up a 21-6 lead. Sophomore Chris Reggiannini recorded a pin at 125 pounds, followed closely by a technical fall by senior Jason Chase at 130.

Seniors Mike Tetreault (135), Dennis Hill (140) and senior captain Jason Moore (152) all won close matches over their opponents to provide Quincy with the early momentum and loud fan support.

One More Win And Quincy Is In Tourney

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Monday night's game had the makings of a slow start for the Quincy High School girls' basketball team.

First, the Presidents had already crushed Brighton, 52-28, in the first meeting Dec. 30. Second, they were coming off two huge league victories on the road last week, the latter a thrilling 45-40 come-from-behind win over Plymouth North.

After a shaky first half Quincy turned it on and it coasted in the second half en route to a 51-26 victory, its third straight win.

"I thought the kids did a good job at the beginning of the second half," said head coach Jeff Bretsch. "We were flat for a while in the first half."

Quincy (9-3 overall, 5-1 Atlantic Coast League) hosts Whitman-Hanson tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 for what could be a historic game for the program.

With a win, Quincy will clinch a berth in the state tournament for the first time since 1983 — a long 20 years in the making. Quincy edged the Panthers, 38-35, in the first meeting Jan. 3.

"Whitman-Hanson is very solid," Bretsch said. "We struggled the last time we played them and I expect to be better. But they'll also be better. The kids are getting really excited. Win and we're in."

Against Brighton, Quincy only held a 24-15 lead at halftime as turned the ball over far too many times against a weaker opponent like the Bengals.

The second half, though, looked more like the Quincy team that is in a first-place tie with Sandwich in the ACL. The Presidents opened with an 11-2 run, with junior forward Brittney Tobin scoring the first two buckets, in the first five minutes to seal the game.

Junior guard Bonnie Hirtle scored in a team-high 17 points and junior point guard Sarah Shea tossed in 12, including three 3-pointers. Sophomore center Alysia DiMuzio scored six points and senior forward Shannon Paine grabbed 10 rebounds.

In the Plymouth North game, the Presidents struggled early and trailed, 18-14, at the break. In the second half they controlled the game and held a seven-point lead before the Blue Eagles hit consecutive 3-pointers to get back in the game.

Hirtle exploded for 30 points, including the final six with 1:30 left in the game to break a 39-39 tie. Shea drilled a 3-pointer before Hirtle's run that evened the score. Pained added four points and nine rebounds.

Presidents Roll To Third Straight Victory

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The 64-41 loss at Nauset Jan. 7 seems like a long time ago for the Quincy High School boys' basketball team.

Last Friday night at home the Presidents captured their third straight victory with a 70-66 triumph over Plymouth North.

"It's nice to win three in a row after a disappointing game at Nauset," said head coach John Franceschini. "The kids are feeling good and are on a roll. Hopefully we can keep marching on."

Quincy (6-4 overall, 4-2 Atlantic Coast League) hosted Matignon yesterday (Wednesday) in a non-league game and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it heads to Whitman-Hanson, a team it knocked off, 55-49, Jan. 3.

Since the Nauset game — the team's lowest point total this season — Quincy has been scoring more than the Oakland Raiders, averaging 70 points during the winning streak.

In the Plymouth North game, Quincy trailed, 32-31, at halftime and shot lights out in the second half to pull out the win. The Presidents connected on 5-of-6 3-pointers and hit 68 percent of their shots.

"Basically the story of the game was we shot the ball exceptionally well in the second half," We distributed the points over six guys in the second half."

Seniors Matt Ramponi (team-high 20 points), Kevin O'Connell (19), Shawn Munchbach (12) and Craig Keenan all nailed treys in the second half to keep the team within striking distance of the Blue Eagles. And with 4:30 left the Presidents took the lead and held onto it.

"We very easily could have fell behind," Franceschini said. "The 3-pointers kept us in the game. We stayed hot and Plymouth North cooled a bit. Free-throw shooting down the stretch was also a big difference."

"I'm very happy that we're continuing to play good defense," he added. "Our defense has contributed to a lot of what we get in the offensive end."

Last Tuesday, Quincy stormed out to a 26-5 lead and routed Randolph, 65-43. O'Connell led the team with 21 points, senior forward Mike Quigley added 14 and Munchbach had eight.

"We just played real solid man-to-man defense," Franceschini said. "We really challenged their shots all night and that was the difference."

North Tamed By Tigers

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team suffered an unexpected setback Monday afternoon at Taunton.

The Red Raiders, plagued by poor first halves this season, turned in another dreadful start against the Tigers and ended up falling, 55-43.

Head coach Doug MacFarlane thought his team had solved that problem last week when it manhandled Marshfield and Silver Lake from start to finish, outscoring them by a combined score of 112-47.

"That's a team we should've beaten," MacFarlane said. "We just did not come ready to play. There are a couple of factors. First it's a holiday and second is that there are midterms this week. That's always a bad time for basketball."

North Quincy (6-6 overall, 5-3 Old Colony League) hosts Falmouth tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30. In the first meeting Dec. 20 the Red Raiders prevailed in overtime, 50-42.

Against Taunton, North Quincy made only two of 14 layups in the first half and also turned the ball over 14 times, mostly just throwing the it away. Somehow it only trailed 21-18 at the break.

"We just couldn't generate anything," MacFarlane said. "It was one of those games. Whatever we tried to do just didn't work."

Senior center April Suprey, the league's second leading scorer at 18 points per game, turned in another solid effort with 20 points, 12 rebounds and three assists. She leads the team in all three of those categories.

"April has been pretty consistent all year," MacFarlane said. "Teams have been keying in on her and that's even more impressive. She's doing a great job."

In last Friday's 63-28 win over Marshfield, North Quincy held the Rams to only eight points in the first half despite being short-handed. It was missing senior quad-captains Lauren Kalil and Kristen DiMattio as well as junior Alyssa Dearani.

Suprey scored a game-high 25 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. Sophomore Sarah Goreham added 16 points and sophomore Amanda Saylor tallied a double-double with 10 points and 10 rebounds.

In last Tuesday's 49-19 win over Silver Lake, the Red Raiders limited the Lakers to only 11 first-half points. Suprey finished with 16 points and junior Ashley Ridge contributed eight points, including two 3-pointers.

"We really played well in those two games," MacFarlane said. "I was pleased with the way we came to play. I thought we had turned the corner for the season, coming out and playing hard from the beginning. We built big leads and we held them."

By CHRIS POISSON

Raiders Fall To Taunton

Head coach Jim Rendle expected a better performance from his North Quincy High School boys' basketball team against Taunton Monday afternoon at home.

The Red Raiders entered the game on a high, having snapped a four-game slide last Friday with a convincing 56-40 win over Marshfield. And they had a full roster — something they didn't have in the season-opening 73-37 loss to the Tigers.

It really didn't matter. Taunton showed why it's the supreme team in the Old Colony League this year, hammering the Red Raiders, 73-44.

"I'm very disappointed we gave up that many points," Rendle said. "I thought we were a better defensive team. I know Taunton is the best team in the league. But I would have liked to competed with them longer."

North Quincy (3-9 overall, 2-6 OCL) travels to Falmouth tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30. It defeated the Clippers, 58-43, in the first meeting Dec. 20.

North Quincy hung tough with Taunton early and held a 22-21 lead with 5:30 left in the first half when senior guard Kevin Holleran buried a 3-pointer. Holleran and junior forward Brandon Neves were injured when the two teams first met.

After that, it was all down hill as the Tigers went on a 10-0 run and took a 35-25 lead into the break. Paul Powlowski, arguably the league's best player, scored eight of his team's final 14 points of the half.

And in the second half Powlowski continued to carry the team, scoring the first six points as he took the ball strong to the hoop. He finished with a game-high 27 points and also dominated the boards.

"He took over the game, clearly he's the best player in the league," Rendle said. "We weren't denying him the ball the way we should of. In the second half we had to play catch-up. We're too young to be a catch-up team."

Freshman guard Kyle Costa scored a team-high 10 points and had five rebounds. Holleran added eight points and senior center Sean Bowes chipped in with six points and five boards. Neves grabbed eight rebounds.

In the Marshfield game, the Red Raiders turned in a great defensive outing, as they took a 20-13 halftime lead and held the Rams' best player, Mike Sullivan, to 11 points for the game.

"In the Marshfield game we played great defense," Rendle said. "It was just the opposite (of the Taunton game)."

at 125 pounds, followed closely by a technical fall by senior Jason Chase at 130.

Seniors Mike Tetreault (135), Dennis Hill (140) and senior captain Jason Moore (152) all won close matches over their opponents to provide Quincy with the early momentum and loud fan support.

A forfeit by Quincy at 145 gave North Quincy six points and the Red Raiders were ready to make their move.

Senior captain Chris Traietti started the comeback with a solid 8-0 win at 160. At 171, Dan Hooker provided the North Quincy contingent with hope as he recorded a pin just before the second period expired, closely followed by a first-period pin by captain Kosta Kalpakidis at 189.

After Darryl Zoia won an exciting 13-12 battle over Quincy's Frank McMurrough at 215, the Red Raiders had taken a 25-21 lead.

The heavyweight bout was another gem as Quincy's Dan Coleman and North Quincy's Corey Piazza exchanged two-point reversals, but it was Coleman's key near fall in the third period that proved to be the difference in the 11-10 bout.

Though Quincy still trailed 25-24, the Quincy coaching staff felt confident with the Truong brothers, Yen and Bao, on deck. Yen proved the coaches correct with a strong 11-3 win at 103 and Bao clinched the meet with a first-period pin at 112.

North Quincy's Eric Tso won, 15-3, at 119 to close out the scoring.

Though on paper it was an upset, 15-year head coach Lou Venturelli knew his squad had a chance.

SAD: Seasonal Affective Disorder

By DEAN TSAPATSARIS, LICSW
South Shore Mental Health

In the wintertime, when the days are shorter, some people experience a form of depression called Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD).

SAD is an extreme case of the "winter blues" that is caused in part by decreased exposure to light.

Symptoms Of SAD

The symptoms of SAD are similar to the symptoms of depression. The difference between the two is the timing of the depression. In cases of SAD, the depression occurs regularly during the fall or winter months. The symptoms of depression include:

• Changes in sleeping habits — sleeping too much or too little.

• Increase or decrease in appetite or weight.

DEAN TSAPATSARIS

• Loss of pleasure in activities once enjoyed.

• Trouble concentrating or making decisions.

• Persistent sad, anxious or empty moods.

• Thoughts of suicide.

What To Do

You don't need to wait until the spring months to overcome SAD. For mild depressive symptoms caused by SAD, try spending more time outdoors during the daylight hours or arrange your home and/or workplace to receive more sunlight.

For more severe symptoms, a light treatment called "phototherapy" can help. If phototherapy doesn't work, an antidepressant drug and/or "talk therapy," also known as psychotherapy, may help reduce or eliminate symptoms of SAD.

Bayview Associations, a program of South Shore Mental Health, has licensed psychologists, social workers and psychiatrists who can help. If you or someone you know could benefit from talking to a licensed professional, call 617-847-1950.

Psoriasis: More Than Skin Deep

(NAPS) — If you are one of the millions of people in the United States who suffer from psoriasis and are tired of sticky or greasy creams that ruin clothes and often don't work, there is hope.

More and more doctors are now prescribing oral medications in an effort to help their patients get faster and longer-lasting control over this difficult disease.

Psoriasis can be very frustrating for people of all ages, genders and races, and can greatly affect your lifestyle, emotional well-being, social life and ability to work. By taking these simple steps, you can help yourself take control of your psoriasis:

• Make an appointment with a dermatologist. More than 4 million people with psoriasis don't see a doctor regularly for treatment of their condition. Many give up hope if the medication they try doesn't work. Now doctors are increasing their use of system treatments for the disease, such as light therapy and oral medications (systemics). These approaches often have better results than topical treatments (creams), generally used to treat milder forms of the disease, although systemics may have more side effects. If you have moderate to severe psoriasis, now is the time to seek help from your doctor.

• Ask your dermatologist about different treatment options. There probably are treatment options you have not tried. New research shows that earlier and ongoing use of a wider variety of therapies, such as oral medication, is often more successful in controlling severe psoriasis than creams. Some currently available oral medications provide effective treatment without the risk of suppressing your immune system and therefore are safer for people who have an infection, or are at risk for infection, although they may have other side effects.

• Get more information. There are resources available to help psoriasis sufferers navigate the sometimes confusing waters of diagnosis and treatment, as well as provide support and inspiration in continuing therapy over time.

One such resource, known as Psoria-Sense, is an American Academy of Dermatology award-winning education program for psoriasis patients sponsored by Roche. It provides thoughtful advice and suggestions on symptom relief and improving quality of life, as well as educational materials and special patient offers.

Resolve To Lower Your Cancer Risk

(NAPS) — This year, for your New Year's resolutions be sure to include some that can help lower your overall cancer risk.

The Cancer Research and Prevention Foundation, formerly the Cancer Research Foundation of America, recommends four simple steps:

• Get your body moving. Physical activity can help keep your weight in check and make your body stronger and more flexible.

• Keep your weight in check. Obesity puts you at higher risk for several health problems, including some cancers.

• Stop using tobacco. Tobacco can increase your risk for several cancers. If you use tobacco, quit. If you don't use it, don't start.

• Keep alcohol use in check. Drinking alcohol increases the risk for some cancers. If you drink, do so in moderation.

Pan-Mass Challenge Cyclist Registration Begins Jan. 28

Thousands of cyclists from across the nation will begin registration online for the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC), the nation's most successful bike-a-thon for charity, starting at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 28.

Epitomizing all that can be accomplished when individuals work as a unified force, nearly 4,000 PMC cyclists will be pedaling to raise $16 million for cancer and AIDS research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. Their collective goal: to surpass an overall fund-raising total of $100 million when they ride in the 24th annual PMC Aug. 2-3.

"PMC cyclists are people who want to be a part of the cure," said Billy Starr, PMC founder and executive director. "They don't have to be experienced cyclists or accomplished athletes, but they do have to be determined to raise money for cancer research and willing to pedal the miles."

And they also have to be quick to register. Within three weeks of registration last year, more than 3,000 cyclists were signed up to ride, Starr said. Registration is $125. To register for PMC 2003, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

In August, cyclists will come from 40 states across the nation to participate in the two-day event. They choose between six different routes, ranging in mileage from 89 to 192, and travel through 46 classic New England towns en route to the Wellesley and Provincetown finish lines.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts year after year to unite in a common mission — a world without cancer. The camaraderie shared by PMC cyclists is among the PMC's greatest accomplishments. Doctors at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute join their patients as teammates, riding for a shared goal. More than 125 PMC cyclists are cancer survivors. Thousands of riders have lost loved ones to the disease. Still more ride in honor of those in treatment.

While required to fund raise between $1,500 and $2,500 to participate, the average PMC cyclists raises $4,300. Their commitment to the fund-raising portion of the PMC journey is a testament to their dedication to the cause and their belief in the PMC mission. PMC cyclists have raised more than $86 million since 1980.

Today the PMC raises more money than any other bike-a-thon for charity in the nation — crucial funds that are making a difference in the lives of cancer and AIDS patients around the world. Hundreds have been members of the PMC family for more than 20 years.

From 36 cyclists in its first year, to this year's 4,000 cyclists, from having raised $10,000 to pedaling past $100 million, the PMC continues to lead athletic fund-raising events in terms of dollars raised — and donated — to the charity. The PMC is a model in fund-raising efficiency, as it annually contributes more than 90 percent of all funds directly to the Jimmy Fund.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

IMPLANTS

Dental implants involve the surgical placement of a titanium anchor in the patient's jawbone, which acts much like a tooth's natural root to hold a replacement tooth in position. While dental implants are more expensive than other tooth-replacement options, they provide the most natural look and feel. Implants should be considered when patients cannot comfortably wear a conventional, removal full or partial denture due to sore spots, inadequate bony ridge, or gag problems. Dental implants may also present an alternative to the placement of a bridge to replace a single tooth, owing to the fact that so much healthy tooth structure must be removed from adjacent (abutment) teeth to hold the bridge in place.

We can provide you with complete general dental services, from a professional cleaning (preventative) to full mouth reconstruction (repair), implants, periodontal treatments, and cosmetic dentistry. Good preventive dental care can help avoid unnecessary pain, expense, and possible tooth loss. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular professional dental health care. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Implants can be utilized to provide support for one or more teeth so that a crown, a fixed bridge, or an overdenture can be set in place.

Throughout the month of January, the First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave., is promoting a competition to encourage donations of food to help stock The Pantry Shelf at Interfaith Social Services.

The center aisle of the church sanctuary was used to divide the congregation into two teams, the pulpit side versus the organ side, and all food items contributed by people sitting on one side or the other are counted for that side's total.

The competition will culminate Jan. 26 with a Souper Bowl Sunday observance. All people who attend the 10:30 a.m. worship service that day will be challenged to bring a can of soup or contribute $1, in recognition of the fact that so many people go hungry while others are enjoying Super Bowl parties.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

A crisis and confusion is a part of living. Each of us must face some sort of crisis or confusion sooner or later. To face a crisis requires courage -- and courage is a personal matter. Courage can not be leased, borrowed or bought. It must be drawn from one's self for one's self. And when courage is shown, confusion can and often does disappear.

Ever since time began, the greatest source for courage has been traced to a foundation on a faith. Faith creates hope. Without faith and hope, courage is difficult to come by. In spite of dark clouds, faith, hope and courage will always be the means to let us see the rays of sunshine again. . .

"Life would not be worth living without faith. Faith in God; faith in ourselves; faith in our fellow-men; we should omit none of the three. Without faith in God, there is no hope for the soul; without faith in self, life is a miserable failure; without faith in each other, we should miss the sweet joys of friendship. Keep your faith bright, let its lustre never grow dim!" - Isa Scott Taylor

'Four Chaplains' Sunday Observance Feb. 3

The Veterans' Services Department reminds residents that Sunday, Feb. 3, will be observed as "Four Chaplains" Sunday, as mandated by the United States Congress.

Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of the Quincy's Veterans Services Department, recalled the story behind the fateful day.

In February, 1943, the troopship Dorchester was struck by a German torpedo in the frigid waters in the North Atlantic ocean, Bradley said.

During the melee on the ship, four chaplains, George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic, provided comfort and handed out life jackets to the wounded men, Bradley said.

The four chaplains gave their own life jackets to those without them. It is said that the four men of faith linked arms and bowed their heads in prayer as the ship sank.

Only 230 of 902 men survived the attack, Bradley said.

Survivors will never forget the sights and sounds on the ship while the four chaplains performed a completely unselfish and heroic act, he said.

The Golf Club at Quarry Hills

Coming Soon!

View of the Boston Skyline from Hole 7, The Golf Club at Quarry Hills

The Golf Club at Quarry Hills, a 27-hole, championship golf course, located just a few miles south of downtown Boston, will feature three distinct "9's," situated around a full-service, beautifully appointed clubhouse and outdoor pavilion with spectacular views of the Boston skyline and Harbor, Quincy Bay and the scenic Blue Hills. Every hole offers five sets of tee boxes, making each a challenge for golfers of all skill levels.

Accompanying the 27-hole championship golf course, spacious clubhouse, function rooms and outdoor pavilion, The Golf Club at Quarry Hills will also offer golfers a state-of the-art driving range and short-game practice area. These amenities, combined with the close proximity to downtown Boston and the convenient access from points south are the perfect setting for corporate outings, weddings and special events.

The projected golf course construction schedule shows the first 9 holes open by summer of 2003, the second 9 holes open by early summer of 2004 with the last 9 holes completed by spring of 2005.

Separate from the golf amenities, Quarry Hills will also feature a Community Sports Complex consisting of 4 Little League baseball/softball fields and 1 international soccer field, slated for completion in late spring of 2003.

As we near our opening, we'd like to recognize the people who, by working together in a spirit of cooperation, are making Quarry Hills a reality.

Hole 1, The Golf Club at Quarry Hills

Hole 9, The Golf Club at Quarry Hills

We would like to thank the officials of both the City of Quincy and the Town of Milton, and the Citizens Advisory Committees of both municipalities. Without the help of these people and many others, we would not be able to bring this fine facility to fruition.

We would also like to acknowledge the many people of Quincy, Milton and surrounding communities who have so generously offered their support and encouragement of our efforts at Quarry Hills.

To all of you, our sincere thanks!

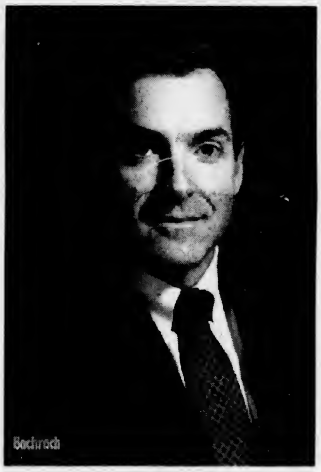
A Life Based On Principles And 'Putting People First'

Paul Harold Selected Posthumously As Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The late Paul D. Harold, a favorite Quincy son whose life and political career were founded on principles and "putting people first," has been selected posthumously as The Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year" for 2002.

Harold was the unanimous choice of a panel of judges selecting from a field of 24 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.



He is the 18th recipient — the second posthumously — of the award presented annually for outstanding community service.

The late Richard J. Koch, Sr., executive director of the Quincy Park Department, was the first posthumous recipient in 1987 for his many years of leadership in charitable causes.

The 2002 award will be presented to the Harold family at a reception April 6 at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Joseph R. Harold, III of Scituate, a nephew, speaking for the family, said: "We are grateful to this wonderful honor to Paul."

Paul Harold's brother, William Harold, is now living in San Diego, Calif. Local family members are three aunts, Helen Norcott and Marie Cordani of Quincy and Edith Brickhouse of Braintree; two other nephews, Patrick Harold of Hingham and John Harold of South Boston; a niece, Karin Harold of Sandwich; and a sister-in-law, Eleanor Harold of Hingham.

PAUL D. HAROLD

Harold, whose political career spanned 27 years as city councillor, city council president, state senator and Norfolk County register of deeds, died last Aug. 12 at age 53 after a two-year battle with stomach cancer. He was in his second year as register of deeds.

During those 27 years he made it a point to find time for many charitable and civic causes.

Harold received two posthumous nominations for the award.

Jean M. Wood, his fifth-grade teacher at the Nathaniel Hunting school now living in Santa Cruz, Calif., said:

"Paul gave unselfishly of himself for many years and fought for what was right for the people of 'His City.'"

Natalie Fossati of Kenrick Avenue, South Quincy, cited his "deep and sincere concern about principles of government both locally and internationally. Of further interest was the future of Quincy and its citizens."

Coincidentally, it was Harold who suggested that The Sun establish a Citizen of the Year Award with readers having input in the selection of the recipient.

Harold himself was nominated several times for the award but each time disqualified himself. He preferred to serve on the judging

Asks MARAD To Reject Quirk's Bid

Cashman May Go To Court To Block Shipyard Sale

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Developer Jay Cashman, the second highest bidder for the Fore River Shipyard, said he might go to court to prevent top bidder Dan Quirk from taking final ownership of the property.

Cashman told The Quincy Sun he may take the issue to court if the Maritime Administration does not reject Quirk's bid and award the yard and equipment to him.

"We believe it is much more productive to work out solutions than to litigate with people," said Cashman. "But if Quirk's bid is not thrown out we might consider a legal challenge."

Cashman said he is discussing his options with lawyers.

He maintains that the terms of the auction allow MARAD to reject Quirk's bid if the auto dealer's business, background or plans for the site do not maintain a marine industrial use and infrastructure.

Attorney Frank Marinelli, representing Quirk, would not comment on the matter.

Quirk was awarded the property after no one challenged his $9 million bid at the auction. Cashman bid $5.7 million for the land and $1.3 million for the equipment, which included the 1,200-ton Goliath crane.

Myron Bowling Auctioneers of Ohio won the equipment at the auction with a high bid of $3.3 million.

Cashman wrote to Jean McKeever, associate administrator for ship building at the Maritime Adminstration, saying, "MARAD should carefully review the bids and determine which bid produces the best use of the site and the best result for MARAD, the communities involved and the taxpayer dollars already invested in the Shipyard before determining who is, in fact, the highest qualified bidder."

Cashman said his letter has "stirred up a lot of interest" at MARAD. He said he spoke to McKeever, who indicated that MARAD was reviewing his request.

Cashman said he would not dismantle the existing infrastructure if he were able to purchase the site. He criticized Quirk's idea of moving his car auction to the property.

"I respect Dan Quirk, but what a waste to dismantle the shipyard after tens of millions of public money was spent trying to revitalize it," Cashman said. "Once everyone has had a chance to re-

Liang Withdraws From Consideration For Cahill's Council Seat

JIMMY LIANG

Jimmy Liang has decided to withdraw from consideration for the City Council at-large seat vacated by Tim Cahill to assume full duties as the new state treasurer.

Liang, a Quincy restaurant owner and the first Asian-American candidate for the Quincy city council, finished in fifth place in the 2001 election with 7,171 votes.

In a letter to City Council President Daniel Raymondi, who will convene the remaining eight councillors to select Cahill's successor, Liang said:

"I have accomplished a lot in the past two years, personally, in business and in politics. My goal was never to divide the city but to unite it.

"My goal was not to create a political force that is set apart, but to build one that can participate in mainstream of the political process.

"My goal has been to involve my community because it is good for them and it is good for you. The city's diversity should never be allowed to divide us, for that will weaken us, therefore I withdraw my name from future consideration.

"When and if I am fortunate enough to join your body, it will be because Quincy has made an even greater stride than it now makes. It will be because the people elect me."

Liang told The Sun Tuesday that he will run again for the city council in this year's election.

John Keenan, who served as executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets and is now executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement Board, is seeking the appointment. He was the runner-up in the election polling 10,282 votes.

Denis Tardo, a real estate broker and a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars, also has asked to be considered.

He was one of nine council at-large candidates in the preliminary election but did not win a nomination for the final election.

Outside Firm Proposed To Collect

Unpaid Parking Tickets Reach $1 Million

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Approximately $1 million in unpaid parking tickets is floating around out there, and the city has very little means of tracking it down, according to city officials.

Quincy's inability to track and collect delinquent parking tickets has resulted in an accumulation of more than $1 million in unpaid tickets dating back to 1995, according to the city's Purchasing Agent Al Grazioso.

Grazioso told the City Council last week that Quincy is "behind the times" and needs to collect revenue and process unpaid tickets in a more timely, efficient manner.

With the support of Mayor William Phelan, Grazioso proposed hiring an outside firm that would help track and process overdue parking tickets through the use of state-of-the-art software, computers and training.

The proposal was tabled last week after Councillor Frank McCauley said he wanted more time to review it.

The issue may be raised again at next week's council meeting, according to Thomas Largey, the mayor's director of operations.

Currently, the city's tracking system is so antiquated that it has very little means of enforcing the payment of parking tickets, Grazioso said at the meeting.

He said the situation is so bad that only 55 to 60 percent of revenue from unpaid tickets is collected. In addition to the $1 million worth of uncollected tickets since 1995, he said the city has records of tickets that have gone unpaid since 1985.

Grazioso said the city issues approximately 35,000 parking tickets annually.

Another issue hindering the city's plight is its inability to generate late fees for motorists who fail to pay their tickets within 21 days.

Grazioso said cities and towns derive much revenue from late fees. If tickets are not paid in a timely manner then the city can tack on a $5 late fee.

The city has missed out on significant revenue because it has been inefficient in generating late fees, Grazioso told the council.

"Late fees are important, this is money the city is not generating," he said.

Grazioso said the company, MVP Enterprises of New Jersey, would link the city to the Registry of Motor Vehicles. This would allow the city to track delinquent parking tickets and communicate that information to the Registry. Many cities and towns participate in a program with the Registry that prevents delinquent ticket payers from renewing their license or automobile registration.

Currently, the city is not linked to the Registry, Grazioso said.

Grazioso said the city researched other companies with similar services and MVP Enterprises emerged with the lowest price tag. He said the company has a "good track record" and has worked with other cities and towns, including New Bedford.

Largey said hiring MVP would be money well spent, because the company would be bringing in significant revenue from ticket collections.

Grazioso said MVP would take a 10 percent cut of whatever it recoups for the city. It would not get paid if it does not collect.

In addition, the company would charge a flat fee of $1.15 for every future ticket processed. The fee would be charged to cover follow-up notices and communicating with the Registry.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin agreed that the city needs to do something to improve the way in which it processes and tracks parking tickets.

Coughlin said the City of Cambridge has been very efficient on this issue.

"They don't mess around in Cambridge," said Coughlin.

Currently, the city's purchasing office handles ticket collections and data entry. If hired, MVP would be responsible for hiring employees to do the collection work, Largey said.

Police Investigating Death Of Man Found Near The Parkingway

Quincy police are investigating the death of a man found with a severe head wound Tuesday morning near the Parkingway.

The man was found lying on his back between the Petco store and the MBTA Red Line tracks at approximately 5 a.m Tuesday.

Police said they had not determined whether the death was accidental or the result of foul play. It was possible that the man may have fell from the roof of the Petco store, police said. He may have been hit by a car, police said.

At press time, police were still trying to determine the identity of the man.

Phelan Names O'Connell Permanent Fire Chief

Mayor William Phelan has named Acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell as permanent chief.

A fourth generation firefighter, O'Connell joined the Quincy Fire Department in June 1973. He was promoted to lieutenant in 1978, captain in 1984, deputy chief in 1987 and was promoted to chief in 1989. He returned to the rank of deputy chief because at that time he preferred fighting fires.

"This is a great day for the Fire Department and for the entire city of Quincy," Phelan said. "Chief O'Connell has a wealth of firefighting experience, extraordinary management skills and a passion for the department. He is respected throughout the city and in particular by his men."

PAUL O'CONNELL

O'Connell, who lives in Stoughton, served in Vietnam where he received the Purple Heart. He holds a degree in fire science from Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

He and his wife, Judith (Venckus), have a daughter, Jennifer Barucci, and a son, Brian. His father, "Bud" O'Connell, served in the Quincy Fire Department for 33 years.

TRAFFIC SUPERVISOR Debbie Donelin knows there will be warmer days come spring but she was ready for Tuesday's 18 degrees temperature and wind chill minus 7 as she crossed Beechwood Knoll students at Fenno and Havilend Streets.

City Council To Hold Hearing On Highpoint Project Feb. 3

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The City Council will hold a special hearing Monday, Feb. 3, regarding construction at the $250 million Highpoint project.

Area residents who have been impacted by construction are expected to attend the hearing, which is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

Some residents claim that blasting at the Highpoint project has caused significant damage to their property.

Congress Group Ventures of Cambridge, the Highpoint developer, has been invited to make a presentation and update the council on the status of the project, according to Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

Coughlin brought the matter to the attention of the council after some residents in his Ward logged complaints about the blasting.

"This hearing will be more of an educational forum for those members on the council who were not present when the Highpoint developer first began construction at the site," he said.

"We want to make sure that the Highpoint project is being developed in the least obtrusive manner to residents and abutters. But it is not my intent to beat up on anyone. I want something proactive to come out of this."

Coughlin said he is reviewing the city's blasting ordinances and evaluating whether they adequately protect residents. He said he has looked at similar ordinances in other cities and found them to be more "comprehensive."

"I think there is room to provide more safeguards for residents," he said. Specifically, he said the council should look at vibration and noise levels, and the location of residential areas relative to blasting sites.

Connolly Calls Meeting On MWRA Water Plans

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly will convene a meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the 2nd Floor Conference Room, City Hall, to address the MWRA's plans to renovate its water system that serves residents of West Quincy.

Connolly said the MWRA renovation will entail opening up patches of road from Blue Hills to the intersection of Furnace Brook Parkway and Copeland Street so that contractors can access water pipes.

Interested parties and residents are encouraged to attend.

Governor Tim Cahill?

Governor Tim Cahill?

You might get a smile out of Cahill himself on that but no hint he is even thinking of it.

Right now he has his hands full as the new state treasurer and his mind zeroed in on that job.

CAHILL

"My first priority is to help the governor and the legislature to solve the fiscal crisis," he says.

And with the state's fiscal picture as bleak as it is, that could keep him pretty busy for sometime.

But, what about a possible bid for governor somewhere in the future — maybe the near future?

Mention to him the fact that the last two state treasurers — Republican Joseph Malone and Democrat Shannon O'Brien — both gave up the office to run for governor and Cahill quickly notes:

"And, they both lost."

And, he adds:

"I'm looking forward to not running a political campaign for the next four years."

But what then?

Give him some time up there on Beacon Hill doing a good job and the governor's office might be something to seriously think about.

Cahill might just become the Democrats' best hope to win back the office that Republicans have owned for 12 years now going on 16: William Weld (1991), followed by Paul Cellucci, Jane Swift and now Mitt Romney.

Cahill has the assets for a bright political future.

Only 44, he's clean-cut, with boyish charm and a fresh face that should make him a standout around the State House.

All that and five energized in-residence campaigners: pretty wife, Tina, and four lovely daughters — Makena, 18, Nicole, 15, Devin, 13, and Kendra, 11.

A political candidate couldn't buy a family as attractive as that.

And Cahill has a couple of more big pluses: a hard working campaigner with a winning track record to show for it.

Cahill was first elected as a city councillor at-large in 1987 and won seven more two-year terms, topping his field four times.

He resigned last week with one year to go on his eighth term to assume his new duties as state treasurer.

In 1996, Cahill had won back the Norfolk County treasurer's office for the Democrats, defeating Republican incumbent Robert Hall.

Six years later, opportunity was knocking statewide when O'Brien decided to leave the treasurer's office to run for governor.

And for Cahill, running for state treasurer was like running an obstacle course. He was the outsider.

In the 2002 primary election he was up against James Segel of Needham, Boston City Councillor Stephen Murphy and Rep. Michael Cahill of Beverly.

Segel had most of the state's political power in his corner, and that was a concern for Cahill.

But what bothered him more was Michael Cahill, the one with the same last name.

Not only did he have the same last name but it was going to appear above his name on the ballot.

Tim Cahill had been campaigning stressing he was the only treasurer running for treasurer and was afraid there would be voter confusion with Michael Cahill.

So, what to do about it?

Enter daughter, Kendra, then 10 years old.

Why not campaign "Tim For Treasurer," Daddy.

And Daddy did.

Despite all the political clout wrapped around Segel and Michael (the-name's-the-same) Cahill, Tim Cahill won the nomination. And went on to easily defeat Republican Daniel Grabauskas, former Registrar of Motor Vehicles, in the final election.

An uphill battle but smashing victory for a statewide political newcomer.

Quincy has had two Presidents but never a resident elected governor. Native son John Hancock became governor but was living in Boston at the time.

BELLOTTI

The resident who came the closest to the governor's office was Francis Bellotti, who was elected lieutenant governor and attorney general but lost two bids for governor.

Tim Cahill could be the one to do it.

And maybe Kendra might have just the right slogan.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1957 postcard published by James H. McManus, owner of the Fox and Hounds Grill on Sea Street at the end of Quincy Shore Boulevard. He opened the restaurant in 1936 just a few years after prohibition ended. Over the years it became famous for its large baked stuffed lobsters and charcoal broiled club sirloin steaks. Perhaps even more famous than its food the restaurant featured a cocktail lounge with nightly entertainment. A few of the popular local personalities who appeared here were Hugh McGinness and later Hum and Strum. Sometime in the future we will publish a postcard view of the lounge. After McManus's ownership the restaurant, beleaguered by fires, had a number of unsuccessful owners. The most recent, who after a most disastrous fire, rebuilt a replica of the original building and named it the Custom House. It has recently closed and the property is now for sale.

Bigger Issues Than Stray Shopping Carts, Trash Pickers

As the City of Quincy starts another year, there are many public policy issues that need addressing. Issues such as overdevelopment that has a ripple effect on higher and higher rents and property taxes are one item needing attention at City Hall. Another is fire and police safety. There had been talk of taking out an engine company in Wollaston to save on overtime costs.

Another item is the condition of our streets and sidewalks. Atlantic Street like many streets in Quincy looks like a highway in Afghanistan after a rebel bombing. Our roads are in terrible shape. Another issue is our public schools. We still have no idea when we'll be getting a new high school. I also have a feeling Central Middle School will be celebrating its bicentennial where it is presently located.

Our mayor and city councillors need to be addressing these items but apparently the issue of stray shopping carts and trash pickers have jumped to the front of the line. No one likes to see all those abandoned shopping carts littering our neighborhoods and no one appreciates folks who rip open garbage bags looking for their pots of gold or is it a tonic can or two? However, as big a problem these two things (stolen carts and trash picking) are, we have much greater problems to concern ourselves with.

The latest word out of Beacon Hill is that the state's fiscal crisis is now coming home to cities like Quincy in the form of deep cuts in local aid. The other day, Somerville Mayor Dorothy Kelly Gay said if local aid was cut in her city by 10 percent, Somerville would lose $3 million. The first place to be hit would be public education followed by public safety. There are only so many places to cut. Here in Quincy, we would lose $4 million and the cuts would come from the very same place as Somerville in public education and public safety.

Cities and towns will become full partners with the state in sharing the pain. Boston Mayor Tom Menino in reacting to the governor's idea of local aid cuts said he won't mind sharing the pain but there's only so much pain you can share. I'm not exactly sure what he actually meant but I think he was talking about how those who can least afford to share the pain will probably be the most pained.

I don't think Quincy needs to be passing unenforceable ordinances against shopping cart crooks or trash pickers. I think we need to be facing up to the real fiscal crisis looming at our doorsteps.

Our elected officials need to be working full time in doing their part in creating a leaner city government without making us less safe or less educated. Would that trash picking and shopping carts be our worse problem.

Asks Quirk To Help Keep USS Salem Here

Now that Mr. Quirk owns the Fore River shipyard, wouldn't it be wonderful if he donated one of the wet slips so that the U.S.S. Salem could return to her place of birth?

It would not cost him or the City of Quincy one cent at the Salem is a self-supporting unit. Having a permanent home would make more people willing to volunteer their services and be proud to show tourists where Thomas A. Watson of telephone fame started the Fore River Engine Company which grew into the Fore River shipyard.

Thousands of us former shipyard workers would be eternally grateful to Mr. Quirk and proud to walk down "Quirk Way" to enjoy our handiwork.

Quincy's Yesterdays

3 Prime Sites For Industrial Development

This Week
1963
40 Years Ago

City Planning Director James E. Lee, speaking before the City Council's special committee on Shipbuilding and Industrial Development, cited three locations in Quincy as prime sites for potential industry.

They were land in West Quincy owned by granite manufacturer Peter G. Ruscitto; the former Naval Air Station in Squantum; and land to the rear of the new Patriot Ledger plant in South Quincy.

He also listed six locations for possible high rise apartment development, including: Clay St. or the Wollaston parking area; Quarry Hill in West Quincy; Morrissey Boulevard and Sea St. land across the street from Central Junior High School; Pine Hill off Willard St. in West Quincy; and the old Squantum Naval Air Station.

YARD PLANS LOWER BIDS

Daniel D. Strohmeier, vice president in charge of the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s shipyard division, said changes are being planned at Fore River to increase production and cut costs to meet competition.

Strohmeier's disclosure came in the wake of comments by Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass) that "Quincy Fore River Shipyard is pricing its bids too high in the competitive shipbuilding market."

Breakfast, Brunch Special

During the holidays we had several dinners and brunches, with family members bringing their own specialties. Our daughters Rita and Nancy have been getting raves over this great casserole dish. When it is cooked, it looks like a soufflé but doesn't fall apart when you cut into it.

Whipped brunch. breakfast special
9 eggs
1 pint half and half
6 slices bread cubed
4 to 6 ounces favorite shredded cheese (or combo of cheeses) six slices of bacon
any breakfast meat can be used including sausage ham, or a bit of each.
salt and pepper to taste
2-3 tablespoons butter or margarine

In a greased baking dish (or quiche dish), place the cubed bread, the cheese and the meats on the bottom. Whip the eggs and cream together. Pour over the top and drizzle with the melted butter. Bake in a 350 degree oven for at least 50-60 minutes. We served it hot right out of the oven and it cut perfectly.

VFW Asks Romney To Intervene To Keep USS Salem At Shipyard

The Massachusetts Department of Veterans of Foreign Wars has asked Gov. Mitt Romney to intervene to keep the USS Salem at its present berth at the Fore River shipyard.

Michael Condon, executive director of the Salem Naval shipbuilding museum, said Tuesday that a VFW resolution calls on the MWRA to honor its commitment to the Salem.

A cover letter from VFW State Commander Alan Hassig and State Adjutant Gordon Crosby asks Romney "to take a stand for the veterans by asking the MWRA not to sell the land where the Salem is docked."

It would be "unacceptable by our members to move the ship anywhere," Hassig and Crosby said.

"Men and women of all branches of the service worked for two years to bring this proud ship back to Quincy as a lasting memorial to the 'greatest generation,'" the resolution to Romney states.

Former Mayor James Sheets, chairman of the museum board, spoke before a meeting of the VFW's state leaders.

"They called us to see how they could help," Sheets said. "The VFW leadership was very supportive and truly shocked that the MWRA could act in such a manner. This ship is not just a museum, it stands as a memorial to the tens of thousands of men and women who fought and died for this country, as well as the proud ship building heritage of this region."

"The outpouring of support we have received has been heartwarming," Condon said. "I have received calls from all over the country offering help and asking what they can do. We have told people to write to the MWRA's Executive Director Fred Laskey as well as Governor Romney. We've had to post the addresses on our web site."

Melody Sanchez and Renee Tomer, students at the Broad Meadows Middle School, have formed the "Quincy History Club" with the purpose to "Save Our Ship." Every week Quincy middle school students take science classes aboard the Salem. The "On Board Education" program is sponsored by the Shipbuilding Museum. Its director, Dr. Bill Anderson, recently won a National Educator of the Year Award.

USS SALEM docked at the Fore River Shipyard.

Board Approves First Karaoke Establishment

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A "clean, safe and enjoyable entertainment" from young people to adults is how Atty. Edward Fleming described Quincy's first Karaoke at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

This will happen when Jeff Moon Chen opens his non-alcoholic Jazz Moon at President's Plaza, 223 Quincy Ave.

The board voted unanimously for the common victualer and entertainment license, a new concept, but Chen will have to close at 1 a.m. instead of his request to stay open until 2 a.m.

The 2400 square foot establishment next door to the new Asian supermarket will have a juice bar and 12 private Karaoke rooms which patrons may rent for $35 to $50 dollars an hour depending on the size of their parties which could range from two to three persons to 10 persons.

The rooms are rented on an hourly basis and although room size will vary, the average room is 9 1/2 by 13 feet. Each room will have a sectional couch and a computer to control the music.

Customers will be greeted in the waiting room and service area where there will be a juice bar and snacks for those waiting to rent their rooms. Some rooms can be reserved.

Fleming told the board that Chen has a letter of support with more than 300 signatures and said the concept of Karaoke will bring "some life back to President's Plaza."

Chairman Joseph Shea said he and several members of the board visited a similar establishment in Allston and said they arrived unannounced and were "pleasantly surprised" at the concept.

Shea said Chen's first request to the board was for a location on Hancock St. which the board was "hesitant to approve." But based on the Allston visit, his research was "all positive." He said he was surprised by the "magnitude of the project and the equipment".

Shea said President's Place "needs a shot" .

Chen originally wanted the business to remain open until 2 a.m. as Fleming stated "persons somehow choose later hours for this type of entertainment, and added these are the most "popular hours".

However, both Fire Chief, Paul O'Connell and Police Chief William Falco expressed concern over persons leaving some bars in neighboring towns after consuming alcohol to go to the Karaoke. Both agreed that a 1 a.m. closing would be better, where patrons could not rent a room after midnight.. Plus it would coincide with the hours of closing at the International Buffet also at the plaza.

Quincy College Official Optimistic About Solution On Rental Dispute

Despite a cool reception from some school committee members, the chairwoman of the Quincy College Board of Governors said she is still optimistic about city Council President Dan Raymondi's proposal to resolve a rental dispute.

Theresa Lord-Piatelli said she heard school committee members' concerns and still believes a workable solution can be attained.

"I came away with the feeling that we have opened up a dialogue," Lord-Piatelli said after the first meeting of a joint subcommittee Monday night. "Some of the concerns raised are issues that can be resolved. We don't see any of those concerns as fatal to Raymondi's proposal."

Last July, the school committee more than doubled the rent it charges Quincy College for Coddington Hall and two administrative buildings on Saville Ave. The rent increased from $217,000 to $450,000 annually.

The college continues to pay the old rate.

Raymondi proposed that the college pay the school committee in several installments, depending on the worth of the buildings. Once the payments are complete, the sites would be placed in the college's control.

The city would remain owner of the buildings because the college is considered a municipal department.

At the meeting, school committee member Jo-Ann Bragg said the committee does not want to give up control of the buildings.

Questions also were raised concerning the impact of Raymondi's proposal on plans to build a new Quincy High School. Raymondi didn't think his proposal would cause a problem.

"Both sides share many of the same visions and concerns, and we are both in the business of promoting and nurturing public education," said Lord-Piatelli. "But we need to be open-minded about this situation, because that's what brings about change."

WINTER! CAR CARE

AAA Offers Easy-To-Follow Wintering Motoring Advice

Winter driving is tough on motorists and vehicles. To help drivers make it through the toughest winter conditions, AAA Southern New England offers the following tips:

Charge !! Cold weather is tough on batteries. At zero degrees, a car's battery loses about 60 percent of its strength. At a comparatively mild 32 degrees, a battery is 35 percent weaker. Keeping battery terminals clean helps, but a battery performance test is performed by a qualified technician will help determine whether a car's battery is strong enough for winter starts.

Get A Grip – Before winter arrives, make sure your car is equipped with tires that are able to handle New England's winter weather. For most motorists, all-season tires are adequate. In more northern or mountainous regions, switching to snow tires may be needed. If you are using snow tires on a front-wheel-drive vehicle, four snow tires are required.

See and Be Seen – Danger must be seen to be avoided. Driving with a snow-covered windshield, windows, side-view mirrors or lights invites a crash. Clear windows, mirrors and lights with an ice scraper, brush or spray de-icer. Make certain windshield wipers and defrosters are in good working order and that washer reservoirs are filled with no-freeze windshield washer fluid. Remember to clean snow off the roof of the vehicle.

Slippery When Wet – In temperatures at or just above 32 degrees, a thin layer of water can cover the ice, causing extremely slippery conditions. The distance needed to stop on ice at 32 degrees is twice as long as at zero degrees.

Keep Your Engine Cool – Make certain cooling system antifreeze is mixed with an equal portion of water for maximum protection.

Fast Solution – A squirt of de-icer spray is a quick method to overcome frozen door locks. Once thawed, lubricate the lock with silicone or lightweight oil – avoid penetrating oils.

Air It Out – Don't let frigid temperatures tempt you into starting your car in a closed garage or idling your engine for long periods with the windows closed. Carbon monoxide, present in exhaust fumes, is almost impossible to detect and can be fatal when breathed in a confined area.

Finish Up – Road salt, slush and grime are especially hard on a car's finish. To help prevent rust and paint damage, keep cars washed and waxed. A full or self-service car wash makes the job easier when temperatures are low.

Strong Battery Boosts Winter Car Starts

One of the bests ways to protect against winter car trouble is to be certain your battery is fully charged and in proper working condition, according to AAA Southern New England.

"When the temperature drops to near zero, the number of calls AAA receives from standard motorists soars," said AAA Approved Auto Repair Manager Alfred Ruggiero. "The most common cause of these cold-weather breakdowns is a weak or dead battery."

AAA recommends motorists have a load test to closely monitor the condition of the vehicle's battery, especially batteries more than two years old. "Although batteries can carry warranties of four years or more, a warranty is no guarantee an older battery will continue to work in severe weather," Mr. Ruggiero said.

The most common sign of a weak battery is an unusual sound coming from the starter motor when the ignition key is turned, indicating difficulty in starting the engine.

If the vehicle is difficult to start, check that the battery connections are tight and no corrosion is present on the battery terminal. To remove corrosion, use an old toothbrush to clean the cable connectors and terminals with a solution of baking soda and water. Next, inspect the tension of all drive belts. They should flex no more than one-half inch. If the battery's fluid level can be checked, make certain the fluid covers the battery plates. If no problems are found and the vehicle is still difficult to start, drive to a service station or auto parts store to have the battery and charging system tested, and, if necessary, replaced.

AAA Recommends Emergency Equipment Kit

Because even the best maintained vehicles can fall victim to frigid winter weather, AAA recommends every vehicle carry the following items to ensure safe winter travel:

Flashlight: A working flashlight should be stored where the driver can access it without leaving the vehicle. That will enable the motorist to see obstacles and be seen by other drivers when exciting the vehicle in an emergency. Also carry spare batteries.

Jumper Cables: Jumper cables can be an essential tool for starting vehicles with weak or dead batteries, but they should only be used by individuals familiar with the proper safety precautions. Vehicle owner's manuals should be consulted for instructions.

Abrasive Material: Sand or non-clumping cat litter can be spread under the wheels to improve traction when a vehicle becomes stuck in snow or ice. Special traction mats and even floor mats also can be used for this purpose.

Shovel: A small shovel can be used to carefully dig snow away from the wheels.

Warning Devices: Flares or reflective triangles alert other motorists that you are broken down or stuck and helps give them enough time to slow down in order to pass safely.

Blankets: Cold weather can quickly turn an inconvenient breakdown into a life-threatening situation. Blankets can provide valuable protection against the cold and can help keep you comfortable until help arrives. Floor mats and newspapers can also be used to provide insulation in emergencies.

Snow Brush/Ice Scrapper: It's important that windows and lights are clear of ice and snow in order to maintain adequate visibility. The entire vehicle should be brushed clear so blowing snow does not become a hazard for other motorists.

Cellular Phone: A cellular telephone comes in handy when a motorist needs assistance in the event of a vehicle breakdown.

Paul Harold Selected Posthumously As Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

panel to select someone else for the honor.

A faithful son, he honored the memory of his father and mother, Joseph R. and Marguerite Harold, donating two handsome Victorian style chandeliers, costing $10,000, for the City Council Chambers. A plaque is dedicated Dec. 17, 2001, his last meeting as city council president.

There were many tributes to him at the time of his death. Among them:

"Paul had the unique ability to be able to see right from wrong and the courage to stand up and speak out on what he believed in, whether it was popular opinion at the time or not," said Mayor William Phelan. "People knew they could trust Paul to do the right thing."

"When I think of Quincy I think of Paul Harold," said Congressman William Delahunt.

"He tried to help everyone," said John Gillis, former Quincy city clerk now a Norfolk County Commissioner. "He didn't know how to hurt people."

Ann Knafelz, his secretary during his 14 years as state senator, said: "He loved the city. People were so important to him. He made sure the people came first."

At the funeral Mass at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Fr. Michael Kearney, pastor, noted: "The good Paul did in his life. All the times he stood up politically. He touched all his friends and family."

Fr. Kearney recalled talking with him a few days before he died:

"One of the things he said to me was, 'Father, I tried to do it the best way I knew how. I tried to do it right.'"

And those who knew Paul Harold would certainly agree he did do it right. Every time.

Harold was elected to the City Council in 1975 and made local political history two years later when he was re-elected at-large by 21,243 votes — the most ever received by a city council candidate since Quincy became a city 114 years ago.

Many believed he could have been mayor if he wanted but chose not to run.

He was the most widely traveled of any elective office holder in the city's history.

He went overseas to many countries many times for the U.S. Information Agency, teaching American values. He received degrees and certificates from such institutes as the John Hopkins Euro Center in Bologna, Italy, and Worcester College in Oxford, England.

He was a visiting professor of American studies at University College in Cork, Ireland, and locally, an adjunct professor at Quincy College, Curry College and an instructor at Aquinas Junior College.

He was a board member of the National Center for International Visitors in Washington where he hosted more than 1,000 State Department visitors including Queen Noor of Jordan, Prince Bander of Saudi Arabia and David Lange, prime minister of New England.

He met many notable world figures overseas and here including Pope John Paul and Mother Teresa as well as Presidents Jimmy Carter and Bill Clinton, and was as much as ease in their company as he was with a campaign worker.

His most sentimental trip overseas was to Pakistan in the late 1990s.

A graduate of the then Broad Meadows Junior High School, he proudly carried the school banner to the school in Pakistan that Broad Meadows students raised money to build in memory of Iqbal Masih, a 12-year-old former child labor slave who visited Broad Meadows in 1994 seeking students' help to end child labor. He was murdered on his return home.

In his memory, Broad Meadows students of teacher Ron Adams spearheaded a drive that raised $147,000 to build a five-room school in Iqbal's name.

The Broad Meadows banner was hung in honor on a wall in the Pakistan school.

Harold had a deep love and respect for Quincy's history.

He worked with Congressman Morris Udall some years ago to convince the city to turn the Presidents John and John Quincy Adams birthplaces over to the National Park Service to guarantee the proper upkeep of those historic sites, which were showing their age at the time.

And before his death he was working on plans to have the Dorothy Quincy Homestead become part of the Adams National Historical Park for the same reason.

Active in the community, he was a supervisor of the Adams Temple and School Fund, served on the Board of Directors of the Quincy Historical Society, Greater Boston Boy Scouts Council, American Red Cross, and was a member of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board and the Quincy College Trust Committee. He was also a former president of the Quincy Harvard Club.

After attending the Nathaniel Hunting School and the then Broad Meadows Junior High School, he graduated from Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth, UMass-Amherst with a degree in government, Suffolk Law School and the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard where he received a master's degree in public administration.

Harold never lost the common touch which he developed young in life as a news carrier, a dishwasher at Howard Johnson's, a bundle boy at Star Market and a clamdigger on Quincy flats, and moving up, a tour guide at the Adams birthplaces.

Harold actually started his public career as a reporter for The Quincy Sun in 1969. He originated and for many years wrote The Sun's popular Quincy Yesterdays column.

For a number of years, he ran in marathons, completing 12 including Boston, New York, London and Dublin.

He sponsored Quincy youth soccer and hockey teams.

"Paul was the only one I knew who sponsored teams and also came to see them play," said longtime friend and campaign supporter Mike Linnane. "It meant a lot to them. It was typical Paul to be there for the little guys."

Agnes Hogan, who worked in Harold campaigns for all the 27 years, had a simple tribute that may have said it all:

"Paul was like a son to me."

And, he was to many.

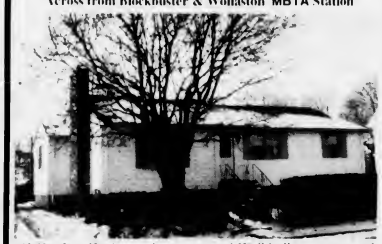
12th Annual Event March 1 At South Shore Plaza

Jack Conway Serving As Chairman Of Walk For Hospice Of South Shore

For the second year in a row, Jack Conway will serve as chairman of the Walk for Hospice of the South Shore.

More than 2,000 walkers raised $184,000 last year for the organization, which provides services for terminally ill patients who elect to remain in their own homes.

"We hope to do as well or better this year," Conway said. "Hospice of the South Shore does such important work, much of it without fanfare or recognition. They provide a vital service to families at a time when they need caring and compassion most."



This year's walk, the 12th annual event, will be held from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m. on March 1 inside South Shore Plaza. Walkers raise money by obtaining pledges from friends, family members and co-workers.

Many walk as a way to give something back or to honor the memory of someone dear to them, said Myrna Walsh, executive director of the South Shore Health and Educational Foundation at South Shore Hospital.

For more information on the Walk for Hospice of the South Shore, visit www.southshorehospital.org or call (781) 340-4061.

Real Estate in the New Era

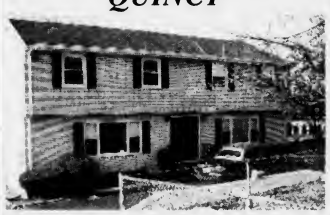
CENTRAL REAL ESTATE

YOUR BEST OFFER?



Sellers who get quick offers at or near their asking prices may be tempted to reject them thinking that better offers will ensure. That may not necessarily be the case, however. When a house first hits the market, lack of certainty about fair market value will work to the seller's advantage. If the property is fairly priced, educated buyers will make a good offer in an effort to get the house before someone else does. On the other hand, a house that lingers on the market prompts uncertainty over fair market value that helps buyers, who figure that a house worth the asking price would have sold. In the end, the first good offer may well be the best one.

If you're selling a home, it's in your best interest to price the home at fair market value and to carefully evaluate offers from potential buyers. When CENTRAL REAL ESTATE provides a market analysis, we consider the home's features and neighborhood as well as the prices of comparable homes in the same neighborhood. We provide the seller with tips on how to improve the home's curb appeal, coordinate open houses, and monitor and advise on how to respond to offers. To experience our award-winning service, call us at (617) 328-1312 or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: Fair market value is established on the basis of the amount that buyers are willing to pay and sellers are willing to accept.

Lung Association Urges Homeowners To Test For Radon

If you haven't tested your home for radon and you live in an area where high levels of radon exist, the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County urges you to test your home. Move testing up on your list of things to do early this year. Please!

Radon is estimated to be the second leading cause of lung cancer in the United States. High levels of radon have been found in every state. If you smoke and your home has high levels of radon, your risk of lung cancer is even higher.

The American Lung Association offers the following testing tips:

- Any home can have a radon problem – even apartments if they are below the third floor. Testing for radon is a simple precaution that everyone should take. Homes with radon problems can be fixed.
- Do-it-yourself test kits can be ordered from the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County for $10 each.
- The American Lung Association kit meets Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements for short-term screening (4-7 days). Look for the words, "EPA Listed" on the package.
- If a short-term test indicates an elevated radon level, confirm your findings with a second test before taking action.
- If you prefer, a professional testing firm listed by the EPA or the state can test your home for you.
- If you home does have a high radon level, don't panic. Repairs cost no more than many other common home repairs and will not change the appearance of your home. A variety of methods can be used, from sealing cracks in floors and walls to changing the flow of air into your home.
- Always consult an EPA-qualified or state-certified radon contractor. They can evaluate the problem and help you select the right solution.
- As when hiring a contractor for any other home repair, you may want to get more than one estimate and check references.
- Contact the American Lung Association at (508) 668-6729 for more information about radon.

(NAPS) -- Because of the recent declines in the stock market, many Americans will be forced to lower their expectations for retirement income or even postpone their retirement according to the recently published report Retirement Insecurity: The Income Shortfalls Awaiting the Soon-to-Retire from the Economic Policy Institute.

In fact, the University of Michigan's Health and Retirement Study estimates the bear market wiped away more than $678 billion in retiree wealth over the last two and one-half years. Experts at Bankers Life and Casualty Company suggest that Americans in their 50s and 60s discuss the various options with a financial services professional that specializes in the senior market.

Quincy Clinches Tournament Berth

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School girls' basketball team clinched a spot in the state tournament last Friday night at home with a 55-49 win over Whitman-Hanson.

Twenty years in the making.

That's right. After two long decades the program has finally been turned around, led by second-year head coach Jeff Bretsch.

"It's just a great, great feeling," said Bretsch, who guided Quincy to a 9-11 record last season. "It's a goal we set out for since the beginning and the kids worked their tails off. To do it this early in the season is a great accomplishment."

Quincy (10-3 overall) improves to 6-1 in the Atlantic Coast League, tied for first place with Sandwich. On Monday it took on non-league opponent Plymouth South and Tuesday it hosted Dennis-Yarmouth. It travels to Nauset tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30.

"We're still fighting for first place, so this is also a huge league win," Bretsch said. "Whitman-Hanson is always a tough program."

The Presidents and Panthers exchanged baskets for much of the first half, with W-H taking a 25-22 lead into the locker room at halftime.

The deficit could've been bigger for Quincy. With about six minutes left junior guard Bonnie Hirtle picked up her third foul and had to watch from the pine for the remainder of the half.

Without the ACL's second leading scorer (20.5), the Presidents were only outscored, 9-7, as sophomores Nicole O'Sullivan, who nailed a jumper, and Rebekah Sorensen provided meaningful minutes off the bench.

"They came in and really helped us out," Bretsch said. "They did a nice job."

In the second half Quincy cranked up the defensive pressure and went on an 8-2 run over the first four minutes. During the run, junior point guard Sarah Shea buried a 3-pointer from the top of the key to give Quincy a 28-27 lead — a lead it would never relinquish.

"She's the hero of the day," said Bretsch, as Shea finished with 15 points and three treys. "She had a fantastic game. She really controlled the tempo of the game and only had two turnovers."

Defensively, Quincy held W-H star Jen Thomson to 13 points. "Katie Kisielius and Brittney Tobin turned in tough defensive efforts," Bretsch said. "They played straight up on their best player. She had 13 points but she had to earn it."

Hirtle, meanwhile, poured in 14 of her 18 points in the second half to power the offense. "She turned it on in the second half," Bretsch said. "I don't think missed any shots. She was real aggressive."

Sophomore center Alysia DiMuzio posted a double-double with 11 points and 12 rebounds. Senior co-captain Shannon Paine also did the job on the glass with 10 boards.

"The kids wanted it too bad tonight to lose," Bretsch said.

North Quincy Needs 3 Wins For Tourney Spot

In head coach Doug MacFarlane's tenure, the North Quincy and Falmouth girls' basketball teams have always played games down to the wire.

Last Friday night at home was no different. Knotted at 25-all at halftime, the Red Raiders unfortunately blew a six-point lead in the final 1:30 of the game and came out on the short-end, 58-57.

"Since I've been here it's amazing how close these games have been," MacFarlane said. "The last two minutes we just could not hold it together. We just couldn't stop them on defense."

North Quincy (6-7 overall, 5-4 Old Colony League) is now tied for third place with Falmouth and needs to win three of its final seven games to qualify for the state tournament. It hosted league leader Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it travels to second-place Barnstable.

"We needed that win," MacFarlane said. "It would've been big. As someone said earlier, for two years we got all the breaks and now we're not. We need three more games to get in the tournament. It looks like we're going to make it, but those basketball Gods haven't been too kind to us."

After the Clippers converted a couple of three-point plays, North Quincy found itself at the free-throw line clinging to a one-point lead with 18 seconds left. It missed both freebies but grabbed the rebound, only to throw it into the hands of a Falmouth player who went in for a layup and a 58-57 lead.

North Quincy almost pulled out the win at the buzzer but senior April Suprey's shot rattled around the rim before falling to the floor.

"April's shot went around the rim, around the rim, and out," MacFarlane said. "A heartbreaker, needless to say. The kids deserved to win."

Suprey, who is second in the league in scoring with 18.1 points per game, drained 22 points, grabbed seven rebounds and dished out four assists to pace the Red Raiders. Sophomore Sarah Goreham chipped in with 14 points and three steals.

Senior point guard Lauren Kalil controlled the tempo of the game, scoring eight points and tallying four assists. "She had a nice all-around floor game," MacFarlane said.

CHECKING BELTS AND HOSES

In this era of the 100,000-mile tune-up, vehicle owners may think that they have little reason to check under the hood. However, many belts and hoses fail well before the 100,000-mile mark. Thus, these components should be checked regularly, especially because they may not show signs of deterioration prior to breakdown. Chief among these is the timing belt that drives the valve train. It should be replaced as it nears the end of its recommended service life. Otherwise, if it were to break on a non-free-wheeling engine, there will likely be some extensive and expensive damage, as the pistons contact the valves. Eventually, belts and hoses succumb to the effects of heat, age, and chemical wear from fuel and oil.

It is important to regularly check your car's hoses and belts. Our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency, as well as safety. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles

HINT: Telltale signs of a loose or worn belt are screeching sounds under acceleration.

5 Straight Wins Put Presidents In Playoff Hunt

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' basketball team has reeled off five straight victories to put itself in prime position for the remaining eight games of the season.

First, with two more wins the Presidents will clinch a spot in the state tournament for the first time in six years.

Second, they're currently in a second-place tie in the Atlantic Coast League with the championship trophy in sight.

Quincy extended its winning streak last Friday night on the road with a 66-60 triumph over Whitman-Hanson, which followed a close 61-59 decision over Matignon last Wednesday at home.

Quincy (8-4 overall, 5-2 ACL) traveled to undefeated Dennis-Yarmouth Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it hosts Nauset, the team it shares the second spot in the standings with.

"This is a big week for us especially in terms of the league standings," said head coach John Franceschini. "Our consistency in the second half of games has made a big difference."

In the W-H game, the Presidents had a 33-29 edge at halftime and held onto the lead like it was the precious ring in "Lord of the Rings."

The Panthers were within four points with about three minutes left in the game but Quincy proved lethal at the free-throw line, hitting its last five shots and 7 of 9 down the stretch.

"It was a good, solid game," Franceschini said. "We never relinquished the lead the whole game. The difference was our consistency on the offense end. We shot the ball very well. We made a lot of key shots and key free throws."

Senior Kevin O'Connell, third in the league in scoring with 18.5 points per game, poured in a team-high 25 points while senior Matt Ramponi scored 21 to spark the offense. Senior Shawn Munchbach (6 points) and sophomore Parker Scott (5) turned in strong defense games, Franceschini said.

In the Matignon game, the Presidents rallied from a 12-point halftime deficit as senior Anthony Boyle dominated on both sides of the ball.

Boyle scored 12 of his 14 points, grabbed 10 of his 12 rebounds and blocked three shots over the final 16 minutes. "He was really the difference," Franceschini said.

Munchbach (12 points) led a suffocating man-to-man defense, which limited Matignon to 20 points in the second half after a 39-point first-half performance. O'Connell added 12 points, hitting all seven free-throw attempts.

"Our defensive effort in the second half was outstanding," Franceschini said. "We shut down their two big scorers."

Quincy Prevails In 'Classic Battle' Over North

WRESTLING

One adage that has been tossed around the city of Quincy whenever the Presidents and Red Raiders lace them up in any sport is "to throw out the records."

That couldn't have been more true in a recent wrestling match at the Quincy gym.

Quincy High came in at 6-9-1 and North Quincy High at 9-1-2. Both were unbeaten in its respective leagues (Quincy 2-0 in the Atlantic Coast League and North Quincy 3-0-1 in the Old Colony League).

What followed was a classic battle, with Quincy topping its neighbors, 34-29.

Quincy came out strong, winning the first five matches contested on the mat and opened up a 21-6 lead. Sophomore Chris Reggiannini recorded a pin at 125 pounds, followed closely by a technical fall by senior Jason Chase at 130.

Seniors Mike Tetreault (135), Dennis Hill (140) and senior captain Jason Moore (152) all won close matches over their opponents to provide Quincy with the early momentum and loud fan support.

A forfeit by Quincy at 145 gave North Quincy six points and the Red Raiders were ready to make their move.

Senior captain Chris Traietti started the comeback with a solid 8-0 win at 160. At 171, Dan Hooker provided the North Quincy contingent with hope as he recorded a pin just before the second period expired, closely followed by a first-period pin by captain Kosta Kalpakidis at 189.

After Darryl Zoia won an exciting 13-12 battle over Quincy's Frank McMurrough at 215, the Red Raiders had taken a 25-21 lead.

The heavyweight bout was another gem as Quincy's Dan Coleman and North Quincy's Corey Piazza exchanged two-point reversals, but it was Coleman's key near fall in the third period that proved to be the difference in the 11-10 bout.

Though Quincy still trailed 25-24, the Quincy coaching staff felt confident with the Truong brothers, Yen and Bao, on deck. Yen proved the coaches correct with a strong 11-3 win at 103 and Bao clinched the meet with a first-period pin at 112.

North Quincy's Eric Tso won, 15-3, at 119 to close out the scoring.

Though on paper it was an upset, 15-year head coach Lou Venturelli knew his squad had a chance.

"We stressed all week the fundamentals of wrestling, wrist control and balance, and the kids executed beautifully," he said. "We needed the close matches to go to us and nearly everything did, including the coin flip, which decided which team's wrestler must appear on the mat first.

"I have to give coaches Regan and Lane credit for bringing their program up to the level at which they have it. They have worked extremely hard and their numbers are excellent. We simply wrestled our best at the right time."

To prove his point, Quincy dropped the next three matches of the day to New Bedford, Braintree and Plymouth South. North Quincy defeated Braintree easily and tied Plymouth South earlier in the season.

Host Barnstable Friday Night

Raiders Sweep Falmouth

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball teams shook off the Taunton debacle last Friday night down on the Cape.

The Red Raiders triumphed over Falmouth, 54-49, completing the two-game sweep of the Clippers this season.

"Down there, down on the Cape, it's always difficult to win," said head coach James Rendle. "I was pleased with our defense as a group."

And that was a facet of the game Rendle was not so pleased with in a 73-44 loss to league leader Taunton last Monday. North Quincy righted the ship and hopes it sails over through this week.

North Quincy (4-8 overall, 3-6 Old Colony League) headed to Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 its hosts Barnstable.

Trailing 23-22 at halftime, the Red Raiders quickly jumped in front in the second half and never looked back.

"We immediately got a lead in the second half and had a five-, six-, seven-point lead most of the way," Rendle said. "We played real good defense down the stretch and were able to hold onto the lead."

Senior guard Kevin Holleran sparked the Red Raiders, registering a double-double with a team-high 15 points and 11 rebounds. He also handed out five assists.

In a balanced offensive attack, junior forward Adam Smith chipped in with 11 points, freshman guard Kyle Costa tallied nine, and senior center Sean Bowes and junior guard Darryl Costa had eight apiece.

Red Raiders Eye OCL Championship

By CHRIS POISSON

Enjoying a breakthrough season, the North Quincy High School wrestling team can only sit back and wait . . . wait to see if it captures the Old Colony League championship.

Needing a win in last Wednesday night's league dual meet at home with Bridgewater-Raynham, the Red Raiders slipped up late in the meet and settled for a 34-34 tie which felt more like a loss.

North Quincy held a 34-16 lead with three matches to go, looking as if the league hardware's address would be Hancock Street this season.

Instead, that shipment has been put on standby. In dramatic fashion, the Trojans recorded pins in their final three matches for 18 points to keep their title hopes alive.

"It was an exciting night," said head coach Dan Regan. "We knew it was going to be close. Unfortunately it came down to a tie."

North Quincy sports a 10-3-3 overall record (11-12-1 last season) and finishes league competition with a 3-0-2 mark. B-R (11-4-1) posts a 2-0-1 mark in league play and still has to battle Marshfield and Silver Lake.

"This was big for us," said B-R head coach Stan Holmes. "If we lost they would've been OCL champs. Now we still have some life left."

In the opening match, senior co-captain Peter Monaco dropped a tough 3-2 decision at 130. North Quincy evened the score at 3-3 when junior Warren Lee pulled out a thrilling 9-7 win with 19 seconds left in overtime at 135.

Freshman Benson Luc faced a very strong opponent at 140 in senior captain Tom Hennessey, who finished fourth in the state last season. Hennessey recorded a pin late in the first period for a 9-3 lead.

At 145, senior John Norton went back and forth with B-R's Tony Leone. Norton evened the score at 6-6 with five seconds left in the third period but fell in overtime, 8-6, as B-R built a 12-3 advantage.

Determined to turn things around, a fiery Chris Traietti, a senior co-captain, coasted to a 33-second pin at 152 that sparked the Red Raiders to victories in the next three matches.

Junior Dan Luu (160) recorded a 49-second pin, senior Dan Hooker (171) pulled out a 9-7 victory and senior Kosta Kalpakidis (189) triumphed, 18-10, as North Quincy jumped in front of B-R, 22-12.

After B-R's win at 215, senior Corey Piazza registered a second-period pin in the heavyweight match and junior Kellan Losi followed with a second-period pin at 112.

With a seemingly insurmountable 34-16 lead, North Quincy lost by pin at 112, 119 and 125.

"You're disappointed when you don't win," Regan said, "but the kids wrestled tough and we'll take the positives from this and move on."

Kris Kamborian Earns Varsity Football Letter At Curry

Freshman Kris Kamborian of Quincy earned a varsity football letter this past season at Curry College.

A former Quincy High School star, Kamborian played on special teams and backed up star running back Raphael Zammitt. He received an ample amount of playing time under head coach and former New England Patriots Hall of Famer Steve Nelson.

KRIS KAMBORIAN

"I want to be in there as much as possible," Kamborian said. "I'm ready to go in and play whenever I'm asked. I'm looking forward to future seasons and hope to help the team in the backfield or wherever I can."

Kamborian also excelled in the classroom. He made the Dean's List for the fall semester with a 3.68 GPA. "It was hard to balance school work and football, especially when there is not much time between the two."

Kamborian is the son of Michele Draicchio Paige of Quincy and Luther Kamborian of Braintree.

Quincy Makes North Sixth Straight Victim

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

A crammed Quincy Youth Arena last Saturday night could easily have been divided by two distinct emotions at the end of the game.

When the Quincy hockey team snapped a 2-2 tie with only 14 ticks left, you could hear Presidents' fans cheering enthusiastically while the Red Raiders' contingent collectively sighed in disbelief.

Another memorable game in this rich rivalry between the two high schools.

"I thought both teams played extremely well," said Quincy head coach Bob Sylvia. "That was as even-steven as it gets. It was unfortunate somebody had to lose that game."

On the game-winner, senior forward Liam Powers slipped a pass in front to senior forward Ryan Conley, who easily tapped the puck past North Quincy goalie Bruce Maggio. Senior forward Joe Bohan also picked up an assist on the goal.

"Sylvia has some real hungry forwards, real quick afoot" said North Quincy head coach Bob Doyle.

Quincy (10-5 overall, 6-4 Atlantic Coast League) extended its winning streak to six games. Having already locked up a state tournament berth with a 6-2 win at Plymouth North last Wednesday, Quincy will now try to improve its playoff position in the final three games.

Quincy traveled to Rockland Monday, hosted Whitman-Hanson yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night at 7:50 it faces off against Nauset at Quincy Youth Arena in the regular-season finale.

"At this point it's all about improving your position in the tourney," Sylvia said. "We want to try to get into a groove. Hopefully we didn't peak too early. We want to save our best for last."

North Quincy (4-5-3 overall, 1-3-2 Old Colony League), which has been snake-bitten at the end of games this season, ended a two-game win streak in which it defeated Duxbury, 5-3, last Monday and Marshfield, 4-2, last Wednesday.

The Red Raiders controlled the opening 15 minutes but unfortunately had nothing to show for it as the period ended scoreless.

"I was very pleased with the first period," Doyle said. "It was the first time all year we came out with intensity. We dictated the flow of the game and generated good offense. You'd like to be awarded for that and see one on the scoreboard."

In the second period, Quincy seized momentum as it capitalized on a pair of man-advantages. Bohan handed Quincy a 1-0 lead when he knocked home a puck from the right doorstep at 1:55.

North Quincy evened the score at 6:45 when sophomore forward Paul Graham stole a puck in Quincy's zone, rushed towards the net and watched his shot trickle past Quincy senior goalie Keith Flaherty into the left corner of the cage.

"Paul Graham had an outstanding game," Doyle said. "By far, he was our best forward out there. He forechecked very well."

Quincy went back on top, 2-1, while on a 5-on-3 power play. Junior Brendan Craig circled left to right around the goal and fed a pass to senior Liam Powers who beat Maggio from the slot.

"Clearly, the two power-play goals took away our momentum," Doyle said. "Quincy has an explosive power play with (Josh) Giordani, Bohan and Powers."

North Quincy, which couldn't convert a two-on-none break near the end of the second, netted the equalizer at 9:16 of the third on a power play. Senior defenseman Mike McGunagle blasted a shot from the left point which senior defenseman Tim Duggan tipped past Flaherty from in front.

Less than a minute later Flaherty (29 saves) preserved the 2-2 tie by stoning senior forward Rob Mooney's break-away attempt off a Quincy turnover.

Flaherty's save preceded a sensational 13-second sequence by Maggio (29 saves). With under two minutes left in the game, Maggio first robbed Giordani — who leads the league in scoring with 37 points (15 goals, 22 assists) — with a glove save.

And then Maggio somehow managed to make an even more incredible glove save, snagging a blazing puck from Powers out of the air and through a traffic jam in front.

"That was one of the great moments in this rivalry," Sylvia said. "Despite the fact that North Quincy lost the game, you can't say enough about Maggio. Keith Flaherty made some real good saves, too."

Quincy-North Girls Hockey Defeats St. Bernard's, 3-2

The Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey team pulled out a 3-2 win over St. Bernard's last Saturday afternoon on the road.

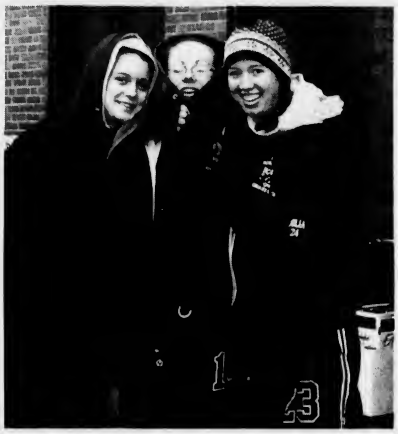
QNQ (5-4-2 overall, 2-1-1 South Cape Conference) traveled to Everett High yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night at 8 it heads to league foe Duxbury.

QNQ came out strong in the first period, but St. Bernard's, which plays in a tough Catholic Conference, grabbed a 1-0 lead with six minutes left in the frame.

Less than 15 seconds later, QNQ evened the score with a goal by defenseman Rose Devlin, assisted by junior Lindsey Langille.

Junior Kristina Manganaro handed QNQ a 2-1 lead four minutes later with Jessica Guerriero and Devlin assisting. Manganaro is third in the league in scoring with 21 points (13 goals, 8 assists).

In the second period, QNQ extended its lead to 3-1 when Langille found the cage with Nicole Murray and freshman Jennifer Pettiti assisting.



Three minutes into the third period, St. Bernard's scored on a pile up in front to make it 3-2. QNQ killed a penalty with six minutes left in the game and held on for the win.

"Our passing was excellent and our positioning was a lot better," said head coach Laura Prisco. "We were very patient."

Sophomore Forward Marissa Powers played another strong game and goalie Jessie Poggi stood out between the pipes.

Last Wednesday, QNQ suffered a 2-0 loss to Arlington Catholic (9-2-1), which is in third place in Catholic Conference.

Arlington Catholic jumped out to a quick lead, scoring 1:50 into the game. For the next two and half periods QNQ stayed close but was unable to score the equalizer. And with eight minutes left in the game Arlington Catholic netted an insurance goal for the 2-0 lead.

MEMBERS OF THE Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey team braved the elements for their recent second annual bottle and can drive, including (from left) players Lisa Turowski, Marissa Deegan and Julia Berberan. QNQ is playing in the South Cape Conference League for its first season as a varsity team.

"We were very solid most of the time, with very few breakdowns," Prisco said. "We are getting better."

In previous action, QNQ skated to a 4-4 tie with South Cape Conference leader Westwood Jan. 18.

QNQ came out strong and confident, scoring two goals in the first period. Manganaro tallied both, with Langille assisting on the first and Pettiti and Langille assisting on the second.

Westwood netted two quick goals in the second period to tie the game at 2-2.

Freshman Allison Griffith scored her first career goal with assists to Manganaro and Langille to put QNQ back on top, 3-2.

After Westwood tied the game again, Manganaro scored with four minutes left in the period to complete the hat trick and hand QNQ a 4-3 lead. Junior Breanne Therrien and Langille picked up assists.

With 3:49 left in the game, though, QNQ suffered a breakdown at center ice that sent Westwood in for the tying goal.

"The first period was the best period we have ever played as a team," Prisco said. "We moved the puck extremely well. We had some breakdowns after that, but I have to say we are very close to playing really good hockey."

On Jan. 15, QNQ fell to Duxbury, 4-2. Duxbury got on the board quickly, scoring its first goal three minutes into the opening period.

With 40 seconds left in the period, QNQ struck with a goal by Powers, assisted by Devlin.

The second period was back and forth until Duxbury scored with 3:49 left for a 2-1 advantage. In the third, QNQ came out strong and scored 30 seconds into the frame with a goal by Manganaro, assisted by Devlin and Langille.

One minute later, however, Duxbury regained the lead and it added an insurance goal with five minutes left in the game.

"After we tied it up 2-2 we couldn't get it together and made too many mental mistakes," Prisco said.

Quincy Medical Center Junior Volunteers Making A Difference In Community

North Quincy High School student Kaitlyn Proto recently recruited several high school friends and bandmates to perform a special concert for Quincy Medical Center patients.

Proto conceived the idea for the concert while volunteering at the medical center.

She is one of more than 70 junior volunteers who donated their time to Quincy Medical Center last year, assisting clinical and administrative departments, talking with patients and working in the hospital's gift shop.

Quincy Medical Center's junior volunteer program offers students, like Proto, the chance to make a difference in their community, while meeting school-mandated community service requirements or adding extra-curricular activity to future college and scholarship applications.

The benefits students receive from volunteering extend well beyond their ability to include the activity on college and scholarship applications. Research by the Forum on Child and Family Statistics, a coordinated effort among federal agencies to produce data about children, shows that young people who volunteer regularly develop confidence, leadership skills and a better understanding of political and world events.

Quincy Medical Center asks junior volunteers to commit to a minimum of four volunteer hours each week.

Obesity May Harm Mothers And Babies, Cause Infertility

The news these days seems filled with stories about the serious health risks associated with obesity. And while heart disease and diabetes still seem to be the most-often mentioned results, infertility, complications during pregnancy and health problems for newborn babies are also frequent conditions that may arise.

"In the past decade we've really started focusing on the larger ramifications weight has on all systems of the body," said Christopher Keroack, M.D., an internist who will take over as medical director of the new Bariatrics Division at Springfield's Mercy Hospital when it opens in February.

Obesity may accompany a condition known as polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS), a hormonal abnormality. PCOS is a major cause of infertility, and can also heighten risk for cardiac disease and diabetes.

"Obesity is known to cause some women to experience hormonal changes that interfere with ovulation and cause significant infertility," said Dr. Keroack. "In many cases of infertility in overweight women, weight loss can be a cure."

Dr. Keroack said men with severe weight problems may also indirectly experience reproductive difficulty because of a decrease in the hormone testosterone. However, he said there is insufficient research on this.

According to the United States Surgeon General, obese women are more prone to reproductive complications. Obesity is determined by a measurement called "Body Mass Index" (BMI) as recommended by a National Institute of Health panel several years ago. BMI is a measure of weight in relation to a person's height. To find your BMI score on an easy-to-read chart, go to www.surgeongeneral.gov/topics/obesity/calltoaction/fact_advice.htm.

Obesity can cause serious complications in pregnant women, including:

- An increased risk of maternal high blood pressure
- Greater likelihood of gestational diabetes
- More frequent problems during labor and delivery due to complications with anesthesia
- An increased necessity for Cesarean section delivery
- An increased risk of death in both the baby and the mother
- An increased risk of birth defects, particularly "neural tube" defects, such as spina bifida

Some weight gain during pregnancy – 13 to 17 pounds – is desirable and usually unavoidable, according to Dr. Keroack. But he added that women who are overweight or obese at the start of a pregnancy should try to gain less total weight during the pregnancy. In either case, weight loss for women who are pregnant or trying to conceive would be closely monitored by a physician.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

CALL FOR REPLACEMENTS

Many adults lose teeth due to cavities, periodontal disease, or injury. Among adults from 35 to 44 years old, 69% have lost at least one permanent teeth. By age 50, Americans have lost an average of 12 teeth (including wisdom teeth). And, increasingly, they are turning to dental implants for replacement. A dental implant is an artificial tooth made of metal with a porcelain coating. Its most important component is its "root," a titanium screw anchor that is surgically implanted in the jawbone. Initially, the anchor is implanted alone. Gradually, bone grows around the implant to secure it. The replacement tooth, or crown, is then attached to the metal post. The result is unmatched, both aesthetically and functionally.

Can we improve your smile? Today's technology provides a variety of options to address cosmetic concerns. Dental implants offer a more permanent solution for replacing any number of missing teeth. We are currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you will be pleased with our "personal touch" philosophy and our dedication to your complete dental health. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Implants can also be used to anchor bridges and permanent dentures when more than one tooth is missing.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Abraham Lincoln once said that people are about as happy in this world as they make up their minds to be. Plant that seed in your mind and give it every opportunity to grow and bear fruit.

It is only human to feel discouraged at times, but you should never think of giving up -- in many cases the low moment is the beginning of better things.

Here are a few rules for getting out of a depressed state of mind: Never make an important decision when you are mentally at low ebb. Decide upon policies when you are in a normal state of mind, never when you are feeling low.

Suggest to yourself that a depressed state of mind is a temporary matter. Things will look different in a few hours hence.

Make sure your trouble is not physical. A badly digested meal, or several hours loss of sleep the night before, may turn a bright world into a place of gloom...

Because you have occasional spells of despondency, don't despair. The sun has a sinking spell every night, but it rises again all right the next morning...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're eager to take on that new opportunity opening up as January gives way to February. Now all you need to do is resist quitting too early. Do your best to stay with it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Doff a bit of that careful, conservative outlook and let your brave Bovine self take a chance on meeting that new challenge. You could be surprised at how well you do.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might not want to return to the more serious tasks facing you. But you know it's what you must do. Cheer up. Something more pleasant will soon occupy your time.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) As you dutifully tidy your end-of-the-month tasks, your fun self emerges to urge you to do something special: A trip (or a cruise, maybe?) could be just what you need.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your achievements are admirable as you close out the month with a roar. Now you can treat yourself to some well-earned time off for fun with family or friends. (Or both!)

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be sure you know the facts before you assume someone is holding back on your project. Try to open your mind before you give someone a piece of it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel comfortable in your familiar surroundings, but it might be time to venture into something new. There's a challenge out there that's just right for you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your love of things that are new gets a big boost as you encounter a situation that opens up new and exciting vistas. How far you go with it depends on you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That recent workplace shift might not seem to be paying off as you expected. But be patient. There are changes coming that could make a big difference.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While few can match the Goat's fiscal wizardry, you still need to be wary in your dealings. There might be a problem you should know about sooner rather than later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Easy does it when it comes to love and all the other good things in life. Don't try to force them to develop on your schedule. Best to let it happen naturally.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A surprise decision by someone you trust causes some stormy moments. But a frank discussion explains everything, and helps save a cherished relationship.

BORN THIS WEEK: Sometimes you forget to take care of yourself, because you're so busy caring for others. But you wouldn't have it any other way.

'Four Chaplains' Sunday Observance Feb. 3

The Veterans' Services Department reminds residents that Sunday, Feb. 3, will be observed as "Four Chaplains" Sunday, as mandated by the United States Congress.

Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of the Quincy's Veterans Services Department, recalled the story behind the fateful day.

In February, 1943, the troopship Dorchester was struck by a German torpedo in the frigid waters in the North Atlantic ocean, Bradley said.

During the melee on the ship, four chaplains, George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic, provided comfort and handed out life jackets to the wounded men, Bradley said.

The four chaplains gave their own life jackets to those without them. It is said that the four men of faith linked arms and bowed their heads in prayer as the ship sank.

Only 230 of 902 men survived the attack, Bradley said.

Survivors will never forget the sights and sounds on the ship while the four chaplains performed a completely unselfish and heroic act, he said.

Cashman May Go To Court To Block Shipyard Sale

-view the facts and take a longer view of the situation we will clearly be the winner. We represent the best value to the government, by far."

Mayor William Phelan criticized the bidding process, but said he intends to work closely with a new owner to ensure that Quincy's interests are represented during the development process.

"The city's cooperation is a vital part of the development of the shipyard," said Phelan. "And the new owner will need the cooperation of the city. I'm disappointed in the process but what is most important is the future."

Phelan said the city has rescinded its tax agreement with the previous owner, Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI). As a result, the city issued tax bills on the property for fiscal 2002 and 2003 which amount to approximately $2 million.

If ownership of the property is transferred then the new owner would owe $2 million in taxes on the property, according to city officials. MHI is responsible for the tax bill until a new owner is established, officials said.

Phelan said: "There is progress being made at the shipyard that hasn't been made in years. I'm confident that the future is bright for redevelopment. I've been keeping my eye on that. That is my focus and it will remain my focus."

He said he has met with US Senators Ted Kennedy and John Kerry, officials from Gov. Mitt Romney's administration and potential developers regarding the shipyard site.

Adding a boost to Cashman's efforts was a move by the Fore River Redevelopment Committee asking the Maritime Administration (MARAD) to delay the sale of the shipyard until new owner Dan Quirk reveals more details about his plans for the site.

Specifically, the committee wants to know how three bidders, including Quirk, were allowed to submit bids after a Dec. 31 deadline. MARAD maintains that it reserved the right to extend the deadline.

Robyn Boerstling, spokesperson for the Maritime Administration, said the agency will review the committee's request.

"Whatever steps we may take, our primary concerns are the interests and obligations of MARAD as an agency of the US government," she told The Quincy Sun.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's director of operations, called that response "offensive."

"It appears that MARAD is interested only in the highest dollar figure for the property," Largey said. "They are walking away from 120 acres of land that is a key component of the south coastal region of New England."

The 14-member committee, formed last year to address the revitalization of the shipyard site, is comprised of local officials and business representatives from Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth. State Representatives Ron Mariano and Joseph Sullivan, and City Council President Daniel Raymondi are among the members on the committee.

"We have to take a stand, and the stronger the stand the better," said Mariano said at the meeting.

Mariano said he was "as disappointed as anyone" regarding the sale of the property to Quirk. In addition, he said the auto dealer should be more forthcoming with his plans.

"I find it amazing that someone would come in and spend $9 million and then say he doesn't have a redevelopment plan," Mariano said. "I want him (Quirk) to get his act together and meet and bring some ideas to the table."

Quirk was invited but did not attend the meeting. Attorney Frank Marinelli, representing Quirk, said the auto dealer was unable to attend due to other commitments.

Marinelli said Quirk is in the process of interviewing and establishing a re-development team comprised of land use, environmental and business development advisers.

"The formulation of future uses will take some time in light of matters such as environmental review, easements and equipment removal," Marinelli wrote in a letter to Raymondi.

Marinelli said Quirk has hired an engineering and planning firm, Coler & Colantonio, to do site work on the property. In addition, Quirk has engaged the services of Quincy Attorney Robert Fleming to address zoning issues and other matters, Marinelli said.

"No one reasonably expects an instantaneous master plan," said Marinelli. "But our master plan will include the dedication of a substantial portion of the site to commercial and industrial maritime uses."

Marinelli said Quirk is evaluating many different uses for the site, including trade, commerce, ship repair and other maritime-based functions.

"This site tugs at the heart and souls of people," Raymondi said during the meeting. "Parking lots don't generate taxes, and they don't generate jobs."

Committee member Zaida Shaw said MARAD's conduct "was like someone came up and slapped you in the face."

"You can't do this to the community. I can't forgive them, I'm sorry. They hurt us," she said.

Mariano raised the possibility that a suspension of the sale could bring litigation from Quirk. "I can live with that," said Mariano.

QUINCY SQUARE LOOKED like a ghost town Tuesday, Feb. 7, 1978 as this lone walker braved high winds and driven snow during the height of the most furious storm to hit the New England area in recorded history. Nearly 27 inches of snow buried the city and winds reached gusts of more than 90 miles per hour. It was like a winter hurricane. (Quincy Sun photo/Jonathan Burak)

Blizzard Of '78: A Storm To Remember

By TOM HENSHAW

Imagine nearly 27 inches of newly fallen snow, the most ever recorded in one storm by the Boston Weather Bureau in 108 years of record-keeping, driven by gusts of wind that topped 90 miles an hour, hurricane strength, into drifts as much as 18 feet deep on the MBTA's Red Line tracks.

Imagine an estimated $7 million damage to private and public property in Quincy and a $600,000 bill for snow removal alone and imagine traffic banned from the streets of Quincy for the better part of a week and the sea wall at Houghs Neck itself under two feet of water.

Imagine hundreds of people, storm fighters and refugees alike, being fed communally at the Quincy Vo Tech School (now the Center for Technical Education) and, when the food ran out, imagine a Marine Corps bulldozer crashing through the snow into the Central Commissary for more.

Imagine all this on top of the remains of 22 inches of snow that had fallen only 17 days before.

And imagine Larry Mirick of 126 Turner St., Houghs Neck, telling a reporter:

"About 9 o'clock, just before the lights went out, I went to step off the porch and I was up to my waist in water. And then I real-

Firm Hired To Collect

City To Zero In On Unpaid Parking Tickets

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

If you think you can get away with not paying your parking tickets, think again.

The City Council Monday night Ok'd the city's request to hire a contractor to assist in collecting and tracking parking tickets.

Quincy's outdated computer system has resulted in the accumulation of more than $1 million in unpaid parking tickets since 1995, according to Purchasing Agent Al Grazioso.

The council agreed that the city should hire MVP Enterprises of New Jersey to collect revenue and process unpaid parking tickets in a more timely, efficient manner.

MVP will use state-of-the-art software computers and training for the collection. They will use their own employees.

Grazioso said he hoped the firm can be up and running in March.

In addition, the firm will connect the city to the Registry of Motor Vehicles. This will allow the Registry to monitor delinquent payers when they want to renew their license or registration.

Under the terms of the contract, MWP will take a 10 percent cut of whatever it recoups for the city. It would not get paid if it does not collect.

In addition, the company would charge a flat fee of $1.15 for every future ticket processed.

The city's contract with MVP runs for one-year, with the option for two more one-year agreements, Grazioso said.

Grazioso said the city has not updated its computer system for tracking tickets since 1985.

New councillor at-large John Keenan agreed that the city should try out MVP for one year and evaluate the results.

"There are literally hundreds of thousands of dollars going uncollected ," said Councillor Keenan. "Through this contract we have an opportunity to collect money in tough financial times that we would most likely never collect."

One of the firm's selling points is its ability to quickly generate late fees on unpaid tickets, Grazioso said. After 21 days, the new system will generate a $5 late fee, he said. And, the firm will be able to tack on larger late fees if a ticket goes unpaid for longer periods of time, Grazioso said.

USS Salem Ceremony To Honor Columbia Crew

The USS Salem & Naval Shipbuilding Museum will host a memorial ceremony honoring the fallen crew of the Columbia Space Shuttle Sunday at 9 a.m. on the fantail of the ship.

Boy scouts from around New England as well as Sea Scouts and Sea Cadets attached to the Salem will participate. The public is invited.

Members of the USS Salem crew and U. S. Armed Forces will assist in the ceremony that includes a wreath-laying and roll call of Columbia's crew.

The Salem hosted a memorial and Purple Heart ceremony last summer for the crew of the USS Eagle, which was sunk by a German U-Boat off the coast of Maine in World War II.

Marina Bay Residents Meet On Traffic, Public Safety Issues

Marina Bay residents voiced their concerns over traffic, noise and public safety issues during a recent community meeting sponsored by the newly formed Marina Bay Civic Association (MBCA).

More than 45 residents attended the meeting, which featured Andrew Scheele, Quincy Commissioner of Public Health and Vice Chairman of the Licensing Commission. Also in attendance were Quincy Police Capt. Robert Crowley and a member of the Building Inspection Commission.

Residents raised concerns about late night music and traffic generated by boarkwalk bars and restaurants.

They expressed support for a proposed city ordinance that would make the operating hours of unenclosed music venues the same as those in other Massachusetts cities, such as Foxboro, Cohasset and Mansfield.

In addition, residents suggested that boardwalk establishments hire more police to provide greater enforcement of DUI, driving and disturbing the peace laws.

"We want to get all the issues out on the table," said Scheele.

Shirley Walker, co-chair of the MBCA and organizer of the meeting, said Scheele would meet with boardwalk businesses in an attempt to come up with solutions. Walker said Scheele would report back to MBCA after meeting with businesses.

MBCA is a community organization comprised of residents from Chapman's Reach, Harbourside, Marina Point the Reserve, and Seaport.

Holocaust Memorial Vandalized

Quincy's Holocaust Memorial on Dennis F. Ryan Parkway has been vandalized twice in as many months, with the latest incident occurring last week, according to its creator.

David Ezickson, who erected the memorial in 1997 with the help of students from the Atlantic and Sterling Middle Schools, said photos depicting holocaust subjects were removed and two 4 by 8 foot displays were damaged.

A similar incident occurred in December, he said.

Ezickson, a member of the Quincy Human Rights Commission, contacted Quincy Police regarding the matter. He urged police to investigate the incident as a hate crime.

"These are malicious vandals," Ezickson said.

Quincy Police are investigating the matter.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro contacted Police Chief William Falco regarding the incident.

"When I heard this was the second incident it raised a few eyebrows," said Gutro. "This is a serious and sensitive matter, and I want to get to the bottom of it."

Gutro said the city has experienced a rash of vandalism lately, and he was unsure whether this incident was part of it.

Ezickson said the worst offense was the disappearance of a sign containing the word "Never."

The display did read "Never again."

"Without the first word the sign now reads 'again,' which is unconscionable," Ezickson said while repairing the memorial last week.

The Holocaust Memorial is located across the street from Quincy District Court and contains photos, poetry, drawings, and other items relating to holocaust.

Ezickson updates the memorial on a regular basis, adding new photos, or historical items.

Unanimous Choice To Fill Cahill Seat

Keenan Sets Goals As New Councillor At-Large

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

By a unanimous vote, the city council Monday night elected John F. Keenan to fill the councillor at-large seat vacated by Tim Cahill.

Keenan, 39, was the runner-up in the 2001 election for councillor at-large.

Immediately after the council appointment Keenan took his seat alongside fellow councillors and cast a vote on an appropriation for the Recreation Department.

"It was an exciting night," Keenan told The Quincy Sun Tuesday. "I hope to build a reputation as someone who is fair, reasonable and willing to speak out on issues."

Many of Keenan's family members were in attendance, including his wife, Jeanne Marie, and three sons, Timothy, Kevin and Christopher.

Keenan worked as executive secretary for Mayor James Sheets from 1997 to 2001. Currently, he is the executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement System.

He polled 10,282 votes in the 2001 election, 801 votes behind third-place finisher Frank McCauley.

Keenan said he felt comfortable during his first meeting. "I've been following the council for the past few years and felt comfortable jumping right in," he said.

"Finances will be the issue that dictates the city's agenda over the next couple of years," Keenan said. "We are going to have to find ways to deliver services with less money."

He said it is imperative that the city comes up with a long-term plan to deal with upcoming fiscal issues.

"We have to do some planning now so when the economy turns around we have ways to take advantage of it," he said.

Keenan said he intends to run for councillor at-large again in November.

Council President Dan Raymondi said he looks forward to working with the council's latest addition.

"John Keenan brings an enormous amount of experience to the table, both in the public and private sector," he said.

During the 2001 election, two other candidates threw their hats into the ring for consideration.

Jimmy Liang, a Quincy restaurant owner and the first Asian-American candidate for city council, finished 3,109 votes behind Keenan in the 2001 election.

Liang withdrew his name from consideration last week, but said he would run again for the council in this year's election.

Denis Tardo, a real estate broker and a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars, was one of nine council at-large candidates in the preliminary election but did not win a nomination for the final election.

Tardo appeared at the council meeting seeking consideration for the vacant seat. He called Keenan a "fine man," but said the council needed someone with a different perspective on the issues. "I know what it is like on the other side of these desks," Tardo told the council. "We need politicians that will work with everybody and for community interests."

Use of Hurley's Boat House Extended To 2007

The City Council approved Mayor William Phelan's request to grant a five-year extension of a license agreement with the MDC for the continued use of the former Hurley's Boat House in Hough's Neck.

The new agreement allows the city to maintain free use of the state-owned boatyard until 2007.

The council approved the measure after Phelan announced that the city had reached an extension agreement with the MDC regarding the site.

"We're delighted that the MDC agreed to our request for this extension, as it will allow us to continue to provide recreational and educational programs at this site for Quincy residents," said Phelan.

The boatyard is home to the city's Maritime Center, which provides educational and recreational activities, such as fishing tournaments, programs for children and veterans, and boater safety courses. Residents also have public water access via a boat ramp.

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley said the Maritime Center is a great resource for community residents.

"It is my hope that the city purchase this property eventually," said Hanley.

Last year the Maritime Center was dedicated to the late Bernie Reisberg, who died in April. Reisberg was a former Harbormaster and well-known businessman.

Meeting Feb. 11 On Proposed Wollaston Day Care Center

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro has called a neighborhood meeting to hear a proposal to convert the former Friel Nursing Home at 58 Beach St. into a day care center.

The meeting will be Tuesday, Feb. 11, at 7 p.m. in the Sawyer Center of the Beechwood Knoll elementary school, Fenno Street.

Gutro said Wen Jin Huang, a Boston care provider and representative from the Asian Community Development Corporation (ACDC), will present their plans.

"Public input is an important part of the process," said Gutro, "and before the applicants move forward they want to make sure neighborhood questions and concerns are addressed."

Quincy Came Through It Well

(Following is a reprint of the Feb. 16, 1978 Sunbeams column on how Quincy coped with the Blizzard of '78. Do you remember?)

It was a storm you would like to forget but will vividly remember for as long as you live.

Awesome. Devastating. Furious. Horrendous. Mean. Terrible. You may have even a stronger one word description.

But as bad as it was with the suffering and the losses it brought -- in lives and damage -- and the inconveniences, it had one nice side effect: it brought out the best in most people.

People opened their hearts and extended helping hands to those in need. Not just neighbor helping neighbor, but stranger helping stranger.

A feeling of togetherness and unity descended upon the area in a way we hadn't seen since World War II. People were united again by catastrophe. They shared a common cause: survival. And they were more than willing to make personal sacrifices to help one another get through the ordeal. Most important: they cared for one another.

Houghs Neck and Germantown were the hardest hit in Quincy. Squantum got pretty well battered, too.

Compared to neighbors in Hull and Scituate, however, Quincy overall was lucky, as far as damage and other losses were concerned.

But Quincy got its fair share of the record near 27 inches of snow. The city was virtually paralyzed during most of the week. Business came to a costly standstill.

Overall, we think the city of Quincy deserves a "well done." New Mayor Arthur Tobin certainly has gotten his baptism under fire. He had been in office just 34 days when he got hit with the two worst snowstorms in our history.

We got a chance to personally observe him during this second storm -- the all-time champ in fury and meanness -- and saw a man calm and in complete control of the situation. He never reached for the panic button.

And so it was, all down the line.

Public Works Commissioner James (Pete) Ricciuti proved an able general as his army of weary workers fought around the clock to win the Big Battle of the Snow.

There were many others who did an outstanding job during the long hard week: Police, firefighters, Civil Defense units, nurses and doctors and hospital employees, snowmobilers, school personnel, and many volunteers in varying shapes and sizes who all pitched in to help Quincy residents in need.

There were many unsung heroes -- and many of their heroics will never be known except to those directly affected.

Of course, it wasn't all 100 percent peaches, cream and let's-all-sing-together. A lot of people came down with cabin fever in their homes. And even in snowfighting command centers where workers were cooped up for days under very trying circumstances, tempers flared now and then.

And there were gripes. About, for example, some people who managed to slip their cars by officials during the travel ban to stock up on food while most people had to trudge to stores on foot and lug small amounts of groceries home in their arms or on sleds.

Some didn't like the way their streets were plowed. Someone complained about snow being pushed against his fence, and another into his driveway. And there was the story about the guy who harassed one of the plow operators to the point where the latter stopped his truck, got out and flattened him.

And there was another one about the weirdo who telephoned a resident to report that his wife, who was in the hospital, had died. Police brought the grief-stricken man to the hospital, the story goes, where he found his wife very much alive.

That cruel prank, meanwhile, delayed police from taking needed medicine to another resident with high blood pressure.

Most of those and other similar incidents will be forgotten by the time the first robin gets up enough courage to put in an appearance here.

MAYOR ARTHUR TOBIN (left) greets Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III (center) and Joseph Winkle of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, who dropped in by helicopter to survey damage areas after the big storm.

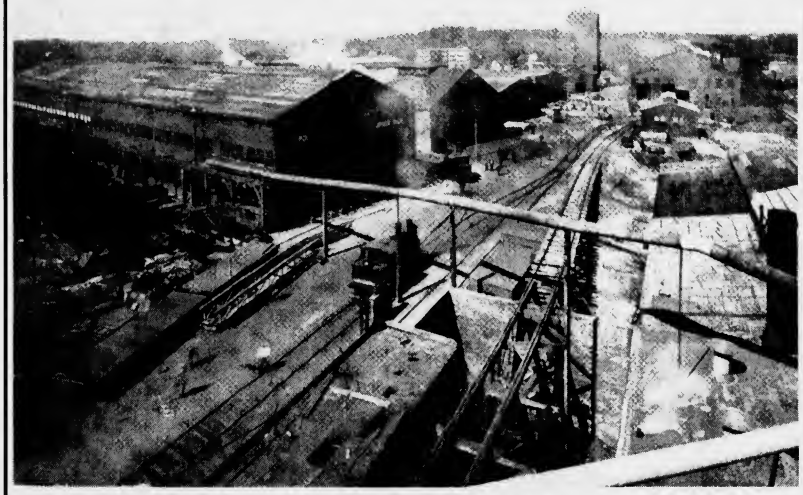
THE SALVATION ARMY and the Red Cross helped hundreds of Quincy residents forced from their homes during the Blizzard of '78. Mrs. Delia Aldrich (left) and Mrs. Cyril Winders, both of Sea St. in hard-hit Houghs Neck, received clothing and food from Quincy Salvation Army Captain Charles Weddington. Both women were evacuated from their homes during the storm. Quincy Sun Photo/Jonathan Burak

But there is one character we hope will not be forgotten: the looter.

Fortunately, for Quincy, there were only isolated cases of looting although some homes are still empty and could yet be plundered.

The looter, in our book is a creep -- a wart on humanity. He takes advantage of a tragic situation to steal from homes evacuated because of floods or lack of heat. Or steals from stores where windows have been blown in. •



We hope anyone arrested for looting and convicted after a fair hearing gets what he should: severe punishment.

We hope judges here in Quincy and elsewhere feel the same way about that. The looter deserves no sympathy.

He is as bad as the thief who steals from the blind, the bully who picks on the invalid and the rapist whose victim is the innocent.

Overall, Quincy came through it well. And most of us may even be better off in the long run for the experience. It sure humbled us.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1906 POSTCARD is a view of the main street of the Fore River Shipyard taken from atop the old 90-ton crane that was at the end of the main outfitting pier. After almost 100 years most of the buildings shown here are still standing. On the right is the roof of the machine shop where in their time were built the most advanced turbines and marine engines in the world. In a straight line of the rooftop is the large receiving building near the main gate on East Howard Street. In the center foreground is the roof of another smaller receiving building. The large building on the left was the mold loft where full-size drawings of a ship's frame were made on the floor. In later years, this building became the powerhouse. Alongside the mold loft was the old forge or blacksmith shop. When it was built it was the largest forge in America. The office is visible just over the rooftop of the forge. Shown in the foreground the Fore River Railroad is still in operation. It services the New England Fertilizer and Twin Rivers Technologies plants and soon perhaps some new customers at the old shipyard.

Urges Support For USS Salem

I am a volunteer crewmember who has worked aboard the USS Salem for the last year and a half. I have been involved with the interactive children's programs, which are run aboard ship for the Boy & Girl Scouts, the Sea Cadets and the Sea Scouts. These programs are excellent.

For example, Dr. William Anderson, who runs the Education on Board Program for the Quincy Middle Schools, won "The Educator Award for the year 2002" for his onboard education program.

The ship is a living history/interactive museum ship, which benefits all who visit her. This ranges from military veterans to ham radio operators. The USS Salem is the only existing heavy cruiser open to visitors in the world. The Salem has a complete interior and has many areas open to the public, which are not available for viewing on certain other museum ships.

The recent decision by the MWRA to sell the land the ship docks at is not in the best interests of the ship, nor is the MWRA honoring its commitment to Quincy on the pellet plant which was authorized by Quincy in return for permission to dock the ship at the shipyard.

The ship's staff and volunteers are working toward a long-term solution and expect the ship to continue offering its various programs indefinitely, regardless of the MWRA decision. The ship is not closing. Our expectation is that the ship will stay right where it is indefinitely, continuing to offer its various programs. In this endeavor, we encourage people to write to newspapers, their senators, congressmen, the MWRA and the Governor of Massachusetts, giving their support on the USS Salem.

Legislation And Housing Topics For COA Meeting

State legislation and housing will be discussed by guest speakers at the 41st annual meeting of the Quincy Council on Aging Board Thursday, Feb. 27, at 2 p.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library Richardson Building, 40 Washington St.

Rep. Bruce Ayers will discuss the legislative process of filing a bill and describe several bills that will come before the legislature during the current session.

Arthur Walberg, chairman of the Elder Housing Corporation Inc., a non-profit agency, will give and update on plans for the development of senior housing at Squantum Gardens.

This Week
1927
76 Years Ago

Members of Bethany Congregational Church pledged more than $56,000 at the kick-off dinner of a fundraising campaign to build a new church at the corner of Coddington and Spear Sts.

It was planned to build the church in Gothic-style with granite blocks of various colors to be mined from a Quincy quarry especially for that purpose.

The Bethany congregation was being aided in its efforts to build a new church by the Granite Trust Co., which planned to build a tower on the site of the old church, Hancock and Chestnut Sts.

Asian Caregivers Forum Asks: 'How Can We Help?'

More than 45 seniors and caregivers attended the first Asian caregivers forum in Quincy sponsored by the Asian American Service Association (AASA) and the Schlichte Learning Center at South Cove Manor in Boston.

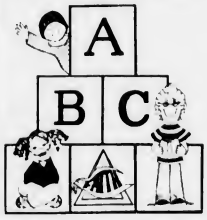
The forum was a project of the Asian Caregivers Outreach Program (ACOP) and posed the question to attendees: "As a caregiver, what support do you most need from your local community organization."

A 10-question survey based on the question is available in Chinese and English and will be distributed to local community organizations to reach more people. It is currently being translated in Vietnamese.

Caregiving was defined as individuals providing informal support or unpaid assistance to an elder or any person.

The range of care was extensive. Many senior participants spoke of caring for their grandchildren and other spoke of caring for their ninety-year-old mothers in law. Results of the forum are still being tallied.

"The forum was successful because we had a great turnout and we were able to have a candid conversation about the various issues that caregivers face today," said Lola Tom, director of the Schlichte Learning Center.



"A forum of this kind provides an outlet and communication of relief and support for caregivers."

The next Asian Caregivers Outreach Program forum will be held Saturday, April 12, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Senior Center in Randolph. Call Lola Tom at 617-482-2541 or Robert Chen at 617-471-9354.

College Chairman Surprised At Eviction Notice

Theresa Lord-Piatelli expressed surprise and disappointment when she learned that the Quincy School Committee had filed an eviction notice to force Quincy College out of its city owned main building by March 2 for non-payment of a raise in rent.

"I was under the impression we were making progress," said Lord-Piatelli, who is chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors.

"I'm not sure some people can appreciate the negative impact this can have on the college's future enrollment. My biggest concern is protecting the integrity of the institution."

The dispute began last June when the School Committee, strapped for cash and facing lean times, voted to raise the college's rent for city-owned Coddington Hall from $220,000 to $450,000 a year. The hike has already been calculated in the budget for Fiscal 2003.

"We had to do something," said Christine Cedrone, vice chair of the School Committee. "We're looking at a $450,000 cut in the school budget. They say they have paid $217,000 but I don't know if that is accurate."

The subcommittee of School Committee and Board of Governors members is still trying to negotiate a settlement that is satisfying to both sides and both Cedrone and Lord-Piatelli said they still have hopes of an agreement.

"The group is still working well together," said Cedrone.

"I'm still hopeful," said Lord-Piatelli but she added:

"The interesting thing was that Friday I spoke to Christine and Mike McFarland to schedule another meeting of the subcommittee and neither one of them mentioned the eviction notice. I was shocked at 3 p.m. to hear that the notice was served."

Lord-Piatelli said the School Committee members had proposed a Feb. 10 meeting but she would be in Washington that day and couldn't make it so she proposed a meeting Feb. 20.

"I'm waiting to hear from Mike McFarland now," she said.

"It's not terribly responsible," she added, "to portray the college as an ogress interested in sucking the life out of kindergarten children.

"It does a great disservice to the college and any person who has taken a class there and works there.

"But I still have hope. I'm not here to lash out at the School Committee. I do believe they are as dedicated a group of individuals who believe as much in their mission as we believe in ours.

"There's no shame in negotiating. The shame is in not negotiating in good faith."

ized we really had a problem going here."

Mirick's problem was everyone's problem on the night of Feb. 6 and 7, 1978, just 25 years ago today, when the worst snowstorm of the 20th Century, a mid-winter hurricane for all practical purposes, held Quincy and most of Greater Boston in its frigid grasp.

"This is something that happens once in a hundred years," said Police Capt. Roy Cavicchi. "I've been on the force 25 years and I've never seen anything like it."

Luckily, no deaths were attributed to the storm in Quincy and no serious fires were reported, another fortunate turn of events since general conflagration was a distinct possibility with most of the side streets impassable even to fire trucks and equipment for three days.

Ambulance crews and doctors were stationed in the far reaches of Squantum, Houghs Neck and Germantown in case those areas were isolated by flooding. Quincy Police kept eight snowmobiles ready for action in case of medical emergencies.

This is what Quincy was like from the evening of Monday, Feb. 6, 1978, to the weekend of Feb. 11:

Under an emergency declaration from Gov. Michael Dukakis, all but essential traffic was banned from the streets of Quincy for a week while crews with heavy equipment struggled to clear the roads against the ever-drifting snows. The ban was finally lifted at 6 p.m. Monday, Feb. 13.

The MBTA's Red Line stopped running between Andrew Station in Dorchester and Quincy at the height of the storm Tuesday morning and an army of 200 volunteer shovelers cleared the tracks of drifts up to 18 feet deep on the tracks. Limited service was resumed Friday.

The Patriot Ledger failed to publish Tuesday due to weather conditions, possibly for the first time ever. The Quincy Sun, normally on the stands Wednesday, finally made it on Friday. Radio WJDA was off the air four hours Tuesday when Town Brook flooded the studio transmitter.

The Willows section of Houghs Neck near the corner of Sea and Babcock Streets was totally submerged, cutting off Houghs Neck from the mainland. Some 70 families were evacuated from their homes in Houghs Neck, most of them by small boats.

Hundreds of evacuees from all over the city were housed at the Quincy Armory. the Atherton Hough School and the Carlton House in North Quincy. Some senior citizens were cared for in the VoTech Nursing School and LPN quarters were turned into a nursery for kids as young as eight months.

School was canceled for the week and the kitchen at the Vo Tech School was thrown open to feed the storm fighters and refugees with Harold Galvin, the custodian, pressed into service as chef. About 1,400 people were fed on Wednesday alone .

When food ran out at the Vo Tech, a Marine Corps bulldozer was sent to break through the snow into the Central Commissary in the old Lincoln School to refill the larder.

Some telephone operators were on the job for 35 to 48 hours straight handling calls and eventually the New England Telephone Co. had to issue an appeal for people familiar with switchboard operations to fill in as volunteers and give the operators a rest.

Some 1,500 Mass Electric customers lost power during the storm but it was restored by Wednesday afternoon. "The problem," said spokesman John Newsome, "was getting people to the source of the power failure. The flooding along the shore kept our vehicles out."

Looters were few but active and dealt with swiftly. Smyth's Liquor Store on Newbury Street in North Quincy was all but cleaned out by thieves. Two men were arrested breaking into the Roman Gardens Cafe on Southern Artery. About 25 were busted for looting and brought before a Grand Jury within a week.

"We have to do it swiftly," said Assistant District Attorney Gerald Kirby. "We can't let it run its course and be forgotten. The longer we wait too often we forget how angry we are now."

Houghs Neck, all but surrounded by water, was particularly hard hit.

Tom Rollins, 15, the oldest of the Rollins kids at 93 Edgewater Drive, was getting ready for bed Monday night. "All of a sudden I heard one of my little brothers yell, 'Water's coming in the cellar!' I heard my father say, 'Everybody get on your coats!' I put on my shoes and grabbed my coat and we started carrying out the little kids."

Dominic J. Conso of 45 Stoughton St. got a call for help from his sister on Rockland Street. "I tried to help her but I couldn't reach her," he said. "The phone went out while we were talking on it. My electricity went out and the gas. Then we smelled smoke and we got the hell out of there."

The floor of the Quincy Yacht Club collapsed into the sea, taking with it the club's brand new $1,600 cash register, ice machine, refrigerator and radar range and sheering off the front and side porches. Damage estimates reach as high as $400,000.

The National Guard rescued Paul Murphy of 59 Edgewater Drive, age 63 and disabled. from his home by snowmobile after he had spent 12 hours in the kitchen in water up to his knees with three gas burners going to provide heat.

"At 9 o'clock Monday night the road was dry," said Maurice Houlihan of 156 Stoughton St. in the Willows. "The plows were coming by and there was very little snow. The next thing it hit all of a sudden — the water. We didn't have time to get out really. We were lucky to get out the back."

But. no matter how dire the disaster, rays of light shown through the darkness.

"There's always some good that comes out of every happening," said Arthur Tobin, who was mayor of Quincy at the time. "The blessing of this blizzard was that it brought the people of our city together."

This was never better exemplified than by the actions of Thomas Grenham, 61, of 135 Edgewater Drive, his wife, Anne, and their three sons, Thomas, 33, David, 28, and Robert, 22, who opened their damaged but intact home to their refugee neighbors.

"We had 42 people at the house on Monday and Tuesday," said Grenham matter-of-factly. "There's plenty of damage but we were more fortunate than the others."

And for good measure, David and Robert, with an assist from Robert Galligan, another neighbor, rescued William McGrath, 25, and his brother, Joseph, 23, both confined to wheel chairs by muscular dystrophy, trapped in water up to their waists in the house next door, and took them home to await further rescue by the National Guard.

It is easy to understand why a month later, when another nine inches of snow fell on the city in a storm March 4-5, it was referred to by many in Quincy as "just a dusting."

It Wasn't Easy But The Sun Got Out

It wasn't easy, but The Quincy Sun, like other newspapers, "got out" during the Blizzard of '78.

Special effort and dedication on the part of a skeleton crew made it possible.

The Thursday, Feb. 9 issue that week did not make it on Thursday. But it was printed and out — partially — on Friday, the next day.

It took from 11 a.m. Thursday to 4:30 a.m. Friday to have the 28-page issue ready for printing. And, it was printed and distribution started a few hours later.

Page One carried three photos of the storm at its furious height and the main story under the bold headline: Please, No More !!!

Mail subscribers' copies were in the Quincy Post Office Friday afternoon. Then the tough job of getting the papers to the newsstands and to The Sun's carriers began. And continued through Sunday.

Owners and managers of stores graciously allowed us to drop many news carriers route papers off there. Ordinarily, the papers are delivered to the homes of the carriers for them to pick up. Their papers were dropped at the store closest to them.

And the vast majority of our readers were kind enough to forgive us for a paper that was a little late.

The team that worked hard to get the paper printed and delivered comprised:

Tom Henshaw, Elaine German, Jonathan Burak, Jack Tolson, Donna Bosworth, David Gray, William Sawler, Tom Brady and publisher Henry Bosworth

Would You Believe 56 Inches Of Snow!

By crackee, winters just ain't what they used to be when we wuz kids.

For those young Quincy residents who are bummed out by the meager amounts of snow that have fallen thus far during the "tough" winter of 2002-03, hark to these figures:

Twenty-five years ago, in the winter of 1977-78 . . .

- 22 inches fell on Jan. 20.
- 26-plus inches fell on Feb. 6-7.
- 9 inches fell on March 4-5.

That's 57 inches, nearly five feet, of snow in less than seven weeks, if not a record then pretty close to it.

The Big Dig Out Goes On . . . And On . . . and on. . .

Please, No More!!!

GHOST TOWN: Lone walker braves high winds and deluge snow in deserted Quincy Sq. Tuesday, during the height of the most furious storm to hit the New England area in recorded history. Nearly 2' inches were dumped here and winds reached gusts of more than 90 miles an hour during what was the a winter hurricane. Only the false outline of South Shore Bank can be seen in the snowy background.

ONE WAY TO get around Quincy on Tuesday as vehicles were banned by Gov. Dukakis' state of emergency declaration was by ski-mobile as pictured here as Pat Sanderson makes his way along Woodward Ave. That's the Va-Tech School in the background.

An army of weary workers struggled into the weekend to dig Quincy out from under what may be the worst snowfall of the 20th century, one that brought the city to a standstill for at least four days.

The northeast storm, backed by winds that gusted to more than 90 miles an hour, dumped at least 36 inches of snow, the heaviest since the Boston weather bureau began keeping records in 1870.

High tides urged on by the winds, four at least five feet higher than usual, flooding sections of Houghs Neck and Squantum where several hundred people were evacuated.

This was something that happens once in a hundred years," said Quincy Police Capt. Jim Gaskvis. "I've been on the force 25 years and I've never seen anything like it.

No deaths were attributed to the storm in Quincy.

The Quincy Fire Dept. reported no serious fires during the storm, a fortunate turn of events since most of the side streets in the city were impassable for at least three days.

We were very very lucky," said a Fire Department spokesman.

Under Gov. Dukakis' emergency declaration all but the most essential traffic was banned from Quincy streets while crews with heavy equipment labored through the nights to keep the main roads

There were isolated incidents of looting.

Smith's Package Store, Newbury St. North Quincy, was entered by former Gov Councillor I. Nikcal Smith was reported almost cleaned out by thieves. Two men were arrested after breaking into the Roman Gardens Cafe, Southern Artery.

There were other reports of looting in the hard-hit section of Houghs Neck.

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William D. Delahunt promised swift punishment for looters.

I will expedite the prosecution of any cases of looting," he said. I will avoid the district courts and go straight to the grand jury. I will ask high bail and recommend substantial sentences."

The MBTA's Red Line ceased to operate between Andrews Station and Quincy at the height of the storm Tuesday and the next day some 200 shovelers attacked drifts up to 18 feet deep on the tracks.

Limited service between Quincy and Ashmont was expected to begin early Friday.

The MBTA also took its buses off Quincy streets said spokesman Rob Ferris, to allow cleanup crews to work unimpeded.

John Newsome of Mass Electric said some 1500 customers in Quincy lost power, mostly in North Quincy and Quincy Point during the storm but it was restored Wednesday afternoon. Isolated outages, particularly in Houghs Neck were reported later.

The problem was getting people to the source of the failure, said Newsome. The

Kennedy Visits Quincy To Seek Federal Aid

Senator Edward M. Kennedy visited Quincy Thursday afternoon and promised that the Congressional delegation would be working on federal aid to pay for the enormous clean up job.

He said Quincy is declared a disaster area it would mean that the federal government would pay 75% of the cost of storm removal and the state would pay

He said the delegation will also work on obtaining grants for persons whose homes have been devastated and other programs for small businesses.

Gov. Dukakis extended the emergency declaration at midnight Friday, but the banks, which had been closed since Tuesday, the post office and other stores, if employees could get to work without using their cars.

WINTER! CAR CARE

AAA Offers Winter Advice For Parents Of Young Drivers

Winter driving can be challenging to any motorist, but slippery roads can be especially difficult for novice drivers dealing with ice and snow for the first time, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Parents need to work with their teens to help them gain the experience they need for safe winter driving in the safest possible environment," said John Paul, AAA manager of Traffic Safety and Public Affairs.

AAA offers the following tips to help parents teach their teens to drive in winter conditions:

• Under close supervision, let your teen practice slow speed maneuvers on a wide-open snow- or ice-covered parking lot. Have him or her practice hard braking and steering in skidding conditions.

• A novice driver's first on-the-road experience with winter-weather driving should not occur during a major snowstorm. Wait until conditions are less severe.

• Consider limiting your teen's driving on slippery conditions to daylight hours until they have gained experience.

• Remind your teen that driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol is dangerous under any conditions, and that the risk is even greater on slippery roads.

• Make sure the vehicle your teen is driving is equipped with essential emergency equipment, including a flashlight, blankets, jumper cables, sand or non-clumping cat litter and a small shovel or ice scraper.

Gas Prices Unchanged Again, Says AAA

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are unchanged for the second straight week, according to the AAA Southern New England.

The January 27 survey of prices conducted by AAA found self serve, regular unleaded average $1.51 per gallon, the same price as the last two weeks. The current price is 39 cents higher than the $1.12 found at this time last year.

Last week's cold was tough on vehicle batteries. AAA reminds motorists that now is a good time to have their batteries tested, especially ones that required a jump start last week, as well as ones that started cars, but with increasing difficulty last week.

Current local prices and their ranges are:

Self Serve: $1.51 ($1.36 - $1.63), $1.61 ($1.46 - $1.73), $1.70 ($1.54 - $1.79), $1.57 ($1.45 - $1.75)

Grade: Regular Unleaded, Midgrade Unleaded, Premium Unleaded, Diesel

Full Serve: $1.65 ($1.49 - $1.85), $1.74 ($1.59 - $1.95), $1.82 ($1.67 - $1.99), $1.72 ($1.59 - $1.99)

AAA reminds motorists to take advantage of the range in prices and to shop around for the best prices in their area.

Warm Answers To Cold Questions

(NAPS)—Although your car would look silly in a parka, there are things to do to keep it running well in cold weather. The following are some common questions — the answers will help to keep both you and your car healthy and safe:

Q: I'm going on a long drive to one of the big ski resorts. Are there things I should do to prepare my car?

A: Preparing an emergency kit is great for winter driving — especially before a long drive on winding roads. Bring a shovel, flares, jumper cables, blankets, water, large flashlight, portable radio, batteries, work gloves, towel, first aid kit and some sand or kitty litter for emergency traction. Before you leave, inspect all of your exterior lights to make sure they are all working.

Q: Are my all-season tires OK for driving in the snow?

A: Many all-season tires are designed for both wet and dry weather conditions. However, many tire manufacturers recommend a set of four winter tires for snowy weather. If you don't have much snow in your area, you should at least have your treads checked at a tire retailer or a service center. Or, place a penny in the tread with Lincoln's head upside and facing you. If you can see the top of Lincoln's head, it is time to replace your tires.

Q: I tend to let the gas tank level drift pretty low during the winter. The fewer trips to the gas station — the less I'm stepping out into the cold. Is this all right?

A: Always keep your gas tank at least half full during the winter. The more air that's in the tank, the more condensation can form, adding water to the gas. This can hurt its performance and possibly cause fuel system damage.

Q: Should I drive differently in snow or icy conditions?

A: The best treatment for roadside emergencies is prevention. Here is a quick course in driving on snow and ice: Go steady and slow, avoid jerking the wheel, give yourself extra braking room and sign up with an auto club that provides emergency roadside assistance.

Q: Are there any other things I need to do for my car for the winter besides making sure the antifreeze and battery are in good shape?

A: You're on the right track, as your antifreeze fluid should be fresh and the batter fully charged. If your battery is older than two years old, bring it to a service center. The technicians can check the battery as well as all the vital fluids, belts and hoses, wiper blades and windshield washer fluid. It's also the right place to be if it's time for your 3,000-mile oil change.

Council Hears From Developer, Residents On Highpoint Project

The City Council Monday night heard from residents who claim that blasting at the Highpoint project has caused damage to their property.

Attorneys for the project's developer, Congress Group Ventures of Cambridge, attended the meeting and gave a stern warning to the council: Take any action regarding the special permit issued to the developer and you could open yourself up to legal action.

In 1999, the council granted a special permit for the $250 million Highpoint project as part of a settlement with Dean Stratouly, who took the matter to land court after an initial council rejection.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin asked for Monday night's hearing to discuss the development project and blasting at the site. He said residents have complained of various kinds of damage to their property, including cracked walls, ceilings and home foundations.

Richard Rudman, attorney for Congress Group, said the developer has complied with all state and city blasting regulations.

Rudman said "incidental" blasting will continue until the summer.

Approximately 15 abutters to the project attended the meeting.

UNCLE SAM ROUNSEVILLE'S hillboard at Beale St. and Newport Ave., Wollaston has an appeal to help a friend, Ray McEachern, Patriot Ledger reporter, who is waiting to undergo a kidney transplant at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. Rounseville said he will use the billboard in the future for others needing donors. Quincy Sun Photo/Trish Bossart

Something Special For Your Valentine!

Red Gems Are Hot For Valentine's Day

(NAPS) – Think red for Valentine's Day – as in red gemstones. They're hot, sexy, confident, passionate...and never boring. Each red gem had its own personality – and it radiates from every facet.

If you are shopping for a red gemstone for Valentine's Day, there are several intriguing choices available – and one is bound to be right for you. Colored stone experts at the Gemological Institute of America (GIA), the world's foremost authority in gemology, provide the following insightful glimpses into four of the most popular red gemstone choices:

Ruby: King of Red Gemstones

Mined in exotic locales around the world – including Myanmar, Madagascar, East Africa, and Sri Lanka – the ruby is the undisputed kind of red gems. Ruby offers a distinctive range of red hues that vary from light (pinkish) to dark, velvety reds, and hits a brighter red in between. And, ruby is very hard – second only to diamond in hardness (resistance to scratching).

What's the best ruby shade? It's the one that speaks to you, as the potential wearer of this appealing gem. View the spectrum of red hues, and see which one best fits you. Keep in mind that vivid rubies are considered the highest quality, but they are rare and will thus be more expensive.

Spinel: The Great Pretender

GIA's colored-stone experts point out that quite a few famous "rubies" in royal jewels throughout the world are actually spinels – some even reside in the British Crown Jewels. Spinel has been mistaken for ruby for centuries.

Now that it has come into its own, spinel fans love its brilliance and hardness. They are also captivated by its rich reds, although the gem appears in a spectrum is a durable gem that is affordable but also uncommon. It's mined in Myanmar, Sri Lanka, Tanzania, Tajikistan (part of the former Soviet Union) and Vietnam.

Garnet: The Popular Gem

Although garnets appear in many colors, red is the most admired. It's also plentiful and affordable. Garnet is very durable, so it's ideal for daily wear.

Three of the most common red garnets are almandine, rhodolite, and pyrope. Almandine garnet is a medium-red color. Rhodolite is found in red with purple or raspberry overtones. Pyrope, from the Greek word pyropus meaning "fiery-eyed" is the darkest red garnet. The finest specimens have a glowing red color. Garnets are mined in East Africa, India, and Sri Lanka.

Tourmaline: A Colorful Character

This colorful gemstone occurs in more colors and color combinations than any other gemstone variety, according to GIA. In the tourmaline family, a red gemstone is referred to as a rubellite. Widely available, rubellites also come in larger sizes, making them a favorite choice for contemporary jewelry. Important sources of rubellite are Brazil and Nigeria.

When shopping for gemstones, it's advisable to go to a jeweler who has credentials from GIA, such as a Graduate Gemologist (G.G.) or Accredited Jewelry Professional (A.J.P.). GIA also offers identification reports on gemstones, including those discusses here, to verify their authenticity. For more information, visit www.gia.edu, or call 800-421-7250.

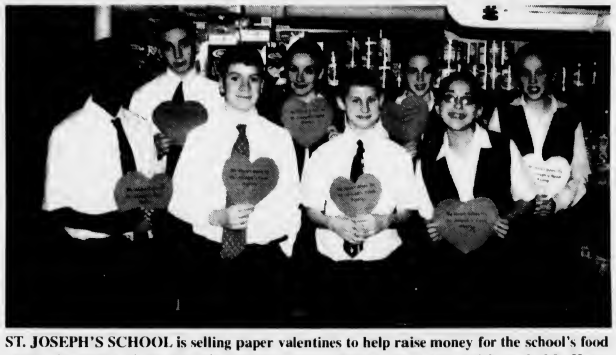
7th Presidents Day Winter Carnival Feb. 17

Quincy will host the 7th annual Presidents Day Winter Carnival Monday, Feb. 17.

The celebration in Quincy Center will feature musical entertainment, presidential re-enactments, games and rides for kids, ice sculptures, hayrides and more.

The Winter Carnival will take place from noon to 4 p.m. at City Hall, Presidents' Place Atrium and the Church of the Presidents. There will also be games and entertainment outside Hancock Street.



"We are proud to continue our tradition as the City of Presidents by honoring our presidential heritage and offering a great event for Quincy families. I strongly encourage you to help kick off the school vacation week with this fun event," Phelan said.

The Presidents Day Winter Festival will feature an outdoor mini-golf course, facepainters, hat-decorating, moonwalks, hayrides, a magic show and a lot of fun for children. Actors will bring to life Teddy Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln, George Washington, Calvin Coolidge and Eleanor Roosevelt through dramatic re-enactments of these historic figures.

Music will fill Presidents' Place Atrium throughout the afternoon and the Quincy Art Association will host an exhibit at City Hall. Street performers, such as stilt-walkers and chain saw artists, will entertain crowds throughout the day outside the venues. There will be tours available of the tombs of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams in First Parish Church.

"The Presidents Day Winter Carnival is a unique combination of fun and education that offers something for everyone in the family. I hope the people of Quincy join us in celebrating our unique history and have a lot of fun in the process," Phelan said.

Admission is free for the celebration.

Donna Williams Receives Jack Conway Award

Donna Williams was recently awarded Jack Conway & Co.'s annual "Thanksgiving Award" for her work in the Quincy office.

Chairman Jack Conway, President Richard F. Cahill and Vice President of Sales Denis Lilla presented the awards at the company's annual breakfast held at Plimoth Plantation. Winners from each office received a holiday turkey in recognition of their efforts throughout the year.

"What makes the Thanksgiving award so special is that the winners are chosen by their colleagues," Conway said. "Each office's sales team selects the person they feel best represents the Conway spirit of cooperation, helpfulness and goodwill."

As part of the event, Conway associates and employees collected nearly $2,500 worth of canned food and other non-perishable goods to benefit the area shelters operated by MainSpring Coalition for the Homeless and the social-service programs of The Charity Guild.

The Brockton Coalition for the Homeless operates MainSpring House in Brockton, which provides shelter, food, educational programs and counseling to individuals and families in need. MainSpring Houses as many as 60 homeless individuals per night; Conway House in Middleboro provides shelter for 13 homeless families in a residence on East Grove Street.

The Charity Guild Inc. is a Brockton-based non-profit organization that provides food, clothing and donated household items to low-income individuals and families throughout the region.

DONNA WILLIAMS receives a Jack Conway "Thanksgiving Award" from President Richard Cahill for her work in the firm's Quincy office.

The group, which operates a food pantry and thrift shop, receives no state funding and pays for its programs through the generous contributions of its members, area residents and local businesses.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

The Right Coverage For Your Historic Home

(NAPS) — Properly insuring a historic home can be the first step to restoring it to its original state after a fire or other loss.

Unfortunately, many homeowners insurance policies don't take into account all the cost factors of rebuilding historic homes, especially scarce materials and old-world craftsmanship.

Mary Ann Avnet, a vice president with the Chubb Group of Insurance Companies, advises homeowners to obtain a thorough home appraisal that considers these costs.

Since these costs can escalate rapidly, she advises historic homeowners to make sure their insurance policies provide guaranteed replacement cost coverage. This can cover full cost of rebuilding, regardless of the policy limit.

Avnet also warns that many insurers no longer provide this coverage or they sell it as a rider capped at 125 percent or 150 percent of policy limit. She also advises homeowners to ask their agents if their policy will pay for building code upgrades, such as rewiring.

Making Homes More User-Friendly

(NAPS) – When remodeling or building a new home, homeowners can choose products designed to make their homes safer and easier to live in.

A new trend called "Universal Design" aims to make households more accessible by creating environments that adapt to a family's changing needs. This could mean installing extra-wide doorways in a house where the residents may require wheelchairs or walkers, or other changes where there are small children.

User-friendly designs, such as non-slip flooring and cabinet shelves that roll out for easier access, are both examples of universal design at work. So is installing lever door handles. Whether one's hands are full or packages or groceries, or if a medical condition, such as arthritis, has made opening doors more difficult, lever door handles require less force to open than traditional doorknobs.

One area of the home where universal design can make a big difference is the bathroom, says Ken Martin, senior director of produce marketing for Delta Faucet Company. "A few subtle improvements can make a big difference towards enhancing overall safety and convenience for everyone, regardless of age or physical condition," he says.

For example, Delta offers a selection of ADA-compliant lever faucet handles that can be operated with less than five pounds of force. In addition, the company introduced the industry's first hands-free electronic residential faucet. Just like the electronic faucets found in airports and other public spaces, the Delta e-Flow automatically turns on when an individual places his or her hands under the spout.

"Lever faucet styles and hands-free faucet designs are easier for older adults to operate than more traditional faucet handles," says Martin. "Parents will appreciate these designs as well, because they make it easier for children to turn the faucet on/off. In addition, the e-Flow comes with the ability to preset water temperature limits to prevent youngsters from turning the water too hot."

By incorporating universal design elements like these into their homes, consumers can make a lasting investment that will help guarantee their family's comfort for years to come.

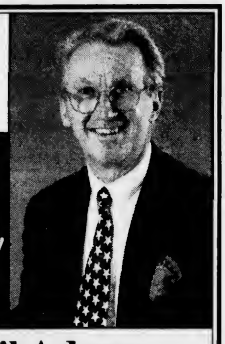
Are There Hidden Toxins In Your Home?

(NAPS) — Over the last 50 years, man-made chemicals and pesticides have spread at almost inconceivable rates. Some of us do our best to minimize exposure to everyday toxins, yet there may be toxic dangers lurking in our own homes.

"There are common sense things one can do to reduce the toxic exposure in one's home," says Environmental Scientist Michael Wisner. "Lead comes from vehicular and industrial exhaust and being heavier than air, falls to the ground. If you leave your shoes at the door before walking into your house, you can reduce exposure to lead by 40 percent. Another simple tip is to clean things with baking soda, vinegar and water rather than harsh chemical cleaners."

Wisner also says that reducing the levels of toxins that have accumulated in the body is vital. He recommends the program described in the book "Clear Body Clear Mind" by New York Times best-selling author L. Ron Hubbard.

The book details Hubbard's research that resulted in his breakthrough discovery that toxic residues can be trapped in the fatty tissues of our bodies and can affect mental and spiritual well-being. The program has now been successfully completed by over 250,000 people worldwide.



Wisner and other scientists studied the program; and while Wisner made it clear that the program and book make no medical claims and results may vary from person to person, he adds, "I have contributed to 12 independent, published scientific studies that in my opinion clearly document the scientific efficacy and safety of the program."

Wisner also extols the more subjective results. "We put over 3,000 normal people through the program, seeing some incredible results on a scientific level," he says. "But it is important to note that many of those who have completed the program have experienced results such as heightened ability to think clearly and a general increase of happiness in life.

"The key is to do everything we can to reduce the toxins we use in our environments, while at the same time reducing our internal exposure. Mr. Hubbard's Clear Body Clear Mind is a survival tool in today's chemical world."

In Celebration Of Club's 30th Annual Youth Hockey Tournament

Quincy Kiwanis To Host Stanley Cup Appearance March 1

Hockey's Holy Grail, the Stanley Cup, will appear in Quincy Saturday, March 1, to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament.

"We are very proud to be able to have the most famous trophy in sports come to Quincy," said Quincy Kiwanian Larry Kelly of Success Real Estate who was instrumental in arranging the Cup's visit to the City of Presidents.

"We want to celebrate 30 years of the Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament by giving hockey fans a rare chance to get up close and personal with the Stanley Cup."

Quincy Kiwanis Club President John Keohane said the club is honored to have the Stanley Cup in Quincy. "It represents the pinnacle of competition for hockey players and fans. The cup symbolizes what is possible for all youth hockey players who have practiced and played the sport they love," Keohane said.

The Stanley Cup, which will be accompanied by a representative from the National Hockey League, will appear at the North Quincy High School auditorium, 316 Hancock St., from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission will be $5 per person available only at the door, with all proceeds benefiting Kiwanis charities. Fans attending will be able to park in front of the high school or pay to park at the MBTA parking lot across the street.

THE STANLEY CUP will appear at North Quincy High School auditorium Saturday, March 1 from 1 to 5 p.m.

People will be allowed to view the Stanley Cup and pose for a photo. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own cameras but a photographer will be on hand to take photos for $5 per photo.

First awarded in 1893, the Stanley Cup is the oldest trophy competed for by professional athletes. The Stanley Cup has logged more than 400,000 miles in travel over the past five years and has raised more than $4 million for charity the past three seasons. Standing just under three feet in height and weighing 35 pounds, the Stanley Cup has over 2,000 names engraved on it.

The Quincy Kiwanis tournament is one of the most prestigious youth tournaments in New England. Hosted by Quincy Kiwanis at Quincy Youth Arena, the tourney has had teams participate from as far west as California and as far east as Austria.

This year's tournament features 26 teams from Quincy and the South Shore, along with teams from California, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Canada and Austria. There are four divisions of competition: Mites, Squirts, Pee Wees and Bantams.

The games begin Monday, Feb. 17, and conclude with the championship matches Sunday, Feb. 23.

For more information on the tourney or the Stanley Cup, call Quincy Youth Arena at 617-479-8371.

YOUTH FROM THE South Shore YMCA in Quincy were recently invited to attend a Boston Celtics-Orlando Magic game at the FleetCenter as part of "McDonald's Community Corner" program. The children had the opportunity to see both teams in the pre-game shoot-around. As part of the program, the Celtics host 24 children from a local non-profit organization at each home game this season. Each youngster receives a complimentary ticket to the game and a Celtics/ McDonald's T-shirt. (Steve Lipofsky photo)

With Regular Season Wrapped Up

Scrimmages To Prepare Presidents For Postseason

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School hockey team finished its regular season last Saturday night — and it's only the beginning of February.

In a strange schedule twist this year, the Presidents have the next three weeks off before state tournament play begins. For comparison, North Quincy closes its regular season Feb. 15.

"I've never seen this before," said head coach Bob Sylvia. "But that's the way the schedule goes. It's a unique year because Thanksgiving was so late. To go three weeks without organized games has its ups and downs."

To fill the gap, Quincy scrimmages Hanover today (Thursday) and faces off against Weymouth next Thursday. It will scrimmage two more times before the postseason.

"It will be interesting to see how it plays out," Sylvia said. "It's good because we get a chance to rest our injuries and we can work on our weakness at this stage of the season. I don't think it will impede any momentum. We didn't really develop any at the end of the season."

Indeed, Quincy (11-6-1 overall, 6-5-1 Atlantic Coast League) came out flat in its final two games at home. Last Wednesday it fell to Whitman-Hanson, 4-2, which snapped a seven-game winning streak, and last Saturday it pulled out a thrilling 4-4 tie with Nauset after a sluggish start.

In the Nauset game, the Warriors stormed out to a 2-0 lead only five minutes into the first period and held a 4-0 lead in the final frame before the Presidents caught fire, netting four goals in the final four minutes.

Senior Ryan Conley notched Quincy's first goal and senior Joe Bohan pocketed the second. The Presidents then pulled their goalie for the extra man and it paid off as senior Brendan Conley scored to make it 4-3.

With the goalie still off the ice, junior Josh Giordani, the ACL's leading scorer with 44 points), potted his 19th goal of the season with only nine seconds left in the game to secure the stalemate.

"We started sluggish and that's what got us into trouble," Sylvia said. "We completely dominated the third period and were able to come back."

STATIC SITUATION

While occurrences are quite rare, there is the potential for static electricity-related incidents at retail gasoline outlets, especially during cool/cold and dry climate conditions. This situation may occur when there is a build-up of static electricity as a result of re-entering the vehicle during refueling, particularly when it is cold and dry. If the motorist then returns to the gasoline pump nozzle to complete fueling, the static may discharge at the fill point to cause a flash fire or a sustained fire with gasoline vapors. To guard against this possibility, vehicle owners are urged to resist the temptation to get back into their vehicle while fueling in cold, dry weather. Staying outside the vehicle greatly reduces the likelihood of static electricity buildup.

North Quincy Nips Barnstable In OT, 48-47

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

For a change, the basketball gods were on the North Quincy High School girls' basketball team's side.

Coming off a 56-47 loss at home to Old Colony League leader Bridgewater-Raynham last Tuesday, the Red Raiders traveled to the Cape last Friday night to take on second-place Barnstable.

North Quincy triumphed, 48-47, in overtime, thanks to its clutch performance at the free-throw line and Barnstable's poor outing, and a buzzer-beating 3-pointer at the end of the first half.

"It's about time things went our way," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "They were ranked in the top 20 at the time. Not any more. We knew we could do it. We lost a lot of close games this year.

"It was a big win on the road for us. We had a tough week. We played the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the league and we split with them."

North Quincy, which snapped a three-game losing streak, is 7-6 overall and 6-5 in the OCL (The two losses to Brockton do not count toward its record). It needs to win two of its final five games to qualify for the state tournament.

North Quincy played at Braintree Monday, hosted Plymouth South Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it travels to Silver Lake.

"We're hoping to qualify this week," MacFarlane said.

The Red Raiders took a five-point lead into the locker room at halftime when senior forward and quad-captain Kristen DiMattio nailed a trey at the buzzer. "That turned out to be huge," MacFarlane said.

North Quincy maintained its lead in the second half but things got a little interesting late in the game when it lost its leading scorer.

Senior center and quad-captain April Suprey, who saw limited time due to foul trouble, picked up her fifth and had to watch the final three minutes from the bench.

"When April fouled out, you could see that Barnstable thought the game was over," MacFarlane said. "But the kids kept their cool and looked for each other."

Barnstable tied the game at 40 with nine seconds left in regulation to send the game into the extra session. In OT, Barnstable missed three free-bies while junior guard Beth Goodrich hit 3 of 4, including two with five seconds left in a one-on-one situation for a four-point advantage.

And those turned out to be the difference as Barnstable drained at 3-pointer at the buzzer from halfcourt.

DiMattio, in her first game back from a knee injury, led the team with 12 points and provided some clutch scoring in the second half. "She hit a couple of left-handed baseline hook shots in the second half that were huge," MacFarlane said.

Goodrich finished with 10 points and Suprey ended up with 11 points and seven rebounds.

Presidents Come Close To Tournament Spot

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The Quincy High School boys' basketball team came so close to wrapping up its first state tournament berth in six years last week.

The Presidents, needing two more wins, ended up suffering a pair of disheartening defeats, first falling at Atlantic Coast League leader Dennis-Yarmouth, 72-70, last Tuesday, and then to Nauset, 61-57, at home last Friday night.

"I spoke to the kids on Sunday and I applauded them in a week where we went 0-2. We played that well," said head coach John Franceschini, who saw his team's five-game winning streak come to an end.

"Both were very solid games. The difference was shots fell for the other teams and, unfortunately, not for us. It was not due to forced errors."

Quincy (8-6 overall, 5-4 ACL) hosted Sandwich Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it heads to Randolph.

In the Nauset game, the Presidents — who fell behind 26-4 in the first meeting Jan. 7 — sizzled in the opening minutes as they jumped out to an 11-4 lead. "I think that was in the back of their minds," Franceschini said of first game.

The Warriors, though, regrouped after a timeout and eventually cut the deficit to 22-21 with 6:08 left to play. During that stretch, senior guard Matt Ramponi, who had seven points, picked up his third foul and Franceschini had to sit him down the rest of the half.

After a timeout, Quincy responded with two quick hoops — a one-handed putback by senior center Anthony Boyle and a driving layup by senior guard Shawn Munchbach.

Down the stretch, Boyle ignited Quincy's offense with a dominating inside game, scoring nine of his 11 first-half points as Quincy took a 35-32 lead into the locker room.

"Boyle has been consistently playing that well," Franceschini said.

Quincy's hot shooting cooled to start the second half. Senior point guard Kevin O'Connell hit a free throw that tied the game at 36, but it took nearly six minutes before Quincy hit its first field goal, an O'Connell jumper that made it 41-38

The Presidents remained close and tied the game twice, but they could never pass the Warriors.

With about four minutes left they tied the game at 50. After sophomore guard Parker Scott hit a free throw, Munchbach rebounded Scott's miss on the second attempt and found Boyle for a jumper. And with about two minutes left, Munchbach drained a 3-pointer in the left corner to even the score at 54.

Nauset answered with a fast-break jumper by Derek Evans and two Chris MacDonald buckets in the paint for a 60-54 lead, and the game.

Boyle finished with a team-high 14 points, Munchbach added 11 and O'Connell chipped in 10. Ramponi (9 points) and senior forward Mike Quigley (8) also contributed to the offense.

Fall By One Point, 46-45

Raiders And Rockland Battle Into Overtime

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team needed to catch a break to beat perennial power Rockland Monday night at home.

Just being in that position, however, is a huge accomplishment for the Red Raiders, who have made great strides lately.

Trailing by one in overtime, North Quincy took the ball out from under its basket with seven seconds left and freshman guard Kyle Costa got a decent shot off before the buzzer but the ball rolled off the rim for a 46-45 setback.

"It was the best game of the year," said first-year head coach James Rendle. "To play a Rockland team that tough, I'm thrilled. It was a great effort. But I'm also disappointed that we lost. We deserve a break. We haven't had one all year."

North Quincy (4-12 overall, 3-8 Old Colony League) headed to Plymouth South Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it hosts second-place Silver Lake.

Rockland strutted into Monday's game as the obvious favorite. The Bulldogs (13-1 overall) led the Patriot League with an 8-1 mark and had already routed the Red Raiders, 67-44, in the first meeting Dec. 30.

This time around North Quincy, which was down 20-14 at the half, turned in its strongest defensive performance of the season. "The defense was sensational the entire game," Rendle said. "We've played good halves before but this was the first time we've done it for the whole game."

The Red Raiders received balanced scoring from its starters. Junior guard Darryl Costa scored a team-high 13 points, Kyle, his younger brother, finished with 11, senior center Sean Bowes added eight, senior guard Kevin Holleran seven and junior forward Brendon Neves six.

"Rockland beat us by 30 the first time so it shows we're stepping in the right direction," Rendle said. "The last two games we've starting playing the best basketball of the season. We haven't stopped working."

Last Friday night at home, North Quincy dropped a 61-50 decision to a tough Barnstable squad. The Red Raiders grabbed a 26-22 lead at halftime, despite early foul trouble by Holleran.

"We played a phenomenal first half," Rendle said. "Again I was pleased with our defensive effort."

In the second half Bowes fouled out for North Quincy. And although Barnstable heated up offensively, Rendle said the difference in the game was the free-throw line. Barnstable hit all 15 attempts in the second half while the Red Raiders made just seven freebies.

Offensively, Kyle Costa led the team with 15 points and Neves chipped in 14.

Meredith Langille On RPI Hockey

Meredith Langille of Quincy is a sophomore forward on the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute women's hockey team.

Through 16 games, Langille has scored four goals and tallied seven assists.

Joe Duffy On Curry Football Team

Joe Duffy of Quincy played for the Curry College football team this past season as a sophomore offensive guard.

A Quincy High School graduate, Duffy received considerable playing time as the team's back-up center. He was also named to the NEFC All-Academic squad.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

February marks the birthdays of two of the world's great figures; George Washington, who gave us our nation, and Abraham Lincoln, who preserved it for posterity.

Let us remember that they captured the imagination of the world by their characters, their principles, their philosophies and profound achievements. Their names are forever linked with man's eternal struggle for freedom.

As we pay homage to these great Americans - Washington and Lincoln - let us remember that they more than any others embodied and exhibited our distinctive civilization. We honor them for the virtues that made them great. We honor them for their unswerving loyalty and patriotism. Both represented the cause of freedom. It is with deep respect and admiration for their leadership that we pay tribute to them in this month that marks their birthdays.

One does not recall that any nation in history produced tow men 87 years apart, who indubitably determined the nation's destiny. America was indeed very lucky to have produced two such towering men in the compass of a century. . . .

WORDS WITH TWO X'S

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might feel bolder as each new success falls into place. But caution is still advised through the end of the week. Until then, a step-by-step approach is best.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That cooperation you request could come at too high a price. Since few can beat the Bovine at being clever and resourceful, why not see what you can do on your own?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor a quieter time spent getting closer to the people who are especially important to you. There's always much more to learn and appreciate about each other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The concerned Crab will act to resolve workplace misunderstandings before they get out of hand and cause more-serious problems. Coworkers rally to support your efforts.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) What the Big Cat might see as a disturbing act of disloyalty might just be a failure of communication on both sides. Take time for mediation rather than confrontation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be more patient with those who seem unwilling to accept your version of what's right. The fact is, there's a lot more to learn on all sides of this issue.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It should be easier to assess the facts you'll need to make an important decision. But don't commit if you still have doubts. There could be more you need to know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your excitement level remains high as you continue working on that new project. Expect some setbacks. But on the whole, all will move pretty much on schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It might be wise to be more prudent with expenses right now. But your financial situation should soon clear up, and you could be back shopping, happily as ever.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might prefer sticking with your current schedule. But some newly emerging information could persuade you to consider a change. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to reject a suggested change. But it could be wise to go with the flow, at least for a while. You can always return to your first plan if you like.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're bolstered by both the practical and poetic sides of your nature as you maneuver through some unsettled emotional situations. Things ease up by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: People reach out to your generosity and wisdom, and consider you a treasured and trusted friend.

Week Of March 24

American Cancer Society Daffodil Days Goal: $3.5M

The American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days are about to blossom in southeast Massachusetts as local residents prepare to celebrate springtime while bringing the hope of conquering cancer to area patients and their families.

During the week of March 24, volunteers will deliver thousands of daffodils to area residents, working toward the American Cancer Society's goal of raising $3.5 million in New England this year.

Dollars raised during Daffodil Days help support American Cancer Society research, education, advocacy and patients services. Programs include "Road to Recovery," providing transportation to treatment for cancer patients, and "Look Good...Feel Better," teaching female cancer patients beauty techniques to enhance their appearance during treatment.

Daffodil Days funds also help maintain the American Cancer Society's cancer information web site (www.cancer.org) and toll-free information line at 1-800-ACS-2345, which is available 24 years a day.

"Daffodil Days presents a unique opportunity to enjoy beautiful, fresh flowers while making a tremendous impact on the lives of local cancer patients and their families," said Elise Kerrigan, American Cancer Society Regional Executive for Income Development. "I hope all local residents will pitch in, whether it be by purchasing daffodils or volunteering to help deliver the flowers, to help make Daffodil Days a success."

Daffodil bouquets are $6, with vases available for an additional $6 donation. Residents also have the opportunity to send a "Gift of Hope," a daffodil bouquet sent anonymously to a cancer patient or a person in need for a $15 contribution. Call your local American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345 by Friday, March 7, to place your daffodil order.

While volunteers are already working to help manage the ordering process and coordinate the distribution of flowers throughout the region, the American Cancer Society is still seeking volunteers to serve as sales coordinators in their towns or businesses, to work in the Brockton office in March to map out driving routes, or to help make deliveries. For more information about volunteering, call Elise Kerrigan at your local American Cancer Society at 1-888-648-4880 and press 3 for ext. 243.

The Fitness Factor Offers Personal Training 'On The Cutting Edge'

The Fitness Factor, a personal training studio, recently celebrated its grand opening at 135 Beach St., Wollaston.

Owner Tracy D'Arpino says the Fitness Factor is a studio committed to personal training specializing in post rehab, preventative training, yoga and pilates in a non-intimidating environment.

"Training is geared towards but not limited to individuals who are entering the post rehab phase of recovery," such as following a stroke, back injury or any kind of physical therapy," D'Arpino said. "The Fitness Factor is unique in that it will act as a continuum of the medical/clinical management bridging the individual into the health club setting."

Special features of the Fitness Factor include service oriented, expertise in post rehab personal training, medical community interfacting and speciality classes for yoga and pilates.

"The Fitness Factor is a place for consumers to practice yoga and pilates outside the health club settings, a place to go following rehab and we also have a place to take classes to keep improving and for health maintenance," D'Arpino said.

An avid marathon runner, triathlete and fitness enthusiast, D'Arpino holds a bachelor of science degree from Springfield College. She also has extensive background in the health and fitness industry as well as a physical therapist assistant.

D'Arpino has worked in many different settings with diverse clients over the past 12 years and has developed an interest in training specifically toward a client's goal. She has also developed programs for children with special needs and for cancer recovery.

TRACY D'ARPINO, owner of the Fitness Factor which recently held its grand opening at 135 Beach St., Wollaston, is welcomed by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

Higher Risk Than Downhill Skiing

Preventing Snowboarding Injuries

(NAPS) – Snowboarding, says the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP), is one of the 10 sport and recreational activities causing children injuries severe enough to merit emergency medical attention.

"Ski injury experts agree that snowboarding carries a slightly higher risk of injury than traditional downhill skiing," said Dr. Bruce Bonanno, an emergency physician and member of the ACEP. "Research indicates that a snowboarder is likely to injure some area of the body every 250 days they spend snowboarding."

ACEP offers these tips to prevent common snowboarding injuries.

Wrist Fractures and/or Sprains:

Falls are the most common cause of wrist fractures and sprains. These injuries are caused when snowboarders lose their balance or catch an edge and attempt to break the fall with their hands. Tip: Wear wrist guards.

Ankle Sprains and Fractures:

Both ankle sprains and ankle fractures are more common in snowboarders than in skiers, mainly due to equipment differences. Tip: Hard-shell, rather than soft-shell boots, may be more likely to protect against ankle sprains.

Spinal Cord Injuries:

Snowboarding is considered an "extreme sport" and enthusiasts often push the limits of their ability doing tricks on half pipes and jumps. Although still relatively rare, the incidence of serious spinal injuries is on the increase. Tip: Wear a helmet and take lessons from a qualified instructor. Avoid attempting stunts without proper instruction, practice and protection.

Head Injuries:

While head injuries account for only a small number of total injuries among skiers and snowboarders, they are the number one cause of death and serious injury for people engaged in these sports.

"Most snowboarders don't take professional lessons, but learn from friend or they are self-taught. This can lead to bad habits that can lead to injury," said Dr. Bonanno. "Play it safe and pay for a few lessons before hitting the slope. A good instructor will also explain to you the importance of safety equipment and how to prevent common injuries."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING

While fluoride is the primary reason dentists see only half the cavities they did two decades ago, it is possible to get too fluoride. As many as 22% of American children have signs of fluorosis, a harmless discoloration of the permanent teeth's enamel. Fluorosis manifests itself as faint white lines or, in some cases, larger opaque white spots on tooth enamel. The culprits are the increasing amounts of fluoride that children are getting from sources other than tap water. For instance, toddlers often swallow toothpaste, and older kids can get unwanted extra fluoride from drops and tablets. To make sure your child gets the correct amount of fluoride, check with your local water department and your dentist.

You'll greatly reduce your risk for dental disease if you have regular checkups and practice meticulous home care. At our office, located at 44 Greenleaf Street, we're currently accepting new patients and welcome your call at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our professional, friendly staff helps make sure all patients' dentistry needs are met, and we'll make sure you're comfortable throughout your visit, and informed as well. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Introduce fluoridated toothpaste to your child only after he or she is able to spit out the excess (age 2 or older).

Mayor William Phelan announces that Stephen J. Roche of Quincy has been appointed to the position of city assessor.

"We are fortunate indeed to have Mr. Roche join us in this new capacity," said Phelan. "He has a wealth of experience and expertise with assessing property and in real estate and his commitment to the City of Quincy in unquestionable."

Roche is a graduate of North Quincy High School, the University of Massachusetts Boston and Suffolk University Law School.

Roche worked from 1999 to 2002 for Suffolk lawyers for Justice, a nonprofit organization that administers criminal defense services to the poor.

The salary for city assessor is set by city ordinance at $58,729.

City assessors are appointed for three-year terms by the mayor. Roche will work alongside Assessor Jolanta Briffett and Assessor Chairwoman Marion Fantucchio.

He was the city's assistant assessor since February, 2002.

Roche replaces Joseph J. LaRaia, the former mayor who retired in August.

Raymondi, Largey At Odds Over Salaries For Solicitor, Assistant

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Council President Dan Raymondi has accused the Phelan administration of shortshrifting female employees in his administration after inquiring about the pay of new city solicitor Monica Conyngham.

At Monday night's council meeting Raymondi asked why Conyngham is still being paid the salary of assistant city solicitor even though she was appointed solicitor on Dec. 16.

The job of city solicitor calls for a salary of $80,854, but Conyngham is being paid at the rate of assistant city solicitor, which is $54,904, Raymondi said.

She replaced Steven McGrath, the last solicitor under former Mayor James Sheets. She is the first woman to hold the city's top legal post.

After McGrath left, Joseph "Jay" MacRitchie was appointed acting solicitor. He served in that capacity until Conyngham's apppointment.

According to Raymondi, MacRitchie is still being paid for the job of solicitor, even though he was moved to first assistant solicitor in December.

"I don't know if anyone is as disturbed as I am," said Raymondi. "We have a position in the city of Quincy, as well as the budget, that is called assistant city solicitor. And that position carries with it a salary of $54, 000 plus. And since Dec. 16, 2002, that position is being paid $80,000 plus. That is wrong, it is unconscionable and it ought to be stopped."

Raymondi said it was "troubling" that the situation involved a female employee who was being underpaid according to the city ordinance.

"The end result of what is happening here is chaos," said Raymondi. "The whole foundation of the fiscal checks and balance structure is negated if the chief executive feels they can just pay anybody whatever they want."

In response, Thomas Largey, the mayor's director of operations, said Raymondi's accusation was "absurd" and unfounded.

"If you look at the mayor's staff and appointments you will find that this administration tries to find people who are the most qualified for jobs. Gender is not a factor when hiring anyone," Largey said. "We have females in very important positions in this administration, including the director of human resources, city solicitor and executive secretary. One of the highest paid city employees is a female," he said.

Raymondi said the Phelan administration is violating municipal finance law because the salaries of these positions are outlined in city ordinances.

"The gender aspect of this makes it more troubling," Raymondi told The Quincy Sun.

Councillor Frank McCauley agreed with Raymondi regarding some of Phelan's budget moves.

"I was aware of this situation, but I wasn't aware of why it was happening," said McCauley. "But we have some problems here with the mayor's office, because he has a different view of how a budget should be handled. He feels that, in our budget, as long as he lives within the bottom line, it's ok.

"You and I, Mr. Chairman, we don't see it that way," McCauley told Raymondi.

Largey said the administration was in the process of changing the salaries of MacRitchie and Conyngham. He said the change may have been done already.

He said the salaries were not changed for approximately a month as a courtesy to MacRitchie, who has been a loyal and competent city employee for many years.

"Jay MacRitchie has done a tremendous job in this administration," said Largey. "He has been very committed to the mayor under very trying circumstances."

Largey said the one-month holdover did not affect the bottom line budget, because the salaries were interchangeable.

But Raymondi didn't see it that way.

"The city has been hit hard with discrimination suits," said Raymondi. "Anything like this is fruit for litigators and counsel who represent plantiffs where they see such a dramatic difference in pay at that level. This current situation shows a real lack of sensitivity on these issues," said Raymondi.

In addition, the Phelan administration has made a request to increase the salary of first assistant city solicitor to $65,000. This would boost MacRitchie's salary.

Raymondi took issue with the salary increase, saying the timing is wrong for such a move.

"That's outrageous, no additional duties, same position," he said. "The mayor needs to be more careful how he spends public dollars."

Largey said MacRitchie should get the salary increase.

"Jay MacRitchie has served under three mayors," said Largey. "He is extremely knowledgeable , especially on issues of municipal law. Simply, we want to pay him what we think he is worth."

The proposal for the salary increase was placed in the ordinance committee for further review.

Until Quirk Publicly Unveils Use Plans

Committee Urges MARAD To Delay Shipyard Sale

By TOM HENSHAW

The Fore River Redevelopment Committee has formally asked the U. S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) to delay the transfer of the Fore River Shipyard until car dealer Daniel Quirk, the new owner, makes public his plans for the property.

In a letter to Capt. William Shuppurt, director of MARAD, City Council President Daniel Raymondi, who doubles as chairman of the redevelopment committee, called the auction process under which Quirk bought the 130 acres "seriously flawed."

Quirk and two other bidders submitted their bids after the Dec. 31 deadline set by MARAD. Quirk's high bid of $9 million was accepted. His attorney, Frank Marinelli, has said Quirk plans to devote "a substantial portion of the site to commercial and industrial maritime uses."

Raymondi's letter asked Shuppurt to explain:

"Why an auction process that identified a 'Bid Deadline' date of December 31, 2002, would then allow for last minute bidders to participate in the sale?

"How the community or public interests or concerns will be taken into consideration by MARAD prior to the finalization of the sale where to date there has been no presentation to the public by Mr. Quirk of his plans for redevelopment of the Shipyard?

"How and why was the 'Bid Deadline' extended?"

MARAD came into possession of the 130-acre section of the Shipyard when Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI), the owner at the time, defaulted on a loan and MARAD, which had guaranteed the loan, took control.

"Upon MARAD taking control of the Shipyard, its representatives repeatedly stated that the public would be involved in the transfer of title process and that community input would be encouraged and considered," said Raymondi.

""Specifically, MARAD represented that the community would be afforded an opportunity to hear each bidder's proposal and be allowed to comment on each. Unfortunately, that did not happen.

"On Jan. 16, 2003, at auction, the high bidder was car dealer Daniel Quirk. Being a 'last minute' bidder, Mr. Quirk did not participate in any of the community meetings that were held prior to the auction.

"At the last community meeting, held one week prior to the auction, citizens met in good faith with the three eligible bidders who had met the requirements as outlined in MARAD's 'Bidders and Sales Procedures.'

"It is the opinion of the Fore River Redevelopment Committee that MARAD's process was seriously flawed.

"By accepting bids from individuals who did not reveal their plans to the public prior to the auction, you rendered hollow the commitments made by your agency that the community would have input into the decision-making process."

Raymondi also asked Shuppurt to delay the transfer of the property "until such time as the high bidder . . . comes forward and presents his plans to the public for the use and/or development of the Shipyard.

"The committee strongly feels that the community must and should be amenable to Mr. Quirk's proposal and its impacts before any transfer should occur."

Phelan Commits:

City Workers 'Called Up' To Receive Pay Benefits

Mayor William Phelan has committed Quincy to paying city employees who are called into active duty by the armed forces the difference between their civilian and military pay for two years.

"Our employees should not have to sacrifice financially for their noble efforts to protect us and our country," said Phelan in an executive order.

"Despite the tough economic times that cities and towns across the Commonwealth face, these actions serve to recognize the sacrifices of our municipal employees during this time of heightened security."

The Mayor also pledged the city to continue health, dental and life insurance for city workers and their families at the employee rate for two years and to accrue vacation and sick days for one year.

The executive order will go into effect as soon as the city accepts two sections of state law that permit communities to grant leaves of absence and health insurance during leaves.

Phelan said he plans to introduce such an order at the Feb. 18 meeting of the City Council , effective immediately so that the six city employees who thus far have been called to the colors will be covered.

"A similar resolution was presented to the City Council in September 2001 but was not adopted," he said.

The text of the Mayor's executive order was released one day after City Council President Daniel Raymondi queried Personnel Director Roberta Kety on "the position of the city regarding employees who are called to active duty."

"It is my understanding that after repeated attempts to obtain information, union officials have been unable to secure a written commitment from the city of Quincy that the city will continue to provide health insurance coverage for these employees and their families," he said.

Sept. 11 Primary?

City Clerk Joe Shea would like to see Sept. 11, the day the terrorists struck New York, memorialized by making it Primary Election Day and he has already started the wheels turning.

"I thought it would be a good idea," he said, "but it's a bit more complicated than I thought. I've asked the city solicitor to look it up for me."

The complication is that the law requires Election Day to be the first Tuesday in November and Primary Election Day is calculated by counting back seven weeks from Election Day.

"Secretary of State Bill Galvin's office tells me that there is a bill before the legislature now to make Veterans Day (Nov. 11) Election Day every year," said Shea.

"We would need legislation to change the Primary Election date. I'm going to ask one of the local reps or Senator Morrissey to file a bill and give it a go."

City's Bond Rating Reaffirmed

Mayor William Phelan announces that Moody's Investor Service has assigned a MIG 1 rating to the city for the $4.5 million Bond Anticipation Notes (BAN) that were required as part of the city's payment to the former Quincy Hospital regarding the October 2000 privatization agreement.

Phelan said rating is the highest that can be given by Moody's on a short term BAN.

In addition, Moody's reaffirmed Quincy's A3 rating. The rating was downgraded last year from an A2 rating.

Phelan said his administration is conservatively budgeting state aid reductions for fiscal 2004, estimating stable revenues and identifying cost savings proposals to provide flexibility to withstand the cuts for the upcoming year.

Councillors Want Contingency Plan For City's MDC-Run Streets, Facilities

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

With the MDC on Gov. Mitt Romney's chopping block, the city council wants to ensure the continuation of services for Quincy's state-run roadways and facilities.

Currently, the MDC manages or controls some of Quincy's most popular recreation areas and busiest streets, including Wollaston Beach, Quincy Shore Drive, Furnace Brook Parkway, the Quincy Quarry Reservation, Caddy Park, Chickatabot Rd. and St. Moritz area near the Blue Hills.

Those services include snow plowing, maintenance and repair of streets and sidewalks, traffic signalization, water testing and many other tasks.

Council President Dan Raymondi and Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton introduced separate resolutions last week calling for the city to establish a contingency plan if the MDC is abolished.

"We have so much property that is taken care of by the MDC," said Newton. "I want to make sure that we address this situation."

Raymondi said the city should conduct hearings regarding the potential impact of the MDC's elimination. He wants the city to consider purchasing any open space parcels from the MDC.

Members of Quincy's state delegation said they are waiting to hear about Gov. Romney's plans for dismantling the MDC.

Rep. Bruce Ayers said Gov. Romney has not specified how services will be dispersed if the agency is abolished.

"The Legislature will be closely monitoring Gov. Romney's budget when it comes out later this month," said Ayers. "We want to make sure that the level of services for Quincy are maintained or improved should the MDC go away."

Ayers said he is confident the state will continue to provide those services. He said it is possible that the MDC's responsibilities could be shifted to another state agency, such as the Highway Department.

Sen. Michael Morrissey would not rule out the possibility of cities and towns assuming a portion of MDC's responsibilities. "You can't just close down an agency without a plan," said Morrissey. "There are so many issues on the table, but if communities have the resources they can do the job."

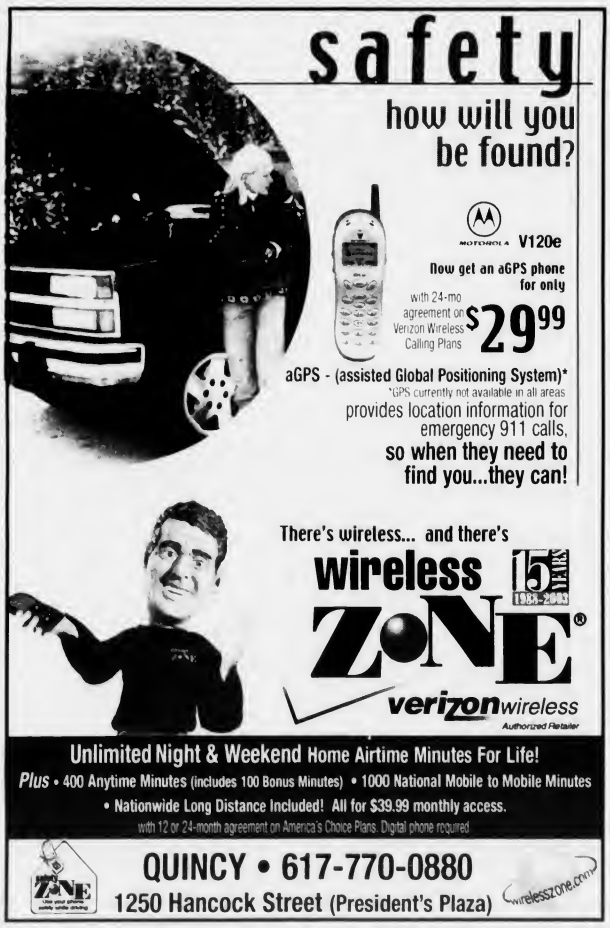
During the summer, MDC tests Wollaston Beach daily for Enterococcus, a fecal bacteria.

In addition, the city's health department tests Quincy's beaches on a weekly basis. They include Avalon, Mound, Chickatabot, Heron, Baker, Parkhurst, Edgewater, Rhoda, Orchard and Nickerson Beach.

"Mayor Phelan is very concerned about the future of water testing at Wollaston Beach if the MDC is dismantled," said Health Commissioner Drew Scheele.

MDC also provides lifeguards for Wollaston Beach. The agency is also responsible for maintenance and upkeep of parks, walking areas and grounds in many areas across the city.

Among the MDC's biggest tasks is its snow plowing and sanding/salt duties.



Bill Repoff, DPW operations manager, said the city's responsibilities would increase considerably if it were given the task of maintaining MDC-run roadways in Quincy.

"It's a big area, and the coordination of services would be much more involved," said Repoff. "Those streets have quite a lot of miles."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said the abolishment of the MDC would have "significant consequences" with regard to Wollaston Beach. Specifically, Gutro is concerned about the fate of the Wollaston Beach rehabilitation project, which calls for new sand, benches and shelters at the site.

Gutro said it would be impossible for one state agency to handle all of MDC's responsibilities.

"The Highway Department might do a great job in snow plowing, but they would not do water testing at Wollaston Beach," said Gutro.

Phelan: No Layoffs From Local Aid Cuts

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Despite taking a $2.2 million hit in local aid, Quincy will not have to deal with layoffs or significant service cuts this fiscal year, Mayor William Phelan said.

Softening the blow was the city's move in identifying and setting aside $3.4 million for reserve for appropriation, Phelan said. This allowed the city to deal with local aid cuts better than most cities and towns, he said.

By a 5-2 vote last December, the council approved Phelan's request for the funds to be placed in reserve for appropriation. Councillors Newton and Raymondi voted against the move.

"Without those funds, massive layoffs would have been inevitable," said Phelan.

Phelan was cautiously optimistic for the remainder of the fiscal year, saying no teachers, fire or police personnel would be laid off.

"It is extremely difficult to absorb cuts of this magnitude in the last third of the fiscal year, but the employees of the city have shown an enormous capacity to do more with less," said Phelan. "And if the signals from the governor's office are true, we'll have to do with even less next year."

Council President Dan Raymondi said Phelan was able to generate more revenue by raising taxes on Quincy residents.

"The mayor had an opportunity to give the taxpayers a break last year, but they didn't get it," said Raymondi. "Instead, he chose to raise taxes for an unidentifiable purpose."

Raymondi said Phelan has drained the city's stabilization fund to cover the budget shortfall. "Mayor Phelan began his term as mayor with a $5 million stabilization fund. That number has been cut in half," Raymondi said.

Phelan disagreed with Raymondi's assessment, saying, "Without this reserve for appropriation the city would have incurred layoffs of fire and police personnel, as well as other vital municipal employees."

A portion of the reserve for appropriation is outstanding taxes from the shipyard property.

Last year, the city rescinded a special tax break for the owner of the property, Massachusetts Heavy Industries. As a result, the city sent out tax bills to MHI for fiscal 2002 and 2003. Since MHI defaulted on its loan guarantees to the federal government, there is virtually no chance that the company will pay the taxes on the property.

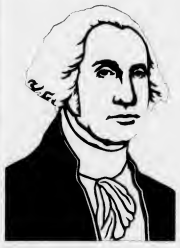
Although Dan Quirk won the property at auction last month he has not become the owner yet for tax purposes, city officials said.

If Quirk becomes the owner he will assume all tax liens on the property, including the $2 million plus in property taxes.

Interest accrued on the unpaid tax bills will bring the total to well above $2 million, according to city officials.

HARBORVIEW RESIDENTS COMMITTEE recently presented the Quincy Police Department with plaques in recognition of the department's community policing efforts in the Germantown area. For the past 15 years, the department's PAL program has assisted Germantown residents with the holiday tree-lighting ceremony and many other activities. On hand during the presentation were (from the left): Jack Mather, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority; Lt. Robert Crowley, Jean Kennedy, member of the Harborview Residents Committee; Lt. William Stenmon; Sgt. Brian Tobin and Grace Raymondi, member of the Harborview Residents Committee.

Five Are Promoted In Police Department



Five members of the Quincy Police Department were promoted and sworn in to their new ranks Tuesday.

Vincent M. Flaherty of Quincy, who has held the rank of temporary captain since July 2001, was made a permanent captain. He was hired as a police officer in December, 1971, and promoted to sergeant in January 1980 and lieutenant in May 1991.

John T. Sullivan of Hanover was named a lieutenant. He became a police officer in August 1983 and was promoted to sergeant in September 1998.

George R. Clark of Quincy also was elevated to lieutenant. He started as a police cadet in July 1968, became a motor equipment repairman in October 1971, a police officer in September 1975 and sergeant in November 1993.

Robert Bina of Quincy, an officer since May 1993, and Terence M. McDonnell of Abington, who was hired in September 1995, were promoted to sergeant.

Raymondi Keeps Them Guessing

The big political question of the year is still unanswered.

That one, of course, is: will Dan Raymondi challenge Bill Phelan for the mayor's office?

RAYMONDI

PHELAN

Raymondi, who as city council president, has been Phelan's most severest public critic, hasn't said yes, no or even, maybe. But some City Hall observers, and some close to him, think they are beginning to see a sign or two that he is leaning toward running.

But, one thing for sure, you can forget the speculation that state Rep. and School Committeeman Ron Mariano might be the challenger instead.

MARIANO

The story making the rounds is that Mariano will run against Phelan if Raymondi doesn't.

Not so, says Mariano:

"I am not running for mayor. Not this year anyway. I'm going to be busy enough with the state budget."

But Mariano, who has been a school committeeman 12 years and state representative 11, hints he might take a peek at the council at-large picture.

"That might be interesting," he says.

If Raymondi does decide to take on Phelan, the mayor's campaign would be pretty certain to be an old fashioned no-punches-pulled political slugfest.

Reminiscent, perhaps of the 1977 heated battle between Arthur Tobin and Joseph LaRaia. Tobin, Phelan's father-in-law now, was council president then and challenged and ousted LaRaia from the mayor's office.

A Phelan-Raymondi match-up might make that one look pretty tame. Politically, on most issues, they seem to be as far apart as the North and South Poles. And personally they aren't exactly what you would call close friends.

A Phelan-Raymondi main bout would make Election Year 2003 one to remember.

Meanwhile, there is more movement on the political front indicating an interesting year anyway.

Mariano may be taking only a peek at the city council at-large field, but School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg is giving it a good look.

BRAGG

"I am seriously thinking of running," she confirms. "I haven't completely made up my mind, but there is a very good chance I will run. People have been encouraging me to do so."

Bragg, a consistent strong vote-getter, is now midway in her third four-year term on the school committee where she has served as vice-chairman.

A tax accountant, she is in her busy season right now but says she will make her decision by April — or maybe sooner.

Another strong vote-getter, School Committee Vice-Chairman Christine Cedrone, who is up for re-election this year, says she is undecided but a council at-large bid is a possibility.

CEDRONE

"I am giving it some thought," she says.

If she ran for the council, that would open up a school committee seat on this year's ballot.

Although now occupied by John Keenan, Tim Cahill's old at-large seat is considered to be an open one in this year's election.

Keenan was chosen by the council to fill out the final year on Cahill's term but will not be listed as an incumbent on this year's ballot.

Jimmy Liang, who finished behind Keenan in the election, already has announced he will be a candidate again this year.

Meanwhile, Brian McNamee, who has indicated he will either run again for the Ward 6 council seat or at-large, is busy building a campaign chest.

McNAMEE

He has another fund-raiser — a reception — coming up Thursday, Feb. 27, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Caralilly's Cafe, Billings Road.

If veteran Frank McCauley decides not to seek re-election, that would create a second open at-large seat, attracting a number of candidates — possibly a ward councillor which would in turn open a ward seat.

Of course, if Raymondi should run for mayor, it would open up his Ward 2 council seat, creating a second open one.

Greg Hanley is leaving the Ward 1 seat and a half-dozen candidates would like to fill it:

James Bottary, Joanne Bythrow, Gretchen Grant, Joseph Keegan, Sean McArdle who have announced and former Councillor Leo Kelly, who says he is running and will make his announcement later.

A fresh political face, but a well-known one, may enter the school committee field.

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, an attorney and chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, says:

LORD-PIATELLI

"Yes, I am thinking about it. In fact, I am giving it very serious consideration. I have thought about running before and this could be the year I do it."

She says the squabble between the school committee and Quincy College over the college's rent to the city has nothing to do with her potential candidacy.

"If I run, it will be because I believe I could bring experience as well as a fresh perspective to the school committee," she says. "And it will be because I believe I can do a good job for the children of Quincy."

Could be an interesting year.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1926 real photo postcard view of Beale Street in Wollaston looking east from the railroad bridge towards Hancock Street. On the left was Depot Square where Howard Johnson opened his first store. The building on the right was the Wollaston Co-operative Bank and is now the site of an MBTA power station. Further down, the Victorian building is pretty much the same as is the smaller building now home to the U-Rent-It tool shop. In the distance the large building was the Masonic Temple, later the Wollaston Legion Post, and now the site of a Sovereign Bank branch. Everything visible on the left is now the Red Line parking lot. A few years after this picture was taken the bridge was rebuilt and Beale Street was widened from here to Hancock Street.

Opposes New Tax Law On Prescription Medications

I am writing this letter in strong opposition to the new tax law on prescription medications. It is extremely difficult to comprehend such an unjust tax. Simply put, the state is penalizing its citizens for being ill. How unconscionable an act this is. The person or persons who initiated this bill, voted in the affirmative for it, and finally signed it into law are not only void of conscience but cold of heart.

There are a multitude of individuals living in the state of Massachusetts who require daily medications as maintenance therapy to enable them to live their lives in a productive manner, to contribute to the well-being of their families, to "live a life." They are already paying co-payments for their prescription drugs. Enough is enough.

If the state wants more money coming in then raise the tax on cigarettes and alcohol, tow entities that can cause physical harm to people, don't tax prescription medications that help people.

The initiation and passage of the tax on prescription medications is not only unconscionable but beyond all moral comprehension. I strongly urge the repeal of this tax.

Thanks Citizens For Participating In Food Drive

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the citizens of Norfolk County and the employees and users of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds for their participation and generosity in our first annual Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Holiday Food Drive.

Through the generous donation of non-perishable food items, we were able to distribute food to the Quincy Community Action Program, Canton Food Pantry, and the Ecumenical Food Pantry of Norwood. These donations go a long way in helping those less fortunate. Next year we hope to expand upon our initial success and distribute food to other food pantries in Norfolk County.

Unfortunately, the problems of hunger and families in crisis do not occur just during the holidays. Families using the services of food pantries in Norfolk County are increasing. Especially during these tough economic times when many families have to choose between paying their heating and food bills, I would urge all citizens of Norfolk County to remember their neighbors in need during the calendar year. Food pantries throughout Norfolk County are always in need of non-perishable food items.

Thanks again to all who participated in the Holiday Food Drive. I wish all citizens of Norfolk County a safe and healthy holiday 2003.

Keep The Salem In Quincy

I am writing this letter as I am in favor of keeping the USS Salem in Quincy. This cruiser is the last of its kind in the world.

Many volunteers worked very hard to put the ship in good condition. All the scraping and painting above deck has made it an attraction. Cub scouts sleep aboard and are given two meals a day. Tourists have asked me how to get to the ship and instead of telling them, I took them there.

The main attraction as far as I am concerned is the armory maintained by the archivist, Jim Fahey, who has traveled all over the world to either buy or bargain for old weapons and medals. Some predate 1776. Also in his files are war books that can help veterans or their kin establish what military unit their relative was in.

Particularly, he has a set of books that list every veteran who served in every war from Quincy. He even found one of my descendants who served in the Civil War.

Since the schools in Quincy do not have any knowledge about any American War that could benefit the students, I suggest that the schools allow the history classes to take one day off and have their teachers take them to the ship. I am sure that they themselves would enjoy it.

Bill To Change Council Makeup Gets Approval

This Week
1956
47 Years Ago

The State Legislature approved a bill filed by Rep. Clifton H. Baker (R-Quincy) that would change the makeup of the new Plan A City Council to six members from wards and three elected at-large.

The bill, which would place the matter before the city's voters on the November state ballot, was opposed by Rep. Carter Lee (R-Quincy) who objected to any major change in the charter.

"I opposed a bill that attempted to change the new charter by setting up an assistant mayor on exactly the same grounds," he said. "It might be a good thing but it was not what the people voted for."

COMPTROLLER BILL DIES

The State Senate killed a bill, which carried the unanimously endorsement of the City Council, to combine the posts of city auditor and director of finance into the single office of comptroller.

Opposition to the legislation was led by Sen. Charles W. Hedges (R-Quincy), who said he could find no support for it among the people of Quincy.

"It's too bad," said Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa. "Under the present set-up, the city auditor and director of finance have to serve two masters, the City Council which appoints the auditor and the city manager who appoints the director of finance."

HOSPITAL LOSING MONEY

Director Dr. Joseph P. Leone told a Lions Club luncheon that City Hospital was losing $4 a day on each patient and experienced a deficit of $343,000 in 1955.

But, he added, as hospitals go, Quincy is not in bad shape at all.

Breaded Chicken Thighs

We are all inundated to countless recipes available to all of us between the ones on the food network and in the newspapers and magazines.

But no matter which ones are deemed new and different, at my dinner party last weekend I stuck to the tried and true entrees which our son Dom called "my forte". It's the food that when I'm preparing it, I almost know for sure it will come out good.

And because everyone has different tastes, I served two different pastas, vermicelli and home made gnocchi served with sausages and meatballs. But today's recipe is for the breaded chicken and the stuffed peppers that went with it. The chicken is a family favorite and so easy to prepare which also can be made ahead of time.

Breaded Chicken Thighs
6-8 thighs (skinned) (or more if desired)
corn flake crumbs (a must for this recipe)
1 egg mixed with a little milk
salt and pepper to taste

First, take the skin off the thighs. I use rubber gloves and paper towel, but just the towel does the job. Wash and season with the salt and pepper.

Dip the chicken in the egg and milk mixture and then the corn flake crumbs. Place on a slightly greased baking pan and I usually put about a half cup of water on the bottom. Bake covered in a 350 degree preheated oven for about 35 minutes.

Take the cover off and bake until browned and crispy. When this is done, you would think they were deep fried!

At Louisiana Higher Education Workshop

Barry, DeSantes Deliver Quincy College Message

Two senior Quincy College administrators were participants in a multi-year enrollment project for public higher education institutions in Louisiana at a workshop in Baton Rouge.

President Sean Barry was the featured keynote speaker, selected to close the meeting with a reflective speech on the value of higher education as a means to economic freedom and the obligations of administrators working in public education.

Thomas DeSantes, executive director for marketing and recruitment, repeated his presentation on marketing two-year colleges originally given in Washington last year during the National Conference on Retention.

"When I consider the honor of being selected to assist a statewide system such as Louisiana, I can't help but acknowledge how far Quincy College has come in the past decade," said Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chair of the Board of Governors.

"We know what an exceptional management team is in place at the college but it is always impressive to see it recognized from outside of the community."

Barry said he and DeSantes were "thrilled with the honor and the ability to speak to colleagues who clearly are enthusiastic about their roles as public employees and public educators."

DeSantes added that "there is a positive national perspective about our college that is something our community can and should celebrate and value."

Honoraria paid to Barry and DeSantes was donated to the Quincy College Foundation. Their expenses were picked up by the higher education consulting firm Noel-Levitz.

Richardson Desk Donated To Thomas Crane Library

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

One of the newest arrivals at the Thomas Crane Public Library seems right at home.

Through the generous donation of a Vermont man, library visitors are now able to utilize an original, solid oak partners desk designed by famous architect Henry Hobson Richardson.

Historians and residents may recognize that name: Richardson is the same person who designed the original Thomas Crane Public Library in 1882.

The donor, Bruce Hewitt of Burlington, Vt., said he purchased the desk from a retired University of Vermont professor in 1966 for $750. Hewitt used the desk in his office until he sold his business.

Later, Hewitt loaned the desk to his daughter in South Burlington, Vt. The desk was designed by Richardson and built in 1886 as part of the Billings Library at the University. Hewitt said the desk was never refinished or altered in any way.

The valuable desk can be used and viewed in the Richardson section of the library. This section, named after its designer, was refurbished during the library's overhaul in 2001.

"We are just thrilled to have this beautiful desk," said Ann McLaughlin, director of libraries at the Thomas Crane Public Library. "This is a welcome addition to the library." McLaughlin said the library is always seeking original Richardson-design furniture because "it helps to recreate the original feel and design of the library as it was first intended."

She said the desk was appraised and is very valuable.

McLaughlin said she was contacted by Hewitt last fall about the prospect of donating the desk. "We were more than willing to take the desk off his hands," she said jokingly. "The desk is right at home in the Richardson building."

It is called a partners desk because people can sit on either side and utilize it while facing each other. The desk has two pedestals, each with four locking drawers and a file. The top of the desk is solid oak with large, deep drawers. Its dimensions are 60 inches wide, 38 inches deep and 30 inches high.

In addition to the partners desk, visitors can discover many other pieces of Richardson-designed furniture throughout the library. Richardson-designed chairs, tables and desks are readily found in the new or original sections of the library.

Among Richardson's other architectural accomplishments are his designs for Trinity Church in Boston, and public libraries in Easton, Woburn and Malden.

The Gillette Company/ Quincy Public Schools Team HYPER Robotics will host its third annual Mini-Meet Saturday at the Quincy High School Center for Technical Education.

The Mini-Meet will consist of teams in the area that would like to test their robots before they attend the Regional Competition in Manchester, N.H., and the National Competition in Houston, Texas.

Team HYPER also invites the community to take a look at what this year's competition is and what some of the robots look like before they are shipped.

The FIRST program picks a new game plan every year and this year's game plan is "Stack Attack." The object of the game is to collect and stack plastic storage containers.

Before the game starts the four teams have a chance to send a human player to stack an additional eight containers anywhere on the field with a time limit of 10 seconds. After all the human players are off the field, the robots have 15 seconds of "automatic mode," which is a predetermined program entered into the robot, allowing it to run without human control. When that's over the drivers take control for the remaining 1:45.

To score, all legal containers on your side of the field count is one point. The stacks are multiplied by how many containers are in your alliance's scoring zone. Points are also earned by having a robot on top of the ramp at the end of the match.

Team HYPER has been hard at work building this year's robot, brainstorming and designing since January.

Solomon's Collection & Fine Rugs Moves To New Quincy Location

Solomon's Collection & Fine Rugs, formerly located in Boston's Back Bay, recently moved to Quincy at 809 Hancock St.

The firm features a large collection of handmade wool and silk carpets from around the world, and antiques.

Solomon Mojtabai, a retired vascular and general surgeon, established the company in 1990 as a result of his lifelong passion for Oriental carpets.

Originally known as Newbury Street Rugs, named for the Newbury Street, Boston, location, the name was changed in 2000 to Solomon's Collection & Fine Rugs.

The new name reflects the growth of the business which by that time had added fine antiques to the collection.

At the new Quincy location are thousands of quality carpets imported from Afghanistan, India, Pakistan, Tibet, Turkey, the Caucasus and other countries. They have been assembled in numerous designs, colors and sizes for easy viewing.

Additional services provided include appraisals, buying and trading of antique rugs, restoration and repair as well as professional cleaning.

At the recent official ribbon-cutting and grand opening party, guests toured the facility and learned about rugs and the various countries of origin.

A portion of the collection may be viewed on the Solomon's website at www.solomonrugs.com.

Little Willows Preschool Receives NAEYC Accreditation

Little Willows Preschool, 50 Willow St., Wollaston, was recently granted accreditation by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC).

The recognition has been achieved by approximately 7 percent of early childhood programs nationwide — some 8,006 programs as of Jan. 1, serving 705,798 children.

NAEYC accreditation is a rigorous, voluntary process by which early childhood programs demonstrate that they meet national standards of excellence. Child care centers, preschools, kindergartens, and before and after school programs are eligible to seek NAEYC accreditation. Approximately 19,000 programs are engaged in seeking accreditation.

Programs seeking accreditation undergo an intensive self-study, collecting information from parents, teachers, administrators and classroom observations. They receive an on-site visit, conducted by early childhood professionals especially trained by NAEYC, to validate their self-study results.

All of this information is independently reviewed by a team of national experts who grant or defer accreditation. When awarded, accreditation is valid for three years.

"The heart of NAEYC accreditation focuses on the child's experience," said Lisa Inglis, program director. "The process carefully considers all aspects of a program, including health and safety, staffing, staff qualifications and physical environment. The greatest emphasis is on the children's relationships with the staff and how the program helps each child grow and learn intellectually, physically, socially and emotionally."

Inglis said research supports the value of accreditation for children. Children's language and social skills especially benefit from the better quality found in NAEYC-accredited programs.

"These are critical areas for children's success in school as well as in life," Inglis said.

Little Willows serves children ranging from 2 and 9 months to 7.

For more information about NAEYC or the accreditation process, access NAEYC's web site (www.naeyc.org) or contact its Public Affairs Division at 202-232-8777 or 800-424-2460.

Ayers Receives Top Grade From Audubon Society

State Rep. Bruce Ayers received a 100 percent rating from the Massachusetts Audubon Society earlier this month for the second year in a row.

This rating reflects Ayers' legislative voting record in support of critical environmental issues during 2002.

The House of Representatives voted by roll call seven environmental items. These initiatives included legislation prohibiting the sale of mercury fever thermometers as well as the Environmental Bond Bill.

"Over the last year, I was pleased to support several important initiatives aimed at preserving and improving the quality of our environment, including the Environmental Bond Bill," Ayers said. "This important legislation not only enables state environmental agencies to continue working toward their goals, but also helps to preserve open spaces."

Ayers added that, "as we begin the New Year and the new session, I look forward to playing a major role in preserving the environmental integrity of not only my district, but the entire Commonwealth."

The Mass. Audubon Society began gathering the voting records of Massachusetts legislators in 1985. The goal in collecting this information is to keep the citizens of the Commonwealth informed on how their representatives and senators are voting on environmental issues.

Identify Theft

In the course of the day you may write a check at the drugstore, charge tickets to a concert, rent a car, call home on your cell phone, or apply for a credit card. Chances are you don't give these routine transactions a second thought.

But others may.

Identity theft is the fastest growing crime in America, affecting half a million new victims each year.

Identity theft, or identity fraud, is the taking of a victim's identity to obtain credit and credit cards from banks and retailers, steal money from a victim's existing accounts, apply for loans, establish accounts with utility companies, rent an apartment, file bankruptcy, or obtain a job using the victim's name. Thousands of dollars can be stolen without the victim knowing about it for months or even years.

The imposter obtains your Social Security number, your date of birth, and other identifying information such as your address and phone number. With this information and a fake driver's license, they can apply in person for instant credit or through the mail posing as you. They often claim they have moved and provide their own address. Once the first account is opened, they can continue to add to their credibility.

They get information from your doctor, lawyer, school, health insurance carrier, and many other places. "Dumpster divers" pick up information you may thrown away, such as utility bills, credit card slips, and other documents.

To prevent this from happening to you:

• Do not give out personal information over the phone, through the mail, or over the Internet unless you have initiated the contact or know whom you're dealing with. Identity thieves will pose as bank representatives, Internet service providers, and even government officials to get you to reveal identifying information.

• Shred documents, including pre-approved credit card applications received in your name, insurance forms, bank checks and statements you are discarding, and other financial information.

• Do not use your mother's maiden name, your date of birth, the last four digits of your Social Security number, or a similar series of numbers as a password for anything.

• Minimize the identification information and the number of cards you carry. Take what you'll actually need. Don't carry your Social Security card, birth certificate, or passport, unless necessary.

• Do not put your Social Security number on your checks or your credit card receipts. If a business requests your Social Security number, give them an alternate number and explain why. If a government agency requests your social security number, there must be a privacy notice accompanying the request.

• Do not put your telephone number on checks.

QCNA Says Proposal Not Strong Enough

Committee Wants Rooming House Owners Accountable

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The public safety committee wants the license board to clamp down on owners of rooming houses that generate chronic complaints or police calls.

On Monday night, the committee floated a proposal to License Board Chairman Joseph Shea that would make owners of rooming houses more accountable for the actions of their tenants.

JOSEPH SHEA

Committee members asked Shea to establish a threshold for the number of police calls in a calendar year for a certain residence. If a particular location generates more than 20 calls in a year, then Shea could bring the owner before the board for an explanation.

Ultimately, the board could choose not to reissue a rooming house license if the owner does not rectify the situation, said Shea. A rooming house license cost $200, and must be renewed annually.

Shea was receptive to the committee's proposal and said he would talk to Quincy Police Chief William Falco about the matter. He said the proposal could be instituted as a policy of the license board.

Despite a few isolated incidents, rooming houses have been a positive experience for the city, Shea said.

"Generally, the rooming house story is something the city can be proud of," he told committee members.

Shea said most rooming house tenants are not homeless. "It is my experience that these are working people," he said. "These people live week to week, and if they don't pay they are out."

But members of the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association said the proposal does not go far enough in addressing the issue of rooming houses in the city.

"When you start infiltrating our neighborhoods with these rooming houses then two police calls per month is unacceptable," said Nancy Jolly, president of the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association.

Jolley said she was under the impression that eight police calls to a specific residence could prompt action by the police chief. She said the chief could request a paid detail on a particular site at the expense of the owner.

"It appears that the city has a somewhat cavalier attitude toward rooming houses," said Jolly. "This is a disturbing situation to law abiding, tax paying citizens – what is the point of paying your taxes if you are not safe?" she asked. "I admire his tolerance, but I would like to know how many rooming houses are in Mr. Shea's neighborhood."

Currently, there are 40 rooming houses in the City of Quincy, with approximately 20 located in Quincy Center.

Michael McKenna, a member of the QCNA, said the city should address the issue of the location of rooming houses. Many of them are concentrated in certain areas, which lowers property values.

"Rooming houses do not contribute to the stability of a neighborhood," said McKenna. "When you have people staying in one place for only a few weeks at a time, how does that make for a stable neighborhood?" he asked.

During the meeting, Lt. Richard Perchard handed out a 2002 "incident" report detailing all police calls to rooming houses. Committee members focused on two locations in particular, 3 Cottage Ave., with 26 calls last year, and 53-57 Copeland St., with 46 calls.

Public Safety Committee member Brian Connolly said owners of rooming houses should be held accountable for chronic complaints and police calls to their residences.

"If a rooming house is getting two calls per month I would call that excessive," said Connolly, the Ward 4 councillor.

Although not a member of the committee, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro participated in the meeting. He said approximately 14 rooming houses are located in his Ward.

Gutro said committee members should receive annual incident reports to determine any trouble spots.

"I thought it was a very useful meeting," said Gutro. "We have established a trigger mechanism now which should provide an additional safeguard for the city. We will be able to take a closer look at owners of these rooming houses. In the past, I have brought issues regarding rooming houses to the attention of the license board and I will not be reluctant to do the same in the future. If there is a pattern or a specific problem I will address it."

Concerned residents brought the issue to the forefront last year, registering complaints that rooming houses go hand-in-hand with increased crime activity, such as prostitution and drug dealing.

Last fall, Daniel DeCosta, 43, a city hall custodian, was found beaten to death near the Thomas Crane Public Library. DeCosta lived in a Quincy rooming house.

During the past 10 years only two new licenses have been granted for rooming houses, Shea said.

WINTER! CAR CARE

Different Vehicles, Different Winter Driving Habits

Motorists should be aware that different types of vehicles have particular operating characteristics that change the way they handle on icy or snow-covered roads, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Knowing the different winter-weather capabilities of a vehicle can mean the difference between a safe trip and serious trouble," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "Motorists should carefully read their owner's manual for information on their vehicle's equipment and handling characteristics."

Front-wheel drive vehicles generally handle better than rear-wheel drive vehicles on slippery roads because the weight of the engine is on the drive wheels, which improves traction. The back end of rear-wheel-drive cars tends to slide from side-to-side during turns on icy roads.

While many motorists are now driving sport-utility vehicles and light trucks that can be excellent for driving in difficult conditions, AAA warns drivers not to become over-confident.

"Sport utility vehicles and pickup trucks with four-wheel-drive make it easier to get moving on snow-covered roads, but they don't stop any quicker than other vehicles," said Mr. Paul. "Drivers still need to slow down and keep a safe distance behind the vehicle in front of them."

Drivers of pickup trucks with rear-wheel-drive need to be especially cautious on slick roads because these vehicles have very little weight over the wheels that are propelling the vehicle and are prone to rear-wheel skids on slippery roads.

A vehicle's breaking system also determines how motorists should operate in winter weather. Anti-lock brake systems (ABS) can provide a significant stopping advantage on slick roads, but are only effective if properly used. When stopping a vehicle with anti-lock brakes in slippery conditions, motorists should apply steady pressure to the brake pedal. The ABS will automatically pump the brakes to keep the wheels locking and the vehicle from skidding.

Drivers of cars without ABS should gently apply pumping pressure to the brakes on slippery conditions to avoid wheel lock-up.

Additionally, many new cars feature traction control, which prevents wheel spin during acceleration. This is very helpful when initially trying to get moving on slippery roads.

Top Repair Facilities Needed For Tough Winter Auto Repair Jobs

Winter weather can cause difficult-to-diagnose automotive problems that require the services of top auto repair facilities, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Cold weather can be tough on a vehicle's electrical system," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "It's important to find a repair facility with the capability to properly service the wide range of advanced technologies on today's high-tech vehicles."

AAA offers this advice for choosing the best auto repair shop:

• Look for AAA approved repair shops. These shops display a sign that says "AAA Approved Auto Repair." To be AAA approved, repair shops must meet tough standards for personnel, customer service, equipment and scope of service. Technicians must be certified by the National Institute of Automotive Service Excellence (ASE).

• Decide what kind of shop can best handle the work. You may not necessarily go to the same place for all repairs. For example, one shop may specialize in exhaust systems, while another may be excellent at finding an obscure electrical problem. If your car is under warranty, you will probably need to get it fixed at the dealer.

• Ask friends, family members and others for recommendations or technicians they trust.

Slick Facts About Oil

It's time to change the oil on your trusty car and you decide to do it yourself. You find yourself at the auto parts store staring at the assortment of oil on the shelves, trying to decide which one to buy and trying to decipher all the numbers and letters on the containers.

Cracking the oil code requires some basic understanding of what your vehicle requires. In every owner's manual there is a chart with a recommendation of oil type for that car.

The right engine oil is important to cold weather starts, says AAA. Oil can become thick and gluey when cold and can make it difficult for engine parts to move. Some oil grades are thinner than others, and thinner is better for winter weather.

The Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) rates oil for its viscosity in both cold and hot conditions. The first number, usually a 5W or 10W, is an indication of how thin the oil stays when cold. The second number is an indication of how thick it stays when hot and usually ranges from 30 to 40. This means that 5W-30 oil is thinner than 10W-30 when cold.

AAA advises motorists to refer to the SAE oil rating to decide which oil grade is best, and to look in the owner's manual for the viscosity recommended for the vehicle.

A Love Affair With Roses 100 Million Of Them

(NAPS) — A Valentine's Day classic, roses have symbolized love, friendship and beauty across cultures throughout time. More than 100 million roses in more than 1,000 different varieties are sold each year on this special holiday.

Whether one's taste leans towards the subtle, the flamboyant or the delicate, there is a rose to please. Red roses, however, are symbols of romantic love and dedication, and continue to be the most popular choice for Valentine's Day.

The floral experts who can be found at 1-800-FLOWERS offer the following tips to help extend the life of your roses this Valentine's Day:

• If your roses are delivered in a box, open it immediately and place them in water. If this cannot be done, place the entire box in a cool, dark place.

• To arrange the roses, fill a deep vase with lukewarm water and mix in the floral preservative provided by the florist.

• Remove any leaves that may fall below the waterline when the roses are placed in the vase.

• Use a sharp knife or shears to cut an inch from the bottom of each stem while holding it under water.

• Place roses loosely, yet evenly spaced, in the vase.

• Place the vase in a cool spot, away from direct sunlight, heating and cooling vents and appliances that give off heat.

• Add warm water to the vase every day, always keeping it full. Change the water and re-cut the flower stems every three or four days.

• Give roses a face-lift by gently removing discolored or drooping petals to give them a fresh appearance, even after several days.

LEE COHEN of A Step Beyond Beauty in Quincy received a plaque of recognition from Dr. Norman Sadowsky, director of the Faulkner-Sagoff Centre, for her and her staff's participation in the fourth annual "A Thing of Beauty." Over 30 hair salons from the greater Boston area opened their doors on a recent Sunday to dedicate the day's receipts to fund the early detection of breast cancer. This event benefits the Faulkner-Sagoff Centre of Boston's Faulkner Hospital. Over the past four years the cut-a-thon has raised nearly $250,000.

7th Presidents' Day Winter Carnival Feb. 17

Quincy will host the 7th annual Presidents' Day Winter Carnival Monday, Feb. 17.

The celebration in Quincy Center will feature musical entertainment, presidential re-enactments, games and rides for kids, ice sculptures, hayrides and more.

The Winter Carnival will take place from noon to 4 p.m. at City Hall, Presidents' Place Atrium and the Church of the Presidents. There will also be games and entertainment outside Hancock Street.

"We are proud to continue our tradition as the City of Presidents by honoring our presidential heritage and offering a great event for Quincy families. I strongly encourage you to help kick off the school vacation week with this fun event," Phelan said.

The Presidents Day Winter Festival will feature an outdoor mini-golf course, facepainters, hat-decorating, moonwalks, hayrides, a magic show and a lot of fun for children. Actors will bring to life Teddy Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln, George Washington, Calvin Coolidge and Eleanor Roosevelt through dramatic re-enactments of these historic figures.

Music will fill Presidents' Place Atrium throughout the afternoon and the Quincy Art Association will host an exhibit at City Hall. Street performers, such as stilt-walkers and chain saw artists, will entertain crowds throughout the day outside the venues. There will be tours available of the tombs of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams in First Parish Church.

"The Presidents Day Winter Carnival is a unique combination of fun and education that offers something for everyone in the family. I hope the people of Quincy join us in celebrating our unique history and have a lot of fun in the process," Phelan said.

Admission is free for the celebration.

Jack Conway Heads Peru Chapel Fundraisers

The Congregation of Holy Cross has started a project to raise $50,000 to help build a chapel to accomodate 750 worshippers among the poor in Lima, Peru.

Jack Conway, the South Shore realtor, is heading up the Ambassadors of Holy Cross, a local group that was formed in 2000 and has taken up the fundraising challenge.

Conway is the author of a recently published book entitled "Holy Cross in Peru," an account of the Holy Cross religious at work in one of the poorest sections of South America.

"We have about 250,000 people living in our Lord of Hope Parish in Canto Grande , Lima," said the Rev. David Farrell, the Holy Cross priest who initiated the chapel project.

"The present chapel, one of 19 in the parish, is a straw matted, tin roofed. dirt floored lean-to that is not adequate to serve the hundreds of people who come for daily services."

Real Estate in the New Era

CENTRAL REAL ESTATE

GOOD REASONS TO GO WITH AN AGENT

There are good reasons why 85% of residential properties are sold with the help of real estate agents. To begin with, agents are well connected thanks to the Multiple Listing Serving (MLS). This effectively guarantees that the property will be immediately brought to the attention of a wide network of buyers and agents, who are looking to match buyers' needs and desires with available properties. In addition, agents bring their considerable knowledge of local properties and market conditions to the table, enabling them to cite "comparables" from memory. Last, but not least, real estate agents can draw upon the advantage of having personal connections with other agents in the area, which can greatly narrow the search for a buyer.

Few people have the time or resources to act as their own real estate agent. CENTRAL REAL ESTATE has a proven track record of bringing buyers and sellers together to the mutual satisfaction of both. Sellers, we can review listing agreements and our marketing strategies for selling your home quickly and for full-market value. We list your home in Multiple to expose it to buyers from a wide range to towns. We also post your home in local papers and coordinate open houses. To experience our award-winning service, call us at (617) 328-1312 or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: When interviewing prospective agents, sellers should ask them what listing price and marketing strategies they would have in mind for their homes.

Jack Conway Company is pleased to announce these additions to our All Star Roster of Brokers and Agents to help with all your Real Estate needs.

Gift Program Is Making Home Buying Easier

(NAPS) — There's good news for prospective homebuyers who lack the cash reserve needed for a down payment but who otherwise qualify for a mortgage.

In recent years, several non-profits have been established to help potential homebuyers by giving them the money they need for a down payment.

These organizations provide down payment assistance in the form of gift funds to low- and moderate-income individuals and families, to be used toward the purchase of a home. Since these funds come in the form of a gift, not a loan, they do not have to be repaid.

Homebuyers participating in the program can purchase a home with 0 percent down payment and/or closing costs. Sellers, real estate agents and builders also benefit from the program, since it increases the pool of qualified buyers who might be interested in a property.

Once such program, operated by AmeriDream, Inc., has helped approximately 100,000 families become homeowners, many of them for the first time and more than one-third of whom are minority homebuyers. The AmeriDream Downpayment Gift Program is available in 49 states to qualifying homebuyers interested in purchasing a single-family home priced to the FHA limit of $300,700.

Though there are other down payment programs, the AmeriDream assistance program is the most widely used. It requires only two forms and participants can apply online.

To take part in AmeriDream's gift program, a homebuyer must contact a lender and qualify for a loan that allows gift funds, and the homebuyer must purchase a home from a builder or seller who has enrolled his or her home in the program.

The homebuyer should submit, through his or her lender, a gift program application at least 24 hours prior to settlement/closing. The program can process the application in 24 hours.

The down payment funds come from a pre-existing pool of money raised by AmeriDream.

Protect Your Home From Mold And Mildew

(NAPS) — It pays for homeowners to protect the value of what may be their biggest investment — their homes.

An important step, experts say, is to reduce the number of microbes in a home. Microbes are tiny organisms such as bacteria and mold. They can damage surfaces in a home — sometimes forcing homeowners to foot expensive repair bills.

The best way to keep microbe levels in your home to a minimum may be to prevent them from growing in the first place. Try these tips:

Wave Good-bye to Water: Keep an eye on any place in your house where water might be present. Bathroom walls and cabinets under kitchen sinks tend to be breeding grounds for microbes. Keep the areas dry and clean them regularly using a disinfectant.

Microbe Protection: Some home products — including paint, flooring, tubs, sinks, caulk, grout and more — are available with built-in Microban antimicrobial protection. Microban protection inhibits the growth of stain- and odor-causing bacteria, mold and mildew. And because it's built-in during manufacturing it won't wash off or wear, providing continuous antimicrobial protection for the life of the product.

Basement Blues: Microbes are also often found in basements due to high humidity and flooding. If your basement is particularly damp, you may want to invest in a dehumidifier for the room.

For more information on products available with Microban protection, visit www.microban.com.

35-29 Win Over Sandwich Propels Presidents To League Crown

ACL Champs Quincy In South Sectionals

WRESTLING

As the season approached, the Quincy High School wrestling staff knew it had a difficult road ahead, having graduated the likes of Joe Hern, Mike Murphy and Scott Kelley.

The numbers were way down, so simply putting a wrestler at each of the 14 weight classes seemed like a daunting task.

First-year assistant coach Ron Howard remained determined, however.

"I'd watched Quincy wrestle Duxbury for the Pilgrim Conference title match last year (Quincy finished second at 6-1) and knew there was some talent here. We needed to fill some big holes," he said.

In the first year of the newly-formed Atlantic Coast League, Quincy figured to be competitive amongst the likes of Randolph, Nauset, Whitman-Hanson and Sandwich, a program on the rise in its second year of existence.

Despite hovering around the .500 mark most of the season, Quincy entered last Wednesday night's meet on the Cape at 3-0 in the league against a Sandwich team (7-3 overall) also 3-0 in the league.

The league title was on the line. And it seemed the two schools were going to end up sharing the trophy as the meet appeared to be heading for a draw.

In the final match of the night at 135 pounds, senior Jason Chase fell behind, 8-4, before he recorded a two-point reversal late in the second period. His opponent held that 8-6 lead late in the final period and if he could hold on, he'd register three team points and the meet would end in a 32-32 stalemate.

Chase, on the other hand, had other thoughts. With 15 seconds left, he registered three near-fall points, giving him a 9-8 victory and the Presidents the ACL title with a 35-29 win — their first league title since they were co-champs with Weymouth as members of the Old Colony League nine years ago.

"I'm very happy for Jason," said head coach Lou Venturelli. "He's wrestled for four years and has done a very nice job for us."

"We set goals at the beginning of the year and one was to win the league title," he added. "Even though as a team as a whole we didn't match up with our schedule, a tough Division 1 schedule, we knew it was attainable in the ACL. We just always seemed ready and focused for our ACL matches."

Senior Dennis Hill opened the meet with a dominating 18-5 victory over his opponent in the 140-pound weight class, giving the Presidents an early 4-0 lead.

After a Sandwich pin at 145, senior co-captain Jay Moore continued his late-season success with a third-period pin at 152 to maintain a four-point advantage.

Quincy fell behind, 15-10, after Sandwich wins at 160 and 171, but a pin by sophomore Frank McMurrough at 189 put Quincy back in front by a point.

"Frank has been a force late in the season," Venturelli said.

Sandwich recorded a pin at 215 but Quincy senior Dan Coleman (37-4) answered with a pin of his own in the heavyweight division.

Quincy forfeited at 103 but followed with three straight victories: Junior Yen Truong (16-3 win) at 112, sophomore Chris Reggiannini (5-3 win) at 119 and senior co-captain Bao Truong (6-5 win) at 125.

"We forfeited 103 tonight but knew we had our strength coming up," Venturelli said.

At 130, sophomore Jesse Gately kept the score close with a 10-3 loss, as Quincy held a 32-29 lead, setting up Chase's exciting finish.

Quincy will wrestle in the Division 1 South Sectionals this weekend at Waltham and the top six wrestlers in each weight class will move on to the state tournament at Chelmsford.

SIX QUINCY RESIDENTS played on this past season's Archbishop Williams High School football team, which captured the Catholic Central Large League championship and fell in the Division 5 semi-final to Abington. Shown here at last Thursday's awards banquet at Lantana's in Randolph are: (kneeling with trophy) sophomore Dan Reggiannini and (standing, from the left) Jay Eggers, offensive line coach; junior Jeff Bossart, senior James McQuinn, Rob Lescinskas, defensive end coach; senior Mike Lind, sophomore Ryan Buckley and head coach Bill Kinsherf. ON THE BRIGHTER SIDE

After it began eliciting comments on high-intensity-discharge headlights, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has indicated that it has no plans to change the government's lighting regulations. Many of the respondents wanted rules that ban, or at least tone down, bright headlights. High-intensity-discharge headlamps use bulbs filled with xenon gas to generate a bright light. This glare, however, was categorized as causing discomfort, not posing a safety hazard. According to a recent study by the University of Michigan Transportation Research Institute, high-intensity lights cause slightly more glare in some situations and provide a wider beam pattern than regular tungsten-halogen lights. The study concluded that the high-intensity lights hold great promise of improving nighttime safety by improving low-beam light distribution.

Defeats Randolph, 66-45

Quincy Gains First State Tourney Berth In 6 Years

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Like it has done so many times this season, the Quincy High School boys' basketball team outplayed its opponent in the second half last Saturday.

The reward: A 66-45 victory at Randolph and a date in the state tournament for the first time in six years.

"It has been a little bit of a lull," said head coach John Franceschini, whose team missed the tourney by two games last year. "The kids are absolutely sky-high. I'm very proud of them, especially the senior group that has been here three years. Now we're playing for position in the tournament."

Quincy (10-6 overall, 7-4 Atlantic Coast League) traveled to Plymouth North Tuesday and tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 it hosts neighboring North Quincy. In the first meeting Dec. 23, it pulled out a 51-50 win.

Next week, Quincy hosts its annual tournament. It will play Monday night at 7:30 against Hanover and the following day will be either the championship or consolation game to finish the regular season.

Against Randolph, the score was tied at 29 at halftime before the Presidents cranked up their trademark pressure defense over the final 16 minutes. The Blue Devils turned the ball over 15 times in the second half as Quincy cruised to victory.

"We just came out and dominated the second half," Franceschini said. "Again, our defense was the difference in the game."

Senior guard Kevin O'Connell scored a team-high 21 points. Senior guard Matt Ramponi netted 15 and sophomore guard Parker Scott dropped in 13 to help power the offense.

Last Tuesday, the Presidents easily handed Sandwich at home, 67-48. O'Connell led the team with 15 points and junior forward J.J. Niamkey added 14. Senior center Anthony Boyle, senior forward Mike Quigley and Ramponi scored eight apiece.

"We maintained a 20-point lead for most of the game," Franceschini said. "It was a total team effort. We did a great job on the offensive and defensive boards. They only had one offensive rebound the whole night. We did a great job protecting the glass."

After 52-30 Win Over Silver Lake

North Quincy Lands State Tournament Berth

GIRL' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

You'd think missing a handful of players would be a problem for the North Quincy High School girls' basketball team.

Not when the Red Raiders are one game away from qualifying for the state tournament.

Despite missing five players who were out sick with the flu, North Quincy's remaining six varsity members and several called-up JV kids coasted to a 52-30 win at Silver Lake last Saturday.

"I've never been in a season like this, with so much sickness," said head coach Doug MacFarlane, whose team has won three of its last four games. "I can count on one hand how many times I've played with a full team this year. The kids played really well and we qualified for the state tournament at the same time."

The victory put the Red Raiders in the tournament for the fourth straight season and nine of the past 10.

North Quincy (9-7 overall, 8-5 Old Colony League) headed to Marshfield Tuesday and tonight (Thursday) at 5 p.m. it closes out the regular season against cross-town rival Quincy on Coddington Street. In the first showdown Dec. 23, it edged the Presidents, 45-40.

"Our goal is to finish with two more wins and hopefully have a home game," said MacFarlane.

North Quincy took this game because of its suffocating defense, which limited the Lakers to only eight first-half points on 7-percent shooting.

"We played great defense in the first half," MacFarlane said. "We played man-to-man defense and it was just stifling. The six kids really pulled it together."

Senior quad-captain April Suprey poured in a team-high 18 points and pulled down 12 rebounds.

Sophomore Sarah Goreham cashed in 15 points and fellow classmate Amanda Saylor added seven points and eight rebounds. MacFarlane said sophomore Shauna Kelly and junior Megan Sidorowicz also played well.

Last Tuesday, the Red Raiders routed Plymouth South at home, 60-24. Goreham netted a team-high 19 points and Suprey tallied 14 in limited action.

Red Raiders Fall To Silver Lake, 46-38

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team has had trouble scoring this season, and that could not have been more evident last Saturday at home.

The Red Raiders grounded the high-flying Lakers of Silver Lake, but they had more problems putting points on the board, particularly down the stretch, as they fell, 46-38.

"We held a very good high-scoring team but we couldn't score," said head coach James Rendle. "I'm very pleased with our defensive effort but offensively we've go to . . ."

No need to fill in the blank. For the season, the Red Raiders have averaged about 42 points per game.

North Quincy (4-14 overall, 3-10 Old Colony League) hosted Marshfield Tuesday and tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 it closes out the season against city rival Quincy on Coddington Street.

In the first meeting between the local schools Dec. 23, Quincy, which has qualified for the tourney for the first time in six years, escaped with a 51-50 win.

In the Silver Lake game, the Lakers held a four-point halftime lead and the Red Raiders were able to stay within striking distance in the second half. Except they couldn't come up with hoops when it counted most.

"We were with them the whole game but when it came down the stretch and we needed a couple of hoops to stay in it, we couldn't get it done," Rendle said. "Same old, same old."

Junior guard Darryl Costa led the team with 10 points. Junior forward Brandon Neves added eight while senior forward Tony Martin and freshman guard Kyle Costa, Darryl's brother, each chipped in seven.

Last Tuesday, North Quincy traveled to Plymouth South for its second consecutive game. After a gritty performance the day before against Rockland, the Red Raiders tired in the second half en route to a 54-49 loss.

"It was another close game," Rendle said. "We had them but their point guard hit five threes in the second half and finished with 20 points. He just got hot down the stretch."

Darryl Costa erupted offensively with 29 points and he also grabbed 14 rebounds and had six steals. "He had a monster game," Rendle said. "But we had tired legs and that showed in the second half."

Red Hot Raiders Clinch Tourney Spot

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

Why does the North Quincy High School hockey team even bother to play at the beginning of the season?

After another sluggish start to the season —which featured a six-game winless streak to begin January—the Red Raiders have once again caught fire down the stretch to clinch an improbable berth in the state tournament for the sixth straight year.

On Monday night, North Quincy traveled to Whitman-Hanson — a second-place team in the Atlantic Coast League — and skated away with a convincing 4-0 shutout for its third straight win.

"Hopefully, we'll continue to play strong with two homes games to close the season," said head coach Bob Doyle Tuesday afternoon, whose team is 6-2-1 in its last nine games. "We're playing very good hockey right now."

North Quincy (8-6-4 overall, 3-4-3 Old Colony League) hosted Silver Lake yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night at 7:50 it faces off against Marshfield at Quincy Youth Arena in the regular season finale.

In the Whitman-Hanson game, Doyle said he received some advice from Quincy High School head coach Bob Sylvia, whose team had played the Panthers twice this season.

"He said they were a very physical team and a strong checking team," Doyle said. "He said if you can come out forechecking, you might be able to jump on them quick."

Although the first period was scoreless, the Red Raiders has numerous scoring chances as they outshot the Panthers, 14-2. For the game, they held a 44-19 shot advantage.

Their hard work paid off in the middle frame with four goals. Senior Bryan Cooper struck first at the 12-minute mark off a face-off play at the right circle. Senior Matt Grazioso blasted a slapshot from the top of the left circle several minutes later for a 2-0 lead.

Senior Tim Duggan tallied a power-play strike at 8:43 and Grazioso later closed out the scoring with a breakaway goal, assisted by sophomore Paul Graham and senior Rob Mooney.

Meanwhile, the blue-line group — Duggan, Andy Flores, George Snowling, Mike McGunagle and John Mateu — turned in its best performance of the season which led to the team's first shutout.

"All the defensemen played extremely well in front of goalie Bruce Maggio," Doyle said. "It was an outstanding game against a strong Whitman-Hanson team. We came ready to play."

Last Saturday night, North Quincy recovered from a slow start to explode for six goals in the third period en route to a 9-5 victory over Plymouth South at home.

Plymouth South got on the board first with a power-play goal two minutes into the game. North Quincy tallied the equalizer with 40 seconds left in the stanza on a wrap-around goal by Grazioso.

"We were fortunate to be tied," Doyle said. "I assumed a letdown after a big win over Barnstable (6-4 last Wednesday). They figured they could just show up for this game. We were very flat in the first and second periods. We took a lot of penalties. The team was in total chaos."

In the second, Mooney scored at the seven-minute mark with assists from Grazioso and McGunagle for a 2-1 advantage.

In the next three minutes, though, the Panthers erupted for three straight unanswered goals to take a 4-2 lead. Grazioso cut the deficit to 4-3 late in the period.

"There was absolutely no defense," Doyle said. "It was just back and forth."

A different North Quincy team showed up for the third period. Graham, Rich Stone and Grazioso all scored in a three-minute span to put North Quincy ahead, 6-4. After a Plymouth South goal, McGunagle scored 20 seconds later for a 7-5 advantage.

Plymouth South pulled its goalie for the final three minutes and North Quincy tacked on two empty-net goals by Grazioso, his fourth of the game, and Duggan.

"We responded in the third period," Doyle said. "We just started to play hockey the way we can."

Maintaining A Healthy Diet

(NAPS) — There's hope for Americans who want to lose weight and keep it off, although resolutions to lose weight almost always fail, a new nationwide survey by the makers of whole-grain Total breakfast cereal discovered.

According to the survey, 83 percent of dieters reported gaining all the weight back.

Guidelines developed from data gathered by the nation's leading research institutions show starting with a bowl of breakfast cereal, especially 100 percent DV calcium fortified Total, is a smart choice.

Not only is breakfast cereal a popular choice among people who are the most successful at losing weight — 60 percent say they "always" or "usually" eat cereal — but Total is the only leading cereal with 100 percent of the Daily Value for Calcium.

Research suggests increasing calcium intake while cutting calories may help you lose more weight than dieting alone. A calcium-rich diet may help control how much fat we store versus how much we burn.

Easy and sustainable lifestyle changes can lead to "slow, steady weight loss," according to the National Institutes of Health (NIH). Going hungry or depriving yourself of certain foods in an effort to lose weight quickly "may not be effective over the long term," says the NIH.

One easily sustainable change to make with weight loss in mind is to eat a bowl of Total breakfast cereal every morning. Whole-grain Total breakfast cereal has been a leading nutrition cereal in America for more than 40 years.

Data from Nielsen's Survey, which was presented at the annual conference of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity, show that women who are frequent cereal eaters (they eat cereal more than seven times in two weeks) weigh about nine pounds less on average than women who are not.

Lose only about one pound per week unless your doctor instructs otherwise, advises NIH, and "take into account your likes and dislikes and include a wide variety of foods with enough calories and nutrients for good health." The National Academy of Sciences recommends building up to an hour of physical activity on most, preferably all, days of the week.

"A resolution to lose weight has a better chance of succeeding if you plan on a slow and steady approach," said Jean Storlie, Registered Dietitian at the Bell Institute of Health and Nutrition. "In the race to lose pounds, the tortoise, not the hare, almost always wins."

To maintain a healthy diet:

- Set realistic goals and make graduate changes.
- Adapt a flexible eating style that includes a variety of foods.
- Eat breakfast regularly, especially a bowl of cereal.
- Incorporate low-fat carbohydrates into your diet. At least 100 grams per day are needed to prevent fatigue, according to the NIH.
- Keep an upbeat attitude by turning positive changes into permanent habits.
- Add physical activity to your daily routine.

Ways To Help Fight Heart Disease

(NAPS) — Did you know that one out of two women will eventually die from heart disease or stroke, compared to 1 in 30 who will die of breast cancer? This February during American Heart Month, you can help stop the No. 1 killer of women and all Americans.

"Women account for over half of all deaths from heart disease and stroke, so they must be empowered to help others and help themselves," says Nieca Goldberg, M.D., chief cardiologist with The Women's Heart Program, Lenox Hill Hospital, N.Y., and an American Heart Association volunteer spokesperson.

"Empower yourself by seeing your doctor to discuss your risk of heart disease. You can also help others by learning CPR and raising much-needed funds for American Heart Association's education and research programs. Simply purchase beauty products, gifts and other items in February from companies supporting the Power of Love campaign."

The Power of Love campaign will raise more than $2 million for heart disease research and education programs. Log onto a special American Heart Association Web site (www.americanheart.org/Love) to see a list of beauty products, gifts and other items you can purchase to support the American Heart Association. The Web site includes:

- Free Valentine's Day electronic greetings to share with others and screensavers to keep love on your computer screen.
- Links to Power of Love supporters.

Power of Love campaign supporters will contribute part of their February sales proceeds to the American Heart Association.

Thanks in part to American Heart Association-funded research, such important discoveries as CPR, life-extending drugs, pacemakers, bypass surgery and surgical techniques to repair heart defects have been made.

Countless people are alive today to enjoy the love of family and friends due to these lifesaving advances. With the support of the Power of Love campaign, even more lives may be saved in the future and your purchases can help make it possible.

Power of Love supporters include Walgreens, OPI Products, Inc., Coffee-mate, Home Interiors and Gifts, MasterCard International, Swarovski Crystal and Pantene.

Healthy Ideas

(NAPS) — Pulmonary Hypertension is caused by high blood pressure in the lungs. It has no known cause and is often diagnosed long after the disease has progressed — usually up to three years after the first signs or symptoms appear.

That's because the symptoms are easily confused with those of other conditions, such as asthma. While there is no cure, several new treatments have recently been approved by the Food and Drug Administration and a series of medical breakthroughs are expected in the next decade.

For more information about PH, call the Pulmonary Hypertension Association at 1-866-474-4742 or visit www.phassociation.org.

Not all forms of vitamin C are created equal. Now, a new form of vitamin C for use in skin care is designed to provide the optimum antioxidant skin protection. Unlike conventional vitamin C forms, this stable form of vitamin C, called Stay-C 50, maximizes the protective properties of vitamin C by retaining its effectiveness over time. Stay-C 50, when combined with vitamin E, may help reduce UV-induced free radicals that speed the aging process.

The nearly 50 million smokers in the U.S. may now have a unique and effective treatment to help them become smoke-free. The Commit lozenge helps control cravings by delivering craving-fighting medicine fast, and has been shown to be effective in helping smokers quit — including those who have tried quitting before.

Commit uses a groundbreaking new dosage-selection tool — called "Time To First Cigarette" (TTFC) — for smokers to determine their degree of physical dependence on nicotine. Using TTFC means smokers get the appropriate strength for their needs, which can help improve their chances of quitting. During the 12-week course of therapy, users take fewer and fewer lozenges until they are completely nicotine-free.

TWICE A DAY

More than two hundred different types of bacteria live in the mouth. Some help to generate the enzymes needed for digestion. Others, the troublesome type, are referred to as plaque. This is the familiar white film that collects on teeth overnight. It is due to the fact that saliva is turned off when sleeping. When awake, the mouth produces a gallon of saliva per day which has a cleaning effect on teeth. As a result, it is imperative for teeth to be brushed upon wakening. Not only will plaque be brushed away, but the bacteria that lead to "morning breath" will be combatted. The other important time to brush is immediately after meals. Bacteria in the mouth begin to produce enamel-eating acid within fifteen minutes after eating.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentines need not be expensive. A happy note written in your own handwriting . . . a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I love you," but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentines exchanged by children at school). There, the important thing is the number of valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, or a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially someone who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good, too!

BATTERED old snow plow blade awaits rejuvenation by way of the fresh coat of paint as the Quincy DPW lives up to its recycle/reuse philosophy.

Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble

. . . After

RICH SIMONE of the DPW spruces up a beat-up old plow blade with a coat of paint as part of the city's philosophy to refurbish and reuse pieces of equipment.

On Recycling And Reuse

DPW Practices What It Preaches

The Quincy DPW has been preaching the gospel of recycling and reuse for years. Now they can hold themselves up as an example and say, "Look, we're doing it ourselves!"

The Department operates under the policy that it makes good economic sense and conserves raw materials, while minimizing what goes into the trash, to refurbish and reuse an existing piece of equipment.

Reuse gives a product with a value a second life and saves raw materials that would be used in manufacturing a new product.

"By finding a use for that old cabinet, furniture, office supplies, homegoods or recycling toner cartridges, you conserve valuable natural resources that go into new products, while also conserving landfill space," said Rosemary Nolan, program manager at the DPW.

"Cost savings come about through avoided disposal costs that a business or homeowner achieves through recycling or reuse. You may even find that the financial benefits are greater through reuse, as it generally costs less to buy used."

Social benefit is another facet of this policy. As a general philosophy, reuse fulfills a dual goal in the community by diverting waste from expensive disposal costs, while getting materials to those in need.

Repair is another avenue to reuse. Local bookstores and libraries normally have books that focus on repair of reusables. Most manufacturers can be called directly to locate authorized repair people and parts and to supply repair instructions.

The EPA, reminds the DPW, promotes a solid waste hierarchy. First, reduce or reuse. Second, recycle. Third, incinerate with energy recovery (waste to energy). Last, disposal in a landfill.

24 Inches Of Snow But No Flooding, No Outages

'Blizzard Of 2003' Kind To City

HIGH WINDS AND blinding snow made Quincy Shore Drive no place to be Monday afternoon. That vehicle on the left is a snowplow with no other vehicles in sight. Quincy Sun Photos/Trish Bossart

IT WAS DIG out time Tuesday on Samoset Ave.

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Some are calling it the Blizzard of 2003 but fortunately if it was, it came to town a lot tamer — and kinder — than the mean and infamous Blizzard of '78.

But the Presidents Day Storm was still powerful and one that will be remembered as it dumped up to two feet of snow on the city.

The snowfall at Logan Airport measured 27.5 inches, topping the Blizzard of '78's 27.1 inches of snow there.

On Tuesday more was seen on the way.

Two or three more inches were being forecast for Tuesday as The Sun went to press. And rain — or possibly more snow — was predicted for Friday.

The Blizzard of '78 left nearly 27 inches of snow here on top of the remains of 22 inches that had fallen only 17 days before.

Quincy had already depleted its snow budget long before Monday's storm roared into town.

Mayor William Phelan had no immediate estimate as to how much this storm would cost other than that it would be "a lot."

He said Tuesday there were more than 100 pieces of city and private snowfighting equipment cleaning main streets and busy intersections first.

"We will be digging out into the night," he said. "You don't worry about the cost. You worry about the people's safety. We have to get the job done and then we will worry about the money."

He hoped there might be some reimbursement from the federal government.

Phelan said workers were also concentrating on clearing snow from fire hydrants and storm drains and asked residents to assist if possible.

Thomas Gorman, director of Emergency Management, said: "I believe we did very well."

He said he knew of no reported power outages and credited that to the fact that the snow was dry and light and not wet and heavy and the winds subsided.

"Wet snow clings to power lines and combined with high winds those lines come down," he said.

The winds were gusted up to 40 miles per hour at their height but subsided after midnight, Gorman said.

"That was our saving grace," he said.

He said it not only kept power lines from coming down but also helped prevent feared coastal flooding.

Gorman said he did not think the storm came close in fury to the Blizzard of '78. He said he also thought the April Fool's Day storm of 1997, which struck with 25 inches of snow, was also a more powerful one.

A parking ban went into effect 10 a.m. Monday and was to continue to at least 10 p.m. Tuesday.

During the storm police cruisers shuttled nurses to Quincy Medical Center.

City Hall was closed Tuesday for regular business but essential department heads and employees were on duty.

The City Council meeting scheduled for Tuesday night was canceled and will be held Monday, March 3. The finance committee, however, will meet Monday, Feb. 24.

The Presidents Day Winter Carnival scheduled for Tuesday was canceled.

The Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Housing Authority were closed Tuesday.

Most organizations that had meetings or social events scheduled for Tuesday canceled them.

Gorman Urges Parents Keep Children Away From Dangerous Quincy Bay Ice

Director of Emergency Management Thomas Gorman urged parents to keep youngsters now on school vacation away from the ice on Quincy Bay.

"It's a mushy ice and very dangerous to walk on," he said. "Kids are attracted to ice and think it's safe."

He said parents should keep a close watch on their children especially this vacation week.

City Council Meeting Canceled, Next March 3

The City Council meeting scheduled for Tuesday night was canceled because of the storm.

Council President Daniel Raymondi said the next regular meeting of the council will be Monday, March 3.

The council's Finance Committee, however, will meet Monday, Feb. 24, he said.

Two Trailers Purchased As Mobile Shelters

Emergency Management Dept. Building A Higher Profile

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Tom Gorman may not be fighting fires anymore, but he continues to provide for the safety of Quincy's residents in other ways.

Gorman, the retired chief of the Quincy Fire Department, now heads the city's Emergency Management Department, which coordinates emergency services and disaster relief with other municipal agencies. The department was busy this week dealing with approximately 24 inches of snow that fell in Quincy.

With terrorism on the front burner and weather-related problems always a concern, Gorman now believes the department is more important than ever.

"We have to keep up with the current threats that are out there," Gorman said from his office in the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex.

Gorman, a Quincy firefighter for 40 years, stresses that the Emergency Management Department is a coordinating agency that works with other municipal departments, such as the police, fire and health, in an effort to address emergency situations, such as flooding, terrorism, or weather-related events.

The agency is an arm of the Police Department and runs on a budget of approximately $50,000, Gorman said. In addition to receiving municipal funds, the agency petitions the state and federal government for various grants for items such as safety equipment.

TOM GORMAN

Gorman said the department was recently certified by the state as having a Local Emergency Comprehensive Plan (LECP). As a result, the city can apply for state and federal grants to deal with terrorism.

He said the department recently purchased two 16-foot trailers, which will be used as portable shelters in the city. Gorman said police would be able to transport the trailers to a particular site and set up a shelter quickly.

"These trailers will be very helpful, and something we did not have in the past," he said. "This will enable the city to set up a shelter in areas where it was previously impossible."

Gorman said the department is working with area businesses to equip the shelters with emergency items such as food, first aid gear, floodlights, and power generators.

Since his appointment by Mayor William Phelan last September, Gorman has been looking for ways to keep city employees abreast of the latest information and technology regarding emergency management. For example, he and other municipal employees recently attended classes regarding terrorism and biological weapons, such as VX Nerve Gas. These types of activities will only help the city to better prepare for such an event, Gorman said.

Gorman said he is waiting for the arrival of the city's first decontaminant trailer, which will be used in cases of contamination. The trailers will be equipped with decontamination suits and decontaminating chemicals for use on biological agents, he said.

In addition, the department is Quincy's conduit to the state disaster relief agency, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA).

After an emergency situation - such as a major snowstorm or hurricane - it is Gorman's responsibility to communicate with municipal agencies and determine the needs of the city. If the city's resources are not adequate, then he will ask for state or federal assistance, such as help from the National Guard.

Gorman said he is in the process of reorganizing the department and will be seeking volunteers with prior public service experience for help.

"Judging by this week's weather, we have our work cut out for us," said Gorman. "But all the other departments have been very helpful."

FIREFIGHTERS Robert Reney, Pat Bryan and Joseph Ceurvals dig out a fire hydrant on Newport Avenue. The city asks residents to help clear hydrants and storm drains if they can with more snow and rain forecast. (Quincy Sun photos/Trish Bossart)

IF ALL THE snow has you down, don't give up. Sign on Adams St. Dairy Freeze is a reminder that spring is on its way. Actually the first day of spring is just 29 days away.

Sept. 11 Primary Election Day?

Sept. 11, the day terrorists stunned America, crashing hijacked jetliners like suicide bombers into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, will forever be remembered.

SHEA

But should that day be memorialized by making it Primary Election Day?

"It's worth talking about and looking into," says City Clerk Joseph Shea. "I think it would make people stop and think how important it is to have the right to vote in this new world of terrorism."

Former City Councillor Leo Kelly, who made the suggestion to Shea to check out the possibility of having Sept. 11 designated primary election day, says:

KELLY

"They (the terrorists) tried to take away from us on Sept. 11 our most cherished freedom -- the right to vote.

"Making Sept. 11 primary election day will be our message to them that they didn't take that right away and our vow that they never will."

Shea says he is going to ask Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation -- Senator Michael Morrissey, Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin -- to file a bill to see if Sept. 11 could be so designated.

He acknowledges the date could be a problem when it falls on a Saturday or Sunday but feels it could be worked out.

But Henry (Hank) Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans Services, isn't enthused about it all.

BRADLEY

"By making Sept. 11 primary election day is almost like we would be honoring a day of terrorism," he says. "We never did anything like that for Dec. 7 -- Pearl Harbor Day."

There is already a bill before the legislature to make Veterans' Day -- Nov. 11 -- Election Day.

Bradley and other veterans are opposed to that.

Bradley, a member of the American Legion National Legislative Committee, Past National Executive Committeeman and past state commander, says Veterans Day should be left alone.

"Veterans Day and Election Day should be separate days as they are now. Veterans Day is the day to honor our veterans. Election Day is the day to vote. That's the way it is and that's the way it should be. They should not be combined."

Primary and election days are now held on Tuesdays. Changing the dates to Sept. 11 and/or Nov. 11 would bring the elections on other days of the week as well.

The law now requires Election Day to be the first Tuesday in November. And Primary Election Day is set seven weeks back from the Election Day date.

Sept. 11, 2001 -- the day of the terrorist attacks -- happened to be Preliminary Election Day in Quincy and other Massachusetts cities.

The news of the attacks that morning may have been a major factor in the light voter turnout here in Quincy and elsewhere.

Only 29 percent of the city's 52,253 registered voters cast ballots. A 35 to 40 percent turnout had been forecast.

Primary election day Sept. 11? Election Day Nov. 11?

How do you feel about it?

KA LI, the energetic executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) had some interesting statistics on Quincy's Asian population at the group's Community Awards Banquet last week at Quincy Dynasty Restaurant.

LI

Most of us are aware that Asians are the largest minority group in Quincy. But did you know they number at least 17,000, representing 18 percent of the city's population. Of the 17,000 most are Chinese (Cantonese, Mandarin) and Vietnamese.

Li also noted:

A high percentage are homeowners.

Some 23 percent of the students in Quincy's public schools (as of 2001) were Asian.

Approximately 2,500 are registered voters.

That last figure is bound to grow and make Asians a powerful political force in the near future.

THOSE ATTENDING THE QARI awards dinner were told to be on the lookout for a new penny with their food. According to the custom, the person who finds one will have a year of good luck.

RAYMONDI

McCAULEY

City Council President Dan Raymondi and Councillor Frank McCauley were seated near one another.

Raymondi, a potential candidate for mayor, found two pennies. McCauley, due up for re-election, didn't find one. And took a little political ribbing.

RON IACOBUCCI looks like a definite candidate for school committee and is expected to make it official in a week or two.

IACOBUCCI

And this time he's telling friends he's in it all the way.

Two years ago, Iacobucci filed his nomination papers for school committee but withdrew them when it became certain there would be no open seat.

He would have been the only candidate other than the three incumbents -- Jo-Ann Bragg, Ron Mariano and Mike McFarland.

Bragg, Mariano and McFarland thus were re-elected without opposition.

Ironically, if Iacobucci had stayed in the race -- and lost -- he might have later won a school committee seat.

The seat was the one that William Phelan vacated after defeating James Sheets by 17 votes in the closest mayoral race in the city's history.

There were two years left on Phelan's school committee term and 15 contenders vied for the seat at a joint convention of the city council and school committee.

One of the 15 was Iacobucci but the seat went to Elaine Dwyer. If Iacobucci had stayed in the election and not withdrawn he would have gone into the convention with a "runner-up" status which might have given him an edge over Dwyer and the other contenders.

Dwyer is campaigning to keep the seat but will not be listed on the ballot as an incumbent. It will be considered an open seat.

Incumbents Christine Cedrone and Linda Stice are up for re-election.

Iacobucci, who is CEO of the South Shore Community Foundation overseeing the Mini-Fenway Park planned for West Quincy, is no stranger on the political scene where he is has been a pretty strong vote-getter.

He topped the ballot in Quincy in the 1992 Democratic primary for Governor's Council but lost district-wide.

He racked up more than 10,000 votes in 1985 in a run for councillor at-large and finished close behind third seat winner Tim Cahill in 1987.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 postcard view of the old Atlantic depot looking north on the Old Colony Line in North Quincy. The Atlantic section got its name from Atlantic Street, which was the first road in Quincy to run from Hancock Street to the ocean. Houses on both Billings and Atlantic Streets can be seen in the background. An older depot at this location was the first stop in Quincy from Boston when in 1845 the railroad first came through here. This picture was taken from the old Hancock Street truss bridge under which the railroad passed. The hanging wires alerted trainmen on top of moving trains of the upcoming bridge. When the Red Line was built in the late 1960s, this depot was demolished. Today, up the hill on the left is Tullio's Restaurant and on the right is the Boilermakers Union in the old Atlantic post office building.

QEA Urges Quincy College, City Schools To Negotiate

The Quincy Education Association represents 900 educators in the Quincy Public Schools and Quincy College. The recent dispute between Quincy College and Quincy Public Schools worries us, as we try to represent our members.

Eviction of Quincy College from the buildings owned by Quincy Public Schools serves no one. The income from rent would not be forthcoming to Quincy Public Schools, money that was budgeted already; and the disruption for Quincy College's faculty, staff and students would be terrible, coming in the middle of a semester. The result is that K-12 students and faculty, and College students and faculty are "at risk" while these forces, on both sides, play a political game on one-upsmanship, brinksmanship, and posturing.

It is incumbent on both sides to stop the dramatics and negotiate. We in the QEA believe:

• The College needs a stable rent structure that they can predict and afford from year to year.

• Quincy Public Schools owns those buildings and should get a fair rental payment for them.

• The City's charges for "services" provided to QC should be re-examined, "cost-ed out" accurately and fairly, and should not be used as a "source of cash," but rather as fair charges for actual services rendered.

• The City's negotiations regarding their services should be conducted at the same time as the School rental negotiations, as they are, in actuality a package deal for College budgeting.

• No resolution to these disputes should harm educators or students at either Quincy College or Quincy Public Schools.

• Any resolution that effectively threatens Quincy College's future is unacceptable.

We see no reason why reasonable people cannot resolve these issues; and we see no reason for political figures to allow political considerations to threaten the futures of students and teachers at either institution. We call on these reasonable leaders to go back to the table and do what is best for students and teachers at both institutions, because that's what is best for the City of Quincy.

Paul J. Phillips
President,
on behalf of the Executive
Board of the QEA

Bush Offers No Evidence Iraq Poses Real Danger

President Bush has offered no evidence that Iraq poses a real or imminent danger either to the U.S. or to its neighbors. He's too busy creating the smoke-screen as to whether or not Iraq possesses weapons of mass destruction.

What we have so far, in that regard, is the editorial in the Wall Street Journal by Secretary of State Colin Powell, where he admitted that there is no "smoking gun" regarding the existence of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq.

President Bush claims that Iraq works with al-Qaeda, but offers nothing to support this. Actually, it was the U.S. who worked with al-Qaeda to train the KLA to terrorize Serbs in Kosovo.

Who are we to attack anyone we want, without provocation, merely because it is "in our best interest" to do so? If we were to attack Iraq, we would behave exactly as other terrorists whose activity we deplore.

Let us hope that no other nation decides to declare "war on terrorism," as America may end up on the top of their list.

Councillor Urges Cross Town Connector

This Week
1955
48 Years Ago

City Councillor Edna B. Austin urged construction of a cross-town route connecting the coming Southeast Expressway and Southern Artery in order to protect and expand the downtown retail section.

"We must make a start this year," she said, "and by a start I mean an adequate study so that we will have our plans made by the time the expressway is completed.

"Off street parking has in the past few years caused Quincy's shopping and business center to develop a point where it is the envy of many communities in this section of the country.

"But we cannot afford to let traffic bypass Quincy Center on both sides."

SURGERY UNDER HYPNOSIS

Two hospital employees underwent surgery at City Hospital -- one for extraction of infected teeth, the other for removal of a scar on the arm -- under hypnosis, rather than the usual anesthesia.

"To the best of my knowledge no other hospital in Massachusetts has used hypnosis as an anesthetic in such operations," said Dr. Naif L. Simon, director of the Anesthesia Department, who performed the hypnosis.

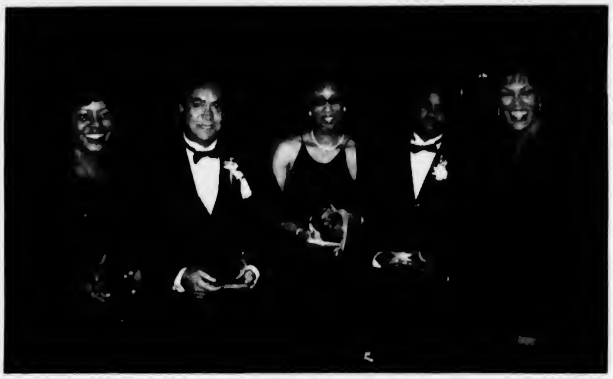
Dr. Sidney R. Cutler operated on Mary Sullivan for removal of the teeth. Dr. William P. Ridder operated on the arm of Elsie McKinley. Both women returned to work minutes after the surgery.

LAND SWAP OKAYED

The City Council authorized completion of a land swap between the city and the Grossman interests which would clear the way for Grossman to construct an office building on the site of the Quincy Depot.

Grossman would give the city a plot of vacant land behind City Hall in return for a 50-year lease on the depot land. Grossman would also provide a waiting room for New Haven railroad passengers.

JUNIOR COLLEGE URGED



The directors of Newton and Holyoke Community Colleges, the only ones in the state, advised the School Committee to appoint a director and get moving on the job of establishing a Quincy Junior College.

James Laurits of Newton and George Frost of Holyoke said their schools were set up in local high schools in 1946 primarily to handle veterans returning to school under the GI Bill.

Sacred Heart Parish To Celebrate Centennial

Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy will mark its centennial with a number of events scheduled this year beginning March 11.

The first Sacred Heart church was located at Hancock and Hunt Streets serving as a mission of St. John's from 1878 to 1903 when it became a separate parish. Construction of a new church began in 1924 at Hancock St. and Glover Ave. to serve the growing number of parishioners.

In January of 1948, the fairly new church was destroyed by fire. Though devastated by the loss of their church, the parish community began fundraising for a new church. Under the direction of the then-pastor Rev. Dr. Irving Gifford construction began the following year and a new edifice in English Gothic style was built. It is now considered one of the most beautiful churches in the Archdiocese.

As the parish grew, a school, convent and rectory were built to serve the needs of the parish. Today, the pastor is Rev. John W. O'Brien who succeeded the late Rev. Cornelius Heery.

The first event marking the centennial will be a Parish Mission March 11-13. Sr. Kathleen Crowley will be the speaker each day following the 9 a.m. Mass in the lower church. Rev. James M. DiPerri will conduct the evening program. Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament and the Rosary will be held at 6:30 p.m. followed by Fr. DiPerri speaking at 7 p.m. each evening. The evening program on March 13 will include Mass.

Other upcoming events include a Centennial Mass celebration in May, a Parish outing in June and a banquet in November. In addition, a commemorative book is being developed which will include the parish history and some history of the North Quincy area.

Committee members include: Rev. John O'Brien; Rev. James Robertson, Parochial Vicar; Rev. Mr. John Salenius, Deacon; and Thomas Koch, General Chairman. Other members are Camille Austin, Eleanor Archer, Frances Beardsley, Martha Campbell, Rose Ciccolo, Maureen Conway, Barbara Cunniff, Edith Donovan, Mary Dowling, Ann Doyle, Julie DiScipio, Rosemary Feeney, Kathleen Gould, Peter & Sue Graceffa, James Kelley, Abby Kelliher, Simone Koch, Rosemary Kubera, Kathy Mysiuk, Teresa O'Brien, Mary Lou Olsen, Dottie Ostiguy, Terry Pecevich, Mary Phelan, Gene and Mary Raux, Sean Tierney and Kathy Zangla.

Atty. William Sullivan Named To Judicial Nominating Commission

Governor Mitt Romney has tapped a prominent Quincy attorney to sit on the 18-member Judicial Nominating Commission, which is entrusted with screening and picking judges.

Attorney William F. Sullivan was picked by Romney last week and stands as the only lawyer from Norfolk County on the commission.

Sullivan is a graduate of Boston College Law School and the University of Notre Dame. He worked in partnership with Thomas Largey, Mayor Phelan's director of operations.

He is a past president of the Norfolk County Bar Association. Sullivan also worked in the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office from 1982 to 1984.

Romney unveiled the new, 18-member commission by executive order last week. The commission has been reduced considerably from its original size of 75 members.

Condo Sales Set New Record

Bay State Housing Market Sees Steady Growth In 2002

After two years of declining sales the Bay State's housing market rebounded in 2002, as historically low mortgage rates, a rocky investment climate on Wall Street, and strong demand from immigrants and baby-boomers seeking smaller, starter homes and condominiums boosted home buying activity across the state, according to a report issued today by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR). Home selling prices also rose in 2002 for a ninth consecutive year, an indication that the market remains healthy and demand for housing still exceeds the supply of homes in many areas.

The MAR report shows sales of detached single-family homes rose 5.1 percent in Massachusetts during 2002, from 44,514 in 2001 to 46,769 this past year. Condominium sales also increased 13.4 percent, from 13,151 a year ago to 14,912 in 2002, setting a new annual record for the Bay State. Furthermore, the aggregate total of 61,681 detached homes and condos sold in 2002 make it the third highest annual residential sales total in state history, topped only by 1998 and 1999.

"The near record sales pace of the past year reflects the strong desire of consumers to take advantage of some of the best interest rates in years," state MAR President Peter P. Casey. "We've also seen an influx of buyers as a result of diminishing returns in the financial markets, and the eagerness of many to find safe, alternative investments to Wall Street."

Regionally, sales of detached single-family homes improved in six of seven market areas of the state last year, the exception being western Massachusetts where sales slide 0.7 percent from 2001 levels. The healthiest activity occurred in greater Boston (+15.6%), Cape Cod/Barnstable County (+6.6%), and Central Mass./Worcester County (+4.9%). Similarly, in the condo market, sales rose in all areas but the West, where a 6.6 percent decline in sales was reported. Within specific markets, greater Boston, Cape Cod, and greater Fall River-New Bedford saw the most improvement in 2002, as double-digit gains were observed from year ago levels.

During the first half of 2002, it was mild winter weather and the pent-up demand generated by the return of many anxious buyers who had exited the market following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks that boosted sales, noted Casey.

Notably, despite the health sales pace this past year, the number of single-family properties on the market rose a modest 4 percent in the last 12 months, from a monthly average of 30, 789 listing in the fourth quarter in 2001 to 32,063 in the final quarter of 2002.

Selling prices also rose steadily in all seven regional markets of the state. The average selling price for detached single-family homes rose a modest 5 percent in greater Boston, but in Cape Cod, the South Shore, and central, southeastern and western Massachusetts the price gains exceeded the statewide rate of price appreciation of 12 percent in 2002. In the condo market, every region saw a double-digit increase in the average selling price except greater Fall River-New Bedford.

A Cost-Efficient Water Heater

(NAPS) — Consider the everyday activities that use hot water — cleaning the dishes, washing the clothes, hot showers. All of these activities put a heavy burden on a family's water heater — an appliance responsible for approximately 20 percent of a home's energy use.

The Propane Education & Research Council offers tips for choosing the best water heater for a family's needs and how to maintain it for years of efficient use.

"A family of four, each showering five minutes a day, uses 700 gallons of water a week," said Roy Willis, president of the Propane Education & Research Council. "Choosing the right size water heater is crucial. If your tank is too small, you may suffer the agony of cold showers. If your tank is too large, you'll pay extra to keep unused water heated."

If your gas water heater was manufactured prior to 1992, it probably has an efficiency rating of less than 50 percent. When choosing a new water heater, you can save a lot of money over the lifetime of the heater if you consider energy efficiency and type before you buy. The Council recommends investigating your household's patter of hot water usage. Ask yourself the following questions:

- What's the number of people in the family (one person uses an average of 34 to 35 gallons of hot water per day)?
- How many bathrooms, garden tubs or hot tubs?
- Do you have an automatic dishwasher? If so, how many times is it run on average per day?
- Do you have a washing machine? If so, how many times is it run on average per day?

Peak hour demand, the busiest one-hour usage period in a day, is key. How many family members will routinely take a shower in any given hour? Calculating usage correctly will help you choose what size water heater you need to maintain the necessary amount of hot water for your home.

Propane water heaters recover hot water nearly twice as quickly as electric water heaters — ensuring your home maintains a reliable supply of hot water. A 50-gallon propane water heater can provide as much hot water as a 66- to 80-gallon electric unit in a 2.5 bath home.

When researching water heaters, pay particular attention to the Energy Guide Label. This bright yellow sticker will tell you how much it will cost to run the water heater for one year. Propane water heaters cost a third less to operate than electric models.

For more information about the benefits of using propane as a fuel source, visit the Council's Web site (www.usepropane.com). While there you can check out the Council's Energy Savings Calculator. By making a few selections on the calculator, you can quickly compare the cost of using propane water heaters and other gas appliances to the cost of using electric appliances.

Loans To Help Landlords Remove Lead Paint

Quincy Community Action Initiates 'No Child Denied A Home' Program

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) has launched a campaign to assure that no child is denied a home because an apartment has lead paint. The organization is especially concerned about this problem because of its focus helping families in shelter locate apartments for rent and has found that a number of landlords forego the benefits of Section 8 rent guaranties because of concerns around lead paint.

Trish Appert, Housing Director, has said, "We have lead paint loans to help landlords with lead paint in their units removed the lead paint once and for all. Depending on the landlord's income, the loans may be at no or low interest and may help landlords improve the value of their property in addition to removing the lead paint. A deleaded apartment in good physical condition will qualify for the Section 8 program, which can be very beneficial to landlords in this uncertain market by guaranteeing a large proportion of a tenant's rent. Happily for landlords, Section 8 rent limits are now competitive with market rents."

In addition to offering lead paint loans, QCAP is trying to make sure that all landlords know their responsibilities. Although a landlord in a two or three family building can refuse to rent a unit to a household with a child because of the age or infirmity of an existing occupant in the other unit, no landlord can refuse such rental because of lead paint. Landlords in larger buildings cannot refuse to rent to a family with a child under any circumstances. Landlords also cannot refuse to rent because a tenant has a Section 8 certificate. Landlords or tenants who want more information about the Section 8 program and lead paint removal can tell Tristen Houlihan QCAP at (617) 479-8181 ext. 119.

Blizzard Ices Opening Games Of Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament

Monday's blizzard snowstorm forced the cancellation of opening games in the 30th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Monday's games -- including first round matchups involving the Quincy Mite, Squirt, Pee Wee and Bantam teams -- were not played Monday due to the weather. No make-up times had been scheduled for those games as of press time.

Tuesday's games were scheduled to take place at the arena, according to tournament organizers.

For more information on the games and schedule, call the Quincy Youth Arena at 617-479-8371.

The "A" tournament features 26 teams and four levels of competition: Mites, Squirts, Pee Wees and Bantams. The week-long tournament culminate Sunday when the four championship games are played at the youth arena located at 60 Murphy Memorial Dr., off Sea St.

This year's tournament has a true international flavor as Bantam teams from Austria and Berwick, Nova Scotia are participating. Teams from Ontario, California; Lewiston, Maine; Reading, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are also competing in the tournament considered one of the most prestigious youth hockey events in the Northeast.

Quincy is well represented as the local Mite, Squirt, Pee Wee and Bantam A teams will all compete.

Other teams taking part are from Andover, Hingham, Hyde Park, Pembroke, Brookline, Weymouth, Brockton, Braintree and the greater South Shore - Boston area.

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will be selling a program book featuring local sponsors for $5 at the gate. The book lists the rosters of the participating teams, as well as a complete tournament schedule.

Proceeds from the program book will benefit Kiwanis charities, which focus on helping local underpriviledged children.

In celebration of the club's 30th annual tournament, Quincy Kiwanis will host a local appearance by the Stanley Cup, perhaps the most recognizable trophy in professional sports, on Saturday, March 1 at North Quincy High School.

The Stanley Cup -- awarded annually to the National Hockey League champion, will appear at the North Quincy High School auditorium, 316 Hancock St., from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission will be $5 per person available only at the door, with all proceeds benefiting Kiwanis charities. Fans attending will be able to park in front of the high school or pay to park at the MBTA parking lot across the street.

People will be allowed to view the Stanley Cup and pose for a photo. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own cameras but a photographer will be on hand to take photos for $5 per photo.

First awarded in 1893, the Stanley Cup is the oldest trophy competed for by professional athletes. The Stanley Cup has logged more than 400,000 miles in travel over the past five years and has raised more than $4 million for charity the past three seasons. Standing just under three feet in height and weighing 35 pounds, the Stanley Cup has over 2,000 names engraved on it.

For more information on the tourney or the Stanley Cup, call Quincy Youth Arena at 617-479-8371.

Weymouth Joins Quincy In Babe Ruth World Series

A Weymouth team has officially entered the National Babe Ruth World Series to be held at Quincy's Adams Field Aug. 15-23.

The Weymouth team rounds out the field of 12 teams – including Quincy – that will compete for the 14-year-old Babe Ruth World Series title.

"Weymouth is proud to join Quincy in the 2003 Babe Ruth 14-year-old World Series," said Weymouth Mayor David Madden. "I am excited for the young people that will get a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to participate in a National World Series. I want to thank the organizers of the tournament for the invitation to participate and I look forward to seeing some great baseball this summer."

"This tournament is a wonderful opportunity for Quincy to showcase our beautiful city," said Mayor William Phelan. "Having Weymouth join us in the World Series will be great for the tournament and the region."

This tournament is expected to draw 60,000 to 80,000 spectators. The Babe Ruth League has reserved approximately 300 hotel rooms for coaches, families, and other spectators. It is estimated that the tournament will help pump close to $1 million into the regional economy.

"We are thrilled to be joined by Weymouth in the World Series, said Dick Lombardi, president of the Quincy Babe Ruth World Series 2003 Committee. "The eastern Massachusetts region is one of the largest concentrations for Babe Ruth baseball in the country and we expect to draw huge crowds due to the large following."

Quincy was awarded the 14-year old Babe Ruth World Series at a ceremony last year. The tournament will feature teams from Quincy, Weymouth, Italy and eight regions throughout the United States.

"I want to thank Quincy for the invitation to participate in the World Series. This presents a great opportunity for the kids of Weymouth to participate in a National World Series. We look forward to partnering with Quincy for a great baseball tournament," said Rich Waite, president of the Weymouth Babe Ruth League.

The addition of the team from Weymouth means that there will be three teams from the Eastern Massachusetts region participating for the national championship. The winner of the Eastern Mass. Sectional tournament will also be awarded an at-large bid to the tournament.

Tickets for the Babe Ruth World Series will go on sale in late April or early May. More information on pricing and ticket sale locations will be available in March.

The organizers of Quincy Babe Ruth World Series 2003 will be offering various corporate sponsorship opportunities for this tournament.

TOTALLY EXHAUSTED

A vehicle's exhaust system consists of a muffler, one or more catalysts, an oxygen sensor, and piping that is configured to snake clear of underbody lines. All that is holding this expensive assembly in place (and aligned) are some rubber and brackets. Failures are common, ranging from cracked rubber to failed welds. Regular inspections of the exhaust system, therefore, are advised. If any hanger is broken, it must be immediately replaced, even if the exhaust system seems to be hanging level. A broken hanger will likely allow the system to move up and down as you drive, creating a whiplash effect that travels through the clamped and welded joints. Without repairs, clamps loosen and welds crack.

Kristen Bowes Sets Career Assists Record At UMass-Boston

Senior guard Kristen Bowes of Quincy is in the middle of another fine season on the University of Massachusetts at Boston women's basketball team.

Bowes, a 1999 Quincy and North Quincy High School graduate, broke the school's career assists record last week, passing Carol Thomas, who dished out 284 between 1983-86.

Through 19 games this season, Bowes started 17 and averaged 10.3 points, 4.0 assists and 2.8 steals, placing her among the conference leaders in each category. She's also an accurate 3-point shooter (41 percent) and free-throw shooter (75 percent).

In her career, Bowes has started 66 of 93 games, averaging 8.1 points and 3.0 assists. She ranks second all-time in steals (235) and is ninth in scoring (757 points). And she holds single-game records for steals (11) and assists (12).

Quincy's Annual Tournament Underway

Presidents' Defense Key In Season Sweep Over North Quincy

BOYS' BASKETBALL

It has been completely different seasons for the Quincy and North Quincy boys' basketball teams.

The Red Raiders, which snapped a four-year tournament drought last season, suffered through a rebuilding phase this year.

The Presidents, which struggled through a 5-13 campaign a year ago, rebounded this season and is tournament-bound for the first time in six years.

And when the two city rivals met last Thursday evening on Coddington Street, Quincy was looking to complete the season sweep of its neighbors after dropping both games to them last year.

The Presidents completed the task, pulling out a 48-36 victory thanks to a tenacious defense and some clutch shooting down the stretch.

"It was a good win," said head coach John Franceschini. "It gives us the unofficial city championship and puts us in the right direction for the tournament.

"Again, our defense stayed consistent and we never really allowed them to make a run. That made up for our lack of offense."

"I'm disappointed," said head coach James Rendle, who finished his first season with a 5-15 overall record. "Our inability to score cost us again. It was a low-scoring game, a defensive game. But I'm happy the kids played hard."

Quincy (11-7 overall) held the first day of its annual tournament yesterday (Wednesday), with Milton-Stoughton at 6 p.m. and Quincy-Hingham at 7:30 p.m. The championship and consolation games are scheduled for tonight (Thursday).

Quincy started the game off with a bang when senior guard Kevin O'Connell — the Atlantic Coast League MVP — drained back-to-back 3-pointers and converted a fast-break layup for an 8-1 lead.

North Quincy, which kept with the tradition of starting its seniors in this game, took nearly five minutes before it scored its first field goal when senior guard Kevin Holleran (13 points) found room inside the paint.

After sophomore guard Park Scott scored on a strong drive to the hoop to give Quincy a 10-3 lead, Rendle called a timeout with 9:22 left in the half to regroup.

With the regulars back in, the Red Raiders made a run and trimmed Quincy's lead to 19-15 at halftime. Junior forward Brandon Neves sparked the offense over that stretch, scoring seven points with a dominating inside game.

"Neves made a big difference there," Rendle said.

"Both team struggled in the offensive end in the first half," Franceschini said. "North played great interior defense, especially Neves and (Sean) Bowes. They forced us to look outside."

In the second half, the Red Raiders stayed within striking distance of the Presidents for the first eight minutes. A Holleran layup cut the deficit to 28-23, but Quincy senior center Anthony Boyle — an honorable mention to the ACL all-star team — answered with a demoralizing basket when he put in a teammate's missed shot.

After a North Quincy timeout, Quincy delivered the dagger when senior ACL first-team all-star Matt Ramponi knocked down a 3-pointer with 5:40 left in the game for a 33-23 advantage.

Defensively, the Presidents hounded North Quincy's top two scorers — Darryl and Kyle Costa — holding the brothers to a combined two points.

"That was a big factor," Rendle said. "They were our top two scorers for the year. They had bigger kids on them but in general it was just their defensive pressure."

The Red Raiders did get back to within five points at 37-32, but O'Connell netted a jumper with two minutes left that ignited a 10-0 run to seal the game. Senior Sean Munchbach scored a layup and O'Connell (4 of 4) and Boyle (2 of 2) were perfect from the free-throw line.

"We were in the ballgame down the stretch but we couldn't score on three or four possessions," Rendle said. "When we got an open shot we couldn't knock it down. It's the same old, same old."

North Quincy Prevails In Another Classic Showdown With Quincy

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy-North Quincy girls' basketball game last Thursday evening had all the makings of a classic showdown before tip-off.

Both teams strutted into the gym having already locked up coveted spots in the state tournament. And in the regular season finale, all that remained on the line was city bragging rights.

That's where the Presidents have a chip on their shoulder. In recent years they watched the Red Raiders qualify for tournaments and raise league championship banners, while they struggled through their seasons and were swept by their neighbors.

This game was supposed to be different. Although Quincy lost, 45-40, in the first meeting on Dec. 23, they were more confident for this game than any other recent matches.

After all, Quincy (14-6) made the tourney for the first time in 20 years, contended for the league title, won 14 games — and it was playing in front of its home fans.

But when all was said and done, North Quincy (11-7) prevailed, 49-41, for its seventh straight victory over its Coddington colleagues. Sort of like the Boston University hockey team's magic in the Beanpot.

"This was a great win," said head coach Doug MacFarlane, whose team carries a four-game winning streak into the tourney. "I had three players out and they could have folded. The kids came to play. They were up for this game."

North Quincy jumped ahead, 10-5, four minutes into the game as senior quad-captains Kathleen McCarthy and Kristen DiMattio overpowered the Presidents in the paint. It was McCarthy's first game back from the flu.

Quincy responded by dialing long distance with its junior backcourt. Point guard Sarah Shea buried a 3-pointer from the right corner and shooting guard Bonnie Hirtle sandwiched sophomore Nicole O'Sullivan's inside basket with 3-pointers to give Quincy a 16-15 lead with 9:04 left in the half.

"We got into trouble with our man-to-man defense early," MacFarlane said. "When they started to hit those threes, I said, 'Yikes, we have to change this.' We switched to a triangle-and-two defense and shut them down the rest of the way."

The game took an interesting turn when Quincy sophomore center Alysia DiMuzio picked up her second foul and took a seat on the bench. To say North Quincy capitalized would be an understatement.

The Red Raiders outscored the Presidents, 16-4, over the final nine minutes. Senior quad-captain and center April Suprey had her way inside, scoring 10 of her 13 first-half points. She also grabbed 14 of her 20 rebounds in the first half.

"They didn't have anyone else with size to stay with April," MacFarlane said. "She had her way. She went nuts on the boards and no one was blocking her out."

The second half started sluggishly for both teams before Suprey and DiMuzio battled each other. And the younger DiMuzio looked unstoppable, scoring nine of Quincy's first 14 points in the post.

After a Shea 3-pointer, DiMuzio followed with an inside basket to trim North Quincy's lead to 37-34 with about eight minutes remaining in the game. Momentum appeared to be switching when North Quincy turned the ball over on its next possession — causing MacFarlane to jump from the bench, telling his team to "calm down" with a stern voice and hand gesture.

The Red Raiders regained control when sophomore Sarah Goreham drove to the hoop for a layup and a five-point lead. Quincy cut it to three with under two minutes left but failed to score on several trips down the court. North Quincy sealed the game at the free-throw line, hitting 6 of 8 down the stretch.

WINTER! CAR CARE

AAA Asks Parents: Are You Keeping Your Child Safe?

With changing laws and a variety of child safety seats on the market, AAA Southern New England has put together a list of simple questions to help parents answer their most important question: Am I keeping my child safe?

Motor vehicle crashes are the No. 1 killer of children between ages 4 and 14, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. In 2001 alone, over 1,500 child passengers were killed and 228,000 more were injured in car crashes. Every day, four child passengers age 14 and younger are killed and 600 more injured in car crashes in this country.

To help reduce these fatalities and injuries, AAA clubs across the country participated in National Child Passenger Safety Week (Feb. 9-15). AAA is pushing for stronger laws in states, and engages in educational activities to help parents ensure they are doing their best to keep their children safe while riding in the car.

AAA has compiled a series of questions parents can ask themselves to help protect their children:

Is your child sitting in the right spot? NHTSA recommends children 12 and younger ride in the back seat, where they are generally safest in the event of a crash. Research shows children are almost 40 percent less likely to be killed in a crash if they are riding in the back seat. Rear-facing child seats should never be placed in front of an air bag.

Will a seat belt fit your child properly? Children fit properly in a seat belt when they can sit with their back straight against the seat cushion and their knees bent over the edge of the seat. The seat belt should fit low and tight across the lap/upper thigh area and snugly cross the chest and shoulder.

Should your child be in a booster seat, child seat or infant seat? If children are too small to use a seat belt, then they need some form of approved safety seat. Check the seat manufacturer's instruction booklet to be sure the child is the appropriate height, weight and age for the seat.

Is the safety seat properly installed in your car? Instructions on the seat and in the seat's instruction booklet should explain how to install the seat properly. A listing of AAA-certified technicians can be found by selecting For Kids Safe at aaa.publicaffairs.com.

Is the seat installed tightly enough? When you tug on the car seat where the seat belt passes through it, you should not be able to move the seat more than one inch in any direction. If the seat moves, you need to tighten the belt. Parents should check this every time they use the seat.

Are the harness straps routed properly? The straps should route through the appropriate slots, ensuring the straps are at or above the shoulder for forward-facing seats and at or below the shoulder for rear-facing seats. Additionally, the straps should not be twisted.

Is the harness buckled securely? Cereal, cookies and other crumbs can fall into the latch of the buckle, causing it to fail to snap securely. Be sure to check all moving parts regularly and tug against the latch after snapping the child in to be sure that it is buckled firmly.

Are the harness straps tight enough? The harness should be snug and lie flat on the child so that no slack can be pinched in the straps. Mistakes are often made during cold weather when children wear bulky clothing.

Is the retainer clip in the right place? The retainer clip should be at the child's armpit level when the harness is snug.

Increasing Windshield Replacement Awareness

As colder, dryer winter months set in, consumers should be aware of some of the issues surrounding auto glass services. Despite 350,000 windshields replaced every year in New England alone, and the 11 million replaced annually nationwide, studies show that consumers have little awareness of what to look for when getting professional windshield service.

Why are windshields so important anyway?

The windshield plays an important role in auto safety. First, windshields assist in the proper function of airbags. Airbags actually use the windshield as a backstop in order to protect passengers. Second, windshields are vital to the overall structural support of the passenger compartment – they help to prevent the roof from collapsing in rollover accidents.

If consumers do not receive proper windshield treatment, they are putting themselves at a higher risk of injury in the event of an accident.

Why worry about which auto glass company to use?

Regulators do not monitor windshield repairs or replacements. Most states do not even require auto glass technicians to be licensed or certified. It is each glass company's responsibility to put its technicians through a recognized training and certification program.

"A problem with many marketing messages and procedures today is the focus only on quick service, rather than taking the time to do the job right," said Bob Rosenfield, president of J.N. Phillips Auto Glass. "We operate within a service industry that should focus on quality to ensure the safety of customers as well as long-term business success." Rosenfield has grown his company to a 20 percent market share in New England by focusing on safety, in addition to quick, efficient and friendly service.

Because a properly repaired or installed windshield can save your life and the lives or your passengers, learn what to look for when you need auto glass service. Make sure to take a few minutes to ask auto glass professionals about their procedures and warranties before using their services.

Dr. Lisa Antonelli Named Cardiology Chief At QMC

Quincy resident Lisa Antonelli, MD, FACC, has been named chief of cardiology at Quincy Medical Center.

Dr. Antonelli is board certified in internal medicine and cardiology. She maintains a private cardiology practice in Quincy.

As cardiology chief, Dr. Antonelli will direct the medical center's Cardiac Care Program, which provides comprehensive diagnostic services, treatment and follow-up care for a wide range of cardiac diseases and problems, including heart attack, congestive heart failure, irregular heart beat (arrythmia) and angina.

"Lisa is a natural choice as the new chief because she understands the special medical needs of the Quincy community and has the knowledge and leadership skills to initiate the programs that will best meet those needs," said Quincy Medical Center CEO and President Christine Schuster, RN, MBA.

The Cardiac Care Program at Quincy Medical Center provides advanced evaluation and testing onsite through specialized cardiac tests, including echocardiography, Doppler ultrasonography, stress tests and diagnostic cardiac catheterizations performed at QMC to determine the extent of a patient's heart disease. Dr. Antonelli will also oversee QMC's cardiac rehabilitation program, which combines exercise with other cardiac risk reduction strategies to help patients with heart disease make lifestyle changes to achieve optimal health.

DR. LISA ANTONELLI

Patients in need of specialized cardiac procedures, such as angioplasty and cardiac surgery, gain immediate access to the nationally recognized cardiac program at Boston Medical Center, QMC's clinical affiliate through the Boston Medical Center Alliance for Quality.

"The goal of Quincy Medical Center's Cardiac Care Program is to immediately diagnose and treat a patient's heart problem so that they can return to their everyday activities as quickly as possible," Dr. Antonelli said. For example, the opening of a chest pain clinic at QMC in the late spring will offer rapid diagnosis and treatment for patients who come to emergency department with symptoms of chest pain. Roughly six million people seek emergency treatment for chest pain each year in the US, according to research in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA).

Dr. Antonelli received her medical degree from Tufts University School of Medicine, where she was elected to the prestigious Alpha Omega Alpha Medical Honor Society. She performed an internship and a residency in internal medicine at Rhode Island Hospital and a cardiology fellowship at Lahey Clinic Medical Center. Dr. Antonelli is a fellow of the American College of Cardiology.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services.

The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Experiencing Loss And Grief

By PHILLIP QUINN

We all experience loss and grief in our lives. Our losses come in many forms. They can be the normal transitions in life including retirement, loss of job, or loss of friends as a result of a move. They can also be due to death.

While we all know intellectually that loss and death are inevitable parts of life, we sometimes do not really believe this emotionally. As a result, a sudden loss and a death can shatter our normal view that our world is safe. It can also destroy our sense of control. Death in particular often causes us to feel completely out of control and unsure if we can go on.

While we experience loss and grief in our own way, most mental health professionals agree that we do go through certain stages in the grieving process. How we navigate these stages often indicates how we will eventually deal with our loss.

At first we experience sudden death in shocked disbelief. As our lives suddenly change, even if the death follows a lengthy illness, we are often unprepared for the life changes that a death presents us with. Some of us find this period so difficult that we may deny the death to ourselves, even subconsciously hoping that our departed loved one will return.

PHILLIP QUINN

After the initial feeling of shock, the grieving process often moves on to feelings of anger, guild and sadness that in some people turn into depression and hopelessness. While all of these feelings can be intense and often come and go as the places we go and the people we meet remind us of our lost loved ones, the feelings tend to become less intense over time.

While people grieve in many different ways, there are things that we can do to ease the process, including:

- Seek out supportive friends and family;
- Express your feelings to those offering you support;
- As the days go on try to compartmentalize your grieving by setting some time aside each day to grieve;
- Take care of your health. Make sure you eat right, exercise, sleep and relax.
- Allow yourself the needed time to grieve. The grieving process often takes a while.
- Allow yourself to feel the pain that goes along with the grieving process. It is all right to feel angry, sad, guilty, worried and at times wonder if you can go on.

It is also important to recognize when you are not dealing very well with the grieving process. If you can find yourself avoiding the thoughts associated with grieving by working too hard, abusing drugs and/or alcohol, feeling afraid to feel your pain or feeling depressed and hopeless, it may be helpful to talk to someone professionally.

Bayview Associates, a program of South Shore Mental Health, has licensed psychologists, social workers, and psychiatrists who can help. If you or someone you know could benefit from talking to a licensed professional, call (617) 847-1950.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GIVING TEETH HIGH PRIORITY

According to a recent survey, more than four Americans in five surveyed (83%) called their teeth a "top priority" when it comes to looking their best. The vast majority of Americans, in fact, consider teeth more important to their looks than hair, eyes, and skin. More than two fifths of those surveyed said they consider the quality of people's smiles absolutely vital to looking their best. Somewhat contradictorily, 79% of Americans just "brush to brush," without necessarily enjoying the experience. And, nearly half of those surveyed (48%) were also unaware that even slight gum bleeding from brushing is almost always a sign of gum disease. Good oral hygiene and a pleasing smile go hand in hand with regular brushing and flossing.

Are your teeth "top priority?" A complete checkup and cleaning should be scheduled at least every six months. Keeping teeth and gums healthy with contribute to overall health and enjoyment of life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where teaching you how to prevent dental disease and preserving your natural teeth for a lifetime are our primary goals. Please call 617 479 6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Nearly half of those surveyed (46%) in the survey mentioned above indicated that they would welcome a spa-like approach to dentistry.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

It has been said that successful people rarely consider work as just so much labor; they regard it in the nature of an opportunity for service and feel enjoyment in and derive pleasure from it.

Success is not a thing to be acquired; rather it is a spirit. It is not a matter of position or possessions. Success is the satisfying feeling of a life spent in a worthwhile way and a feeling of service rendered. Yes, success is a frame of mind...

"Success is in the way you walk the paths of life each day;
It's in the little things you do, and in the things you say.
Success is not in getting rich, or rising high to fame.
It's not alone in winning goals, which all men hope to claim.
Success is being big of heart, and clean and board in mind;
It's being faithful to your friends, and to the stranger, kind.
It's in the children whom you love, and all they learn from you;

Success depends on character, and every thing you do..."*

American Cancer Society Daffodil Days Goal: $3.5M

The American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days are about to blossom in southeast Massachusetts as local residents prepare to celebrate springtime while bringing the hope of conquering cancer to area patients and their families.

During the week of March 24, volunteers will deliver thousands of daffodils to area residents, working toward the American Cancer Society's goal of raising $3.5 million in New England this year.

Dollars raised during Daffodil Days help support American Cancer Society research, education, advocacy and patients services. Programs include "Road to Recovery," providing transportation to treatment for cancer patients, and "Look Good...Feel Better," teaching female cancer patients beauty techniques to enhance their appearance during treatment.

Daffodil Days funds also help maintain the American Cancer Society's cancer information web site (www.cancer.org) and toll-free information line at 1-800-ACS-2345, which is available 24 years a day.

"Daffodil Days presents a unique opportunity to enjoy beautiful, fresh flowers while making a tremendous impact on the lives of local cancer patients and their families," said Elise Kerrigan, American Cancer Society Regional Executive for Income Development. "I hope all local residents will pitch in, whether it be by purchasing daffodils or volunteering to help deliver the flowers, to help make Daffodil Days a success."

Daffodil bouquets are $6, with vases available for an additional $6 donation. Residents also have the opportunity to send a "Gift of Hope," a daffodil bouquet sent anonymously to a cancer patient or a person in need for a $15 contribution. Call your local American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345 by Friday, March 7, to place your daffodil order.

While volunteers are already working to help manage the ordering process and coordinate the distribution of flowers throughout the region, the American Cancer Society is still seeking volunteers to serve as sales coordinators in their towns or businesses, to work in the Brockton office in March to map out driving routes, or to help make deliveries.

For more information about volunteering, call Elise Kerrigan at your local American Cancer Society at 1-888-648-4880 and press 3 for ext. 243.

Fire Dept. Investigating Blaze That Damaged Four Boats In Marina

Four boats docked at Marina Bay were damaged by fire early Monday morning, but the Fire Department has not determined a cause yet due to the inclimate weather.

Two the boats sank in the bay, including the one that is suspected of causing the blaze, fire officials said. No one was injured.

The Fire Department has been unable to raise the boat because of the winter storm and icing conditions in the bay, said Quincy Deputy Fire Chief Anthony Innello.

The blaze began at approximately 3 a.m., witnesses said, and the fire department had it extinguished by 5 a.m.

Witnesses said the fire began in an unnamed wooden boat, which was unoccupied, and spread to adjacent boats, the Mystery Girl, Interlude and Suzy Too.

Innello said it might take another week before the fire department raises the wooden boat from the bay. He estimated the fire damage at $250,000.

Minor Infractions Found

City Checking For Violations In Wake Of Nightclub Fires

The city is checking bars, restaurants and nightspots for overcrowding and other building and fire code violations in the wake of the tragic West Warwick, R.I., and Chicago nightclub fires.

A team of inspectors sent out Saturday night, found some minor building and fire code violations but no overcrowding, Mayor William Phelan's office said.

The violations were noted to the owners of the establishments and follow-up checks will be made this week to ensure the violations have been corrected.

The inspection team consisted of members of the Quincy Fire and Inspectional Services departments and License Board liquor inspectors.

State building inspectors were also in Quincy on the weekend inspecting the same establishments. Quincy's Inspectional Services Department noted any violations the state inspectors discovered and said appropriate action will also be taken to rectify those violations this week.

"The city of Quincy is committed to ensuring that city establishments are safe for all patrons and that they follow the regulations of the State Building Code," Phelan said. "Recent events serve as a wake-up call to all those who would cut corners with safety.

"Inspectional Services Departments all across the country will be performing similar checks and hopefully these measures will be sufficient to prevent a reoccurrence of similar tragedies."

College Court Suit Seen As Showdown With City

By TOM HENSHAW

If you listen to Theresa Lord-Piatelli, the chair of the board of governors, and Sean Barry, the president, next week will be one of the most momentous in the 50-year history of Quincy College as its rent dispute with the School Committee moves into court.

"We hope to define once and for all the relationship between the city and the college," said Lord-Piatelli. "Until it's defined we can't negotiate."

"We have heard over and over again that the position of the city was to evict the college," said Barry. "To let that happen would destroy our college."

Thus, at the direction of the board of governors, Barry filed suit in Norfolk Superior Court Monday asking a judge to determine the legal relationship between the college and the city.

The civil complaint for a declaratory judgment will be heard Monday, March 3, at 2 p.m. by Judge John Cratsley and Lord-Piatelli said she expects him to render a decision by Wednesday.

The facts in the case are these:

The college has paid the city $217,000 annually for the use of Coddington Hall and two other buildings. This year, the School Committee more than doubled the rent to $450,000.

The college ignored the raise and made payments based on the $217,000 annual rent. The city, said Lord Piatelli, has refused the payments and ordered the college to vacate the buildings by March 2.

The complaint for a declaratory judgment asks the court to declare:

- "That the college is entitled by law to remain in the public buildings is currently occupies;
- "That the Governors and not the Quincy School Committee have the legal custody and control of those buildings, and
- "That since the college is statutorily created, independent (of the) school department of the city of

Blizzard Brings Snow, Ice Removal Costs To $600,000

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Two things have piled up this year, the snow and the costs to remove the snow.

After the President's Day storm dumped more than two feet of snow, the city's costs for removing the white stuff has jumped to $600,000, approximately twice what was earmarked for the fiscal year.

Last week's shellacking cost more than $200,000 alone, according to Mayor William Phelan.

"This was a bad storm," said Phelan. "We received slightly more snow than the Blizzard of '78, but without the flooding."

Phelan said the city projects approximately $300,000 for snow removal costs each year. It is customary for a municipality to insert a projected figure and make up the deficit in the next fiscal year.

"The DPW did a tremendous job with this storm," said Phelan. "And I would like to commend Commissioner Fink for a job well done. We had many DPW workers pulling 24-hour shifts to get the job done."

Much of the snow removal is done by outside contractors who are hired, along with their equipment, on a storm-by-storm basis. Phelan said approximately 120 pieces of equipment, including plows, sanding trucks and front-end loaders, were active during the storm last week.

Cahill Kidney Donation 'Perfect Match' For Sister

State Treasurer Tim Cahill's plan to donate a healthy kidney to his ailing sister, Alicia Watts, had been discussed since last summer and Cahill had been undergoing testing for the past three or four months.

"Doctors found him to be a perfect match," said Karen Sharma, the deputy treasurer who is Cahill's spokeswoman. First Deputy Doug Rubin will be acting treasurer while Cahill is under anesthetic.

The surgery will be done Tuesday, March 4, at Mass General Hospital with one team of surgeons working on Tim while a second team awaits with Alicia in another room to receive the organ.

Sharma said the surgical procedure will take up to four hours, after which the 44-year-old Cahill is

Reimbursement Program Temporarily Halted

'Warning Sign' Places New QHS In Question

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Questions remain over the fate of a new Quincy High School after the state temporarily halted a program that reimburses cities and towns for new school construction and renovation.

State Education Commissioner David Driscoll recently issued a moratorium on the School Building Assistance program for the remainder of the current fiscal year. As a result, no new projects will be added to the program until the moratorium ends. State officials indicated the moratorium could be extended to fiscal 2004.

Cuts or changes to the program are possible, according to Christine Lynch, administrator for the School Building Assistance program.

She said Gov. Mitt Romney and the Department of Education are searching for ways to save money during the Commonwealth's fiscal crisis.

"The budgets do not look good at this point," said Lynch. "These projects would have a big fiscal impact on the state budget." She said she did not know when the moratorium would be lifted, but "we don't want this program closed down indefinitely."

Cost-saving measures have been put into play already, she said. The Board of Education has filed legislation that would decrease the reimbursement rate to 80 percent for any new projects. Since Quincy was grandfathered in to the program, it would not be affected, she said.

It is entirely possible, however, that the governor or Legislature could propose a reduction in the reimbursement for projects already on the list or scheduled to be grandfathered in, she said. This would affect Quincy, she said.

Lynch said state education officials are looking for ways to shift more of the responsibility of building costs to cities and towns.

"There are many ideas being floated around," said Lynch. "Massachusetts has been very generous in the past, and it has been for many years. Our rates of reimbursement are really pretty high. At this point we need to be more realistic and more in line with other states."

The city wants to take advantage of the program to build a new Quincy High School. The plan also calls for the current building to be renovated and transformed into a new Central Middle School.

Some state and local officials differ on the impact of the moratorium.

Sen. Michael Morrissey said it does not bode well for Quincy's plan to build the new high school.

"This is a warning sign," said Morrissey. "If Gov. Romney decides to place a moratorium on these projects then you know they are looking for ways to save money. I'm concerned about the governor's future plans for these projects."

Given the state's bleak financial outlook, Morrissey said it is possible that the governor could propose a modification to the 90 percent rate for communities.

"Who can say what the governor will want to do. He is cutting and slashing programs. He can bring forth legislation that knocks down the percentage rate. We will be in a battle."

Morrissey said Quincy's state delegation would fight any plan to change the rate, but the state's fiscal dilemma could place other legislators in tough positions.

But Rep. Ron Mariano said the moratorium could be a blessing in disguise for Quincy.

"On the surface it looks like a setback, but in the long run this could be beneficial," said Mariano, who also sits on the Quincy School Committee. "The moratorium means that no other cities or towns can get on the list ahead of Quincy. In the meantime, we will continue with the permitting process. This does not prevent us from moving forward with our plans."

School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg agreed with Mariano, saying the city has been assured it will be able to take advantage of the Joyce amendment when the state decides to lift the moratorium.

"There's no reason to be pessimistic about this right now," said Bragg. She said the city continues to work with such agencies as the Army Corps of Engineers, the state Department of Environmental Protection and the Quincy Conservation Commission to obtain the necessary permits for the proposed Faxon Field site.

After the city completes the planning and permitting process - possibly as early as June, 2004 - it would qualify for a 90 percent reimbursement from the state.

Quincy can obtain that rate because the Parker Elementary is racially imbalanced. The city was grandfathered into the program under an amendment included in the fiscal year 2001 state budget. Sponsored by Sen. Brian Joyce, the provision allows Quincy to be placed in "Category One" for a 90 percent reimbursement for the high school project. "Category Two" projects would be eligible for reimbursements of less than 90 percent.

City officials said they have received written and verbal assurances that Quincy will be reimbursed at the 90 percent rate.

At least 46 projects are on the "Category One" list, including proposed schools in Medford, Lawrence and Springfield. Quincy will not be placed on the list until the planning and permitting process is completed.

Finance Committee Criticizes Mayor Over Appropriations, Salary Issues

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The City Council Finance Committee sent a message to Mayor William Phelan on Monday night: Respect the budget process or face appropriation cuts.

Committee members refused to fully fund two appropriation requests made by Phelan for the salaries of employees working in the Inspectional Services and Information Technology Departments.

Phelan made two requests for appropriations — $83,650 for the salaries of employees in Inspectional Services and $79,523 for the salaries of two employees in Information Technology. At issue are the salaries of a building inspector, a telephone operator, a telecommunications supervisor, and a part-time sealer of weights and measures.

The committee rebuffed Phelan in both instances, saying the mayor should have made requests for appropriations long ago. The committee knocked off $16,000 from his Inspectional Services request and another $47,000 from his Information Technology appropriation. Overall, the committee cut more than $63,000.

Finance Committee Chairman Kevin Coughlin said the mayor did not fund the positions in his fiscal 2003 budget request. But employees continue to work in those positions and receive salaries.

Last spring, the council passed resolutions asking the mayor to fund those positions, Coughlin said. But the mayor did not make the requests for appropriations until last month, more than halfway through the fiscal year.

"There are three words the mayor needs to understand, respect the process," said Coughlin.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's director of operations, said Phelan has made a "good faith" attempt at funding these positions until the end of the fiscal year. Extenuating circumstances — such as the city's tenuous fiscal situation and the setting of the tax rate — delayed the mayor's request, said Largey.

By cutting the appropriation requests the committee is not honoring a pledge it made last year to fully fund the positions, he said.

Councillor Frank McCauley criticized Phelan for not bringing the requests to the attention of the council sooner.

"We have to send a message to the mayor that we don't want him to take us for granted," said McCauley. "In this case the mayor left these positions unfunded and now he is asking us to bail him out. The mayor is going to have to deal with this. It's good practice for him."

The committee approved amendments offered by Councillors McCauley and Keenan that would allow the funding to continue until the end of the fiscal year.

But committee members asked how the mayor has been able to pay these salaries during the fiscal year without an appropriation from the city council.

"If the jobs are not funded then they should not be working there," said McCauley.

If the mayor needs an additional appropriation he can make the request at a later date, the committee said.

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton criticized the mayor's request, saying "There's a right way and a wrong way, and this is the wrong way. It's a little insulting. We have an administration that hammered the previous administration on protocol, and this administration is doing the exact same thing."

Largey countered: "I have heard you loud and clear, your point has been made." But he did not offer a guarantee that the same issue would not arise again. Committee members were concerned whether the cuts could lead to layoffs. But Largey said the mayor would make additional appropriations to avoid any layoffs.

'Pro-Active' Coughlin To Head Council FinCom

The resignation of City Councilor At-Large Tim Cahill has elevated freshman Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin into the chair of the powerful Finance Committee.

Coughlin, who described himself as a "proactive" chairman, was named this week by Council President Daniel Raymondi to succeed Cahill, who resigned from the council Jan. 22 to become state treasurer.

In other moves, Ward 6 Councilor Joe Newton replaces Cahill as chairman of the Rules Committee, and John Keenan, who was selected to fill Cahill's old at-large spot on the council, was named to head the Library Committee.

Coughlin, who is serving his first term on the council following his election in 2001, said he hopes to develop a "creative approach" to the chairmanship of the Finance Committee.

"The chairmanship gives me a little more stature," he said, "but I tend to look at it as a team effort. The committee doesn't rise and fall with any one individual chairman. I hope to be proactive, not reactive."

KEVIN COUGHLIN

Coughlin said his idea of being creative and proactive is best expressed in a letter he sent to State Sen. Michael Morrissey, dispatched before he became chairman, outlining the ways the state could help the city in its financial plight.

He suggested, among other things, that:

The state authorize communities to collect taxes on property owned by independent authorities (such as the MBTA) but leased out for commercial purposes.

The state create a new tax classification for income-producing apartment complexes so that the communities could tax them at a higher rate than single family homes.

General statutory authority be granted to cities and towns to issue bonds outside of the limit of indebtedness to realize savings in their liability for unfunded pension liabilities.

Legislation be approved raising the ceiling on parking fines from $15 to $25 and assessing parking fines for out-of-state drivers who lease or rent cars against the lessee.

He noted that current legislation filed by the Massachusetts Parking Clerks Association would leave it up to the lessee to collect the parking fine from the lessor and add a $10 surcharge.

A statute providing grants to cities and towns to lessen the burden of federal or state mandated pollution controls at waste disposal plants that expired Dec. 31 be revived.

That the state expand the bottle deposit program to include more categories and raise the deposit from 5 cents to 10 cents per bottle or can and parcel unclaimed deposits out to the communities.

Alicia Corea Retiring: Closing An Era

A fond -- and historic -- era is about to come to a close in Houghs Neck.

Rev. Alicia Corea will retire May 4 as pastor of Houghs Neck Congregational Church where she will have served 54 years.

And where she became a pioneer for women in the ministry, which before her was a for-men-only field.

Though still very active and a young 81, she feels it's time to step down.

"The church really needs young, vigorous leadership," she says. "It's time to find someone young."

Those 54 years have been historical ones:

The first woman in Quincy -- and one of the first, if not the first in the state -- to be ordained.

The first woman to become a pastor of a Quincy church.

And, for 52 of those 54 years, she, with her late husband, Rev. Peter Corea, were co-pastors -- Quincy's first husband and wife team ministry.

Formally, it was Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea and Rev. M. (for Mina) Alicia Corea.

But to their congregation, friends and community, they were fondly just plain Peter and Alicia and liked it that way.

Peter died Thanksgiving Day, 2001 at age 77 as he was just beginning his 55th year as pastor.

He was called as pastor in October, 1947 at age 23 after a couple of impressive guest preacher appearances. He was ordained in the church sanctuary in December.

Alicia and Peter were married June 1, 1946 and during their first two years at the church, she was studying at Andover Newton Theological School.

She was the only woman among the men in the class studying for the ministry. The other women were there for religious education.

Alicia graduated and was ordained May 5, 1949 in the church sanctuary and became co-pastor.

There were frowns and opposition among some clergy to her being ordained. Back then, the ministry was considered man's work and as a woman, she was intruding in a man's world.

But Alicia showed them.

The frowns soon turned to smiles and the opposition to admiration.

She doesn't think of herself as one, but with those career "firsts" she was a pioneer who blazed the trail for other women to follow.

Her final service as pastor Sunday, May 4 will coincide almost to the exact date of her ordination 54 years ago.

Alicia was born and raised in Ashland, ME, but fell deeply in love with Quincy.

"It has so much to offer," she says. "And it has so much history."

She plans to remain a Quincy resident and a member of Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

She will also remain an ordained minister and a member of the Pilgrim Association of Congregational Churches.

CO-PASTORS Peter and Alicia Corea in front of Houghs Neck Congregational Church in 1997. An era will close when she retires May 4.

She is also a member of the Social Order of Beauceant, a national Masonic organization which will meet in September in Norfolk, Va. She will be in charge of the vesper service.

She is secretary of the clergy membership Winthrop Club in Boston.

Alicia will continue to conduct worship and communion services for seniors at the Rice Eventide Home and Sawyer Towers.

She plans to get in a little traveling, including visits to her son, William, a senior geologist in Ramon, Ca. and her brother, Charles Coffin in Florida.

Alicia has a lot of accomplishments and fond memories to look back on.

When Peter and she first came to Houghs Neck Congregational, it was a summer mission. They brought it to a full-scale church with a total membership today of over 300 -- more than 150 of them active.

Together they conducted well over 5,000 worship services, thousands of weddings, baptisms -- and funerals. They volunteered many hours reaching out to people in their congregation and in the community.

And they were always there to encourage young people to go on to college and helped them go with church scholarships and personal financial aid.

And for 35 years or more, they served free, living on Peter's salary as a teacher at Boston University and Emerson College.

One of Peter's students at Emerson was Jay Leno. Some of the other teachers didn't think he would make it as a stand-up comic. But Peter did and encouraged him. Leno, of course, made it big and never forgot Peter's help.

"They have been great years," Alicia says. "Houghs Neck is a wonderful place -- a close knit community. The people are fantastic and very supportive."

A church committee will soon begin a search for Alicia's successor as pastor.

The Peter and Alicia Era will come to a close May 4, ending a combined 108 years of dedicated pastoral service.

Time moves on. But things just won't be quite the same.

Governor Romney To Address Bar Association Breakfast

Gov. Mitt Romney will address members of the Norfolk County Bar Association at their annual legislative breakfast Tuesday, March 4, at 7:30 a.m. at the Sheraton Hotel in Braintree.

"We're pleased that Governor Romney has accepted our invitation," said James Brady of Walpole, president of the Bar of Norfolk County.

"With the multitude of serious issues facing the people of Massachusetts, we anticipate a lively discussion and perhaps an indication of what the governor will do to address these issues."

The annual legislative breakfast brings together local elected officials, judges and members of the bar association to discuss common concerns.

Previous speakers have included House Speaker Thomas Finneran, Supreme Judicial Court Chief Justice Margaret Marshall and House Ways and Means Chairman John Rogers.

The Bar Association of Norfolk County, said to be on of the oldest such organizations in the country, hosts educational forums like probono legal clinics and organizes Law Day celebrations.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of Brewer's Corner in South Quincy looking west down Copeland Street from Water Street. Granite Street crosses left to right. On the left behind the utility pole across Granite Street was the grocery story owned for 30 years by Frank Brewer for whom the corner was named. He was born near Bangor in Brewer, Maine, a town settled and named after his ancestors. He retired about the time of this picture and lived for another 30 years in Quincy. The tall building in the center was the Casey Block with the Brewer's Corner Drug Store on the first floor. It was destroyed by fire in 1958, and was replaced by a building considered modern in the sixties that has been vacant for a number of years. Brewer's store site is now an apartment building. Joe Uppling's shoe store on the left has been replaced by a yellow brick building that once was a food co-operative and is now home to Mannion's family restaurant.

Calls Lack Of Sidewalk Plowing 'Unacceptable'

With the growing budget crunch, and winter's end still far from sight, it is understandable that Quincy's DPW is hard-pressed enough keeping Quincy's roads clear of snow and ice; but the complete lack of attention paid to sidewalks all over Quincy, is just plain unacceptable !

The sidewalks in many areas are extremely dangerous and completely non-negotiable. It snowed four days ago and there still is only a path approximately a foot wide running almost the length of Elm Street!

Whether the duty lies with the DPW to clear the sidewalks, or whether the duty lies with the Quincy Police Department to ensure that residents clear their sidewalks, is immaterial! Someone, anyone, please make them safe and useable!

There are many citizens of Quincy that depend solely on public transportation, including myself. Everyday, it seems I have the choice of (a) slipping and falling on icy, snowy sidewalks, or (b) walking on the cleared street and risk getting hit by a car. Neither are very good choices; and it simply is not fair that Quincy shows more consideration for the safety of those that are on the roads, rather than those on the sidewalks!

Some Coaches Don't Score In Good Sportsmanship

I have had the opportunity to watch many different high school athletic events. I am looking forward to the upcoming high school tournament games. I enjoy watching the competition and I think that teenagers who play sports develop increased confidence and maturity. I admire the commitment of the coaches and I am grateful for the time and effort they devote to their teams.

However, there are a few coaches that I wish would follow the lead of their players and take a lesson in civility. Instead of screaming at their team and cursing at the referees, how about showing the same good sportsmanship we expect from the players? It might make for a more enjoyable game.

War On Iraq Could Escalate Into Worst Holocaust

The United States and our President, George W. Bush, are extremely lucky to have a few most prominent, political leaders in the world as very devoted friends — China, South Africa, Russia, Germany and France — who could save our President from his shortsighted plan to invade Iraq.

American friends who are for peace, are not for peace because the don't believe in the Iraqi al-Qaeda connection but because they do. They also take the brilliant report on Iraq by Colin Powell very seriously to heart.

The war on Iraq could escalate into the worst holocaust in human history. And, the supreme uncertainty of the consequences of an attack on Iraq is the most powerful argument against it.

Friends indeed keep friends in need free from error!

Council Blocks Pay Raises For School Officials

This Week
1947
56 Years Ago

The City Council, in an unprecedented action, voted to instruct the city auditor not to honor the $200 salary increases granted to School Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard and Asst. Supt. Albert H. Cochrane by the School Committee.

Councillor Russell T. Bates led the opposition on the raises that would have made Dr. Gossard's salary $8,200 and Cochrane's $5,400.

But Bates failed in a bid to forestall a $500 raise for Dr. Ensio K.F. Ronka, director of City Hospital, and a $200 increase for Public Works Commissioner James P. Donovan.

Councillor Thomas F. Gilmartin succeeded in getting the Council to reject $4,500 for creation of the new school post of assistant superintendent for maintenance and business affairs.

LANDMARK BURNS

An early morning fire destroyed the landmark newsstand next to City Hall operated by blind Samuel Gray, 52, which had the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce as the official tourist information bureau for Quincy.

Gray, a familiar figure around Quincy Square for 20 years, said he hoped to be back in business in four days. He estimated damage to newspapers, magazines, cigarettes, cigars and tobacco at $600.

CUSHING AT ST. JOHN'S

Archbishop Richard J. Cushing attended all Sunday Masses at St. John's Church in the interest of raising $1 million to build an 800-student central Catholic high school on the South Shore.

QMC Receives $25,000 Gift From Florida Philanthropist

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) recently received a $25,000 gift from a Florida businessman to benefit the medical center's diagnostic imaging services.

Lawrence J. DeGeorge and his wife, Florence, contributed the gift in honor of Quincy native Simon C. Fireman, a business leader and philanthropist whose challenge grant of $1 million in 2001 established the medical center's Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center.

QMC is in the midst of a five-year capital campaign, which was launched in 2001 with a $1 million challenge grant by the Simon C. Fireman Charitable Foundation.

The campaign was initiated by Fireman to create the most comprehensive diagnostic and therapeutic radiology center on the South Shore, and his pledge was structured as a challenge to the community to inspire others to contribute to the medical center's future.

"Over the past three years, our Radiology Department has grown over 30 percent largely due to the enhancements funded by the Fireman donation," said Christine Schuster, RN, MBA, president and CEO of Quincy Medical Center. "The substantial donation by Lawrence and Florence DeGeorge will allow us to continue to serve thousands of people using the latest technology for early detection of cancers and life threatening illnesses."

For more information on the Simon C. Fireman challenge grant or to make a donation to Quincy Medical Center, contact Amy Klotz, QMC development officer, 617-376-5493 or www.quincymc.org.

Foster Grandparent Program Addresses Bernazzani School PTO

The Parent Teacher Organization of the Bernazzani Elementary School recently heard a presentation by the Action Boston Community Development (ABCD) Foster Grandparent/Family Friends Program.

Program Director Ruth Blackman and Site Coordinator Robyn Geranis spoke about the Red Cross Public Safety training their senior volunteers have attended and the future workshops the Red Cross will provide to families and children.

The PTO meeting was hosted by the Bernazzani school and Principal Richard Hutchison. Mayor William Phelan introduced the presenters.

In addition, Quincy Public Schools Coordinator for Security and Transportation Ken McPhee spoke about school security measures. Janet Powell, director of Pupil Personnel Services, spoke about the Child Identification Program (CHIP). CHIP is provided free of charge to the public and generates videotaped child interviews, fingerprints and toothprint bite impressions for parents for identification purposes.

The ABCD Foster Grandparent Program is an intergenerational program, which matches caring, compassionate senior volunteers, ages 60-90, with children for mutual companionship and support. The senior volunteers engage the children in educational activities, such as reading and writing, every week.

It was the only Foster Grandparent Program to receive a Homeland Security Grant in Massachusetts. "Helping children feel secure and ready for an emergency is the cornerstone of our work in the Homeland Security Project," Geranis said. "We're proud of our mission, and we are spreading the word at community Parent-Teacher Organizations."

Every month, schools schedule firefighters and/or police officers to come to the schools to share important public safety lessons with the children. November's theme is "Fire Safety and Stranger Safe."

"We are working with the American Red Cross to train our senior volunteers to do small public safety activities in keeping with the Quincy Public School's outline of speaker topics," Geranis said. "During the 20 hours our senior citizens volunteer each week, time will be set aside to talk about important issues, such as 'Stop, Drop & Roll,' and Red Cross worksheets will be sent home with the children. Keeping children safe is a home and classroom team effort."

Their lessons will be further reinforced through family workshops. The family workshops will be offered by the ABCD program in conjunction with the American Red Cross and the Boston Emergency Management Agency in convenient community locations. Translators for Spanish, Cantonese and Mandarin are available.

For more information, contact Ruth Blackman at (617) 357-6000 ext. 6340.

14 Graduate From Quincy YouthBuild Program

Fourteen students graduated from the Quincy YouthBuild Program Wednesday.

The graduates, ages 16-24, are:

Roberto Caballero, Michael Cathcart, Charles Cooper, Robert Darling, Dustin Dooner, Brian Gately, Ryan P. Lynch, Ryan Patrick Lynch, Noelani McPhail, Wayne Michael Myers, Abel Ricard, Jason Salmons, Alexis Santiago and Robert Watts.

The 12-month program enabled them to obtain their GEDs while learning job readiness, life, leadership and carpentry skills. The young people participated in a number of construction/rehabilitation projects at the Quincy Housing Authority's Snug Harbor facility in the Germantown neighborhood. Their efforts helped to improve the quality of life for many Quincy residents.

QHA Executive Director John G. Mather said:

"The YouthBuild Program has enabled a number of our out-of-school youth to earn their GEDs while being exposed to various construction trades. This program opens a door of opportunity for these youth, an opportunity to build a future. We are proud of their achievements and glad to be able to assist them in developing constructive futures."

The program is supported by the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board (WIB), which brought Workforce Investment Act youth funds to the city of Quincy to help low-income, at-risk youth. Funds service youth throughout the South Coastal area, but the majority live in Quincy.

Colleen Price, executive director of the local WIB, says: "This program aligns itself with the mission and goals of the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board and its Youth Council. It represents a response to the needs of the region's youth because it encompasses academic and occupational learning leading to employment."

The program has had a tremendous impact on the young people's lives.

Graduate Roberto Caballero notes: "Quincy YouthBuild is great. Especially for kids who don't have high hopes for themselves because once you are in this program you begin to think better of yourself — that you are capable and can accomplish anything. Overall, I recommend YouthBuild to anyone who wants to take hold of their life and be the best they can be."

Graduate ceremonies were held at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, 24 Broad St., Quincy. Guest speakers were Audrey Boucher, associate director, South Coastal Workforce Investment Board; Paul Berrini, executive director, South Coastal Career Development Administration; Chris Cato, regional coordinator, YouthBuild USA; and Mather.

The Quincy YouthBuild Partnership is comprised of lead agency, Mass. Job Training-Quincy, a division of Training Resources of America Incorporated, the Quincy Housing Authority, the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board and the city of Quincy.

The program is part of a nationwide movement of over 180 YouthBuild Programs designed to unleash the positive energy of unemployed young people to rebuild their communities and their own lives with a commitment to work, education, responsibility and family.

Paul J. Gallo, president of MJT-Quincy's parents company, Training Resources of America Incorporated, said: "The Quincy YouthBuild Partnership demonstrates how a community can successfully transform itself and the lives of its young people. By pooling the resources, expertise and energy of various organizations, everyone's a winner. We are proud to be a part of this effort."

Two Lost In Warwick Club Fire Remembered Here

By TOM HENSHAW

The flag at Stop & Shop headquarters in Quincy flew at half staff for Shawn Patrick Sweet today and Jay Asher of WJDA entertained thoughts of a 2-year-old Dale Latulippe.

Both Sweet, 28, assistant grocery manager at the Newport Avenue Stop & Shop Supermarket in Quincy, and Latulippe, now 46, son of a long-ago WJDA announcer, perished in the fire that swept The Station night club in West Warwick, R. I., that claimed 97 lives.

"Don Latulippe worked at WJDA for my father in the 1950s," said Asher, now the owner of the Quincy radio station. "He was close to being one of our originals. Dale was born while his father worked here. I can remember him as a 2-year-old."

The elder Latulippe still works in Quincy at WEZE, a radio station in Marina Bay, Squantum, and the younger Latulippe, who lived in Carver, was a drummer and car salesman who played with several local bands mostly in the Cape Cod area.

The last Don Latulippe saw of his son was the younger man struggling to get out of the burning club in a video tape taken by a Providence cameraman who was taking pictures for a feature story on night club safety.

He leaves his former wife, Maria, and their 7-year-old son, Dustin.

Sweet, who lived in Pembroke, attended both Massasoit Junior and Quincy College. He had been employed by Stop & Shop for 14 years, the last two as assistant grocery manager at the Newport Avenue store.

"He was a great guy who had a lot of friends in the store," said Faith Weiner, a spokeswoman for Stop & Shop. "He had a promising future at Stop & Shop. He will be sorely missed."

City Saving On Fuel Costs As Part Of Bidding Group

In order to save money on fuel prices, the City of Quincy participates in a group of South Shore cities and towns that work together through collaborative bidding efforts, according to Mayor William Phelan.

Known as the South Shore Purchasing Group, this consortium purchases heating oil and gasoline at a bulk price and saves money for each community, he said. Norfolk County took the lead on the bidding two years ago

Prior to that time, Quincy suggested that the group change the bid specifications to offer the communities a chance to lock into a fixed price if they so choose, Phelan said.

As a result, the bid for heating oil and gasoline is put out in two ways:

• Based on a variable price that fluctuates depending on the market price of fuel.

• Based on a fixed price that is locked in at the time of bid. The price remains the same throughout the course of the contract despite any market fluctuations.

This year, Quincy suggested another change in the formula used in the bid specifications, he said. Instead of using the Platts Seven-Day Oilgram average for prices, the group could use the Journal of Commerce Boston average, which is a daily average.

A majority of companies that participate in the bid for fuel in Massachusetts use the Journal of Commerce, said Phelan. This change will allow the fuel bid for the area to become more competitive, he said.

Although the variable rate was lower at the bid opening in September 2002, Phelan said Quincy opted to lock into a fixed price for the entire length of the one-year contract.

"By locking into a fixed price for the term of the fuel contact, Quincy has been able to save a considerable amount of money this year on heating oil and gasoline, despite the fact that usage has increased," said Phelan.

Phelan's office released the following prices as being locked in with the September 2002-September 2003 contract:

• #2 heating oil at $ .82/gal.

• #4 heating oil at $ .74/gal.

• Unleaded gasoline at $1.09/gal.

• Diesel fuel at $1.02/gal.

According to the February figures for the Journal of Commerce Boston, if Quincy had agreed to the variable prices then it would be paying the following prices:

• #2 heating oil at $1.29/gal.

• #4 heating oil at $1.35/gal.

• Unleaded gasoline at $1.37/gal

• Diesel fuel at $1.52/gal.

Phelan said the city has used approximately 310,620 gallons of heating oil since June, 2002. The savings amounts to approximately $ .54 per gallon, he said.

Meeting Tonight To Address Crown Colony Area Traffic Issues

A neighborhood meeting regarding traffic issues at Crown Colony Office Park and the intersection of Centre St. and Crown Colony Drive will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy. Interested parties are encouraged to attend.

Planned by Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly, the meeting will address the city's plans to widen Centre St. near the intersection of Crown Colony Drive.

Connolly said the new Home Depot has pledged to pay the complete cost of the project, which could begin as early as the spring and last for approximately three months.

City of Quincy engineers and representatives from Home Depot are expected to attend the meeting to answer questions from residents.

"The intersection of Centre Street and Crown Colony Drive has long been a major traffic problem, as drivers hoping to patronize a local business near the intersection clog the northbound lane," said Connolly.

Also, the meeting will tackle a proposal to construct new exit ramps at the Crown Colony Office Park.

Connolly said no state money has been committed to fund the project, but several businesses — including the Flatley Company, Home Depot and the Crown Colony Owners Association — have raised $2 million in private funds to hire architects and engineers for the $19 million plan, he said.

"I am optimistic that the state will authorize funding for this project," said Connolly.

He said the current design and permitting process could last until mid-2004. After the bidding process is complete the construction work could take up to two and a half years to finish, he said.

City Checking For Violations In Wake Of Nightclub Fires

(Cont'd From Page 1)

All places of assembly including bars, restaurants and nightclubs are required to be inspected annually under the Massachusetts State Building Code 780, CMR 106, Phelan noted. These inspections include occupancy load, egress doors, lighted exit signs, emergency lighting, fire extinguishers and flammable wall decorations.

The Inspectional Services Department is also in the process of reviewing all inspection records to ensure the information contained in them is current and accurate.

Notices and applications for inspection will be mailed this week to establishments that are overdue for inspections. Any establishments that do not comply with these regulations will face the possibility of revocation of their occupancy permit and fines of up to $300 per day for each day of the violation.

The more serious violations are subject to criminal complaints in Quincy District Court and punishable by further fines and imprisonment of up to one year per violation.

Sister Alicia, 45, is suffering from diabetes, said Sharma, and her kidneys are failing. She is not under dialysis, she added.

Sharma declined to say where Alicia Cahill Watts lives, only that her home is in the metropolitan Boston area.

"We're not happy that someone leaked the story to WBZ-TV," said Sharma. The station was on the air with it Monday.

Jacky Chong Accepted To NE Institute of Technology

Quincy student Jacky Chong has been accepted to the New England Institute of Technology in Warwick, R.I.

SHOWN WITH NEW excavator of the Quincy-based New England Excavation and Demolition (NEED) company are Richard Mason, Quincy 2000 specialist; Mark Bogan, NEED; Mayor William Phelan, James McGuinness, NEED; Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly and Quincy 2000 Chairman James Mullaney.

Quincy 2000 Provides Start-Up Loan For New Excavation-Demo Firm

Quincy 2000, the city's non-profit public-private partnership for economic development, has made a $65,000 start-up loan for a new Quincy demolition contracting company.

Richard A. Mason, Quincy 2000 economic development specialist, said the recipient is New England Excavation and Demolition, LLC (NEED), newly organized by Mark Bogan and James McGuinness at 59 Federal Ave., South Quincy.

The 65,000 loan is from Community Development Block Grant funds.

"This is a very exciting opportunity for Quincy 2000," Mason said. "These men have a history of creating jobs for Quincy residents and we expect that they will continue to do so in this new business."

Quincy 2000 utilizes city CDBG funds in its Job Creation Loan Program to provide below market interest rate loans to new or existing Quincy businesses which have strong prospects for job creation or are micro-enterprises. Quincy 2000 is unique in offering financing for start-up businesses and those who have been declined by banks.

"Starting a new company, we're lucky to be in Quincy with access to Quincy 2000, their technical expertise, and their loan programs," Bogan said. "They made this loan happen quickly and painlessly."

Bogan is the "B" in Quincy's 7-year-old D&B Tree Service, Inc. His partner in NEED, McGuinness, has over 15 years of heavy equipment experience and recently shut down his own company to join Bogan.

Eleven banks with Quincy locations support Quincy 2000's lending program. Member banks are Abington Savings, Century Bank, Citizens Bank, Colonial Federal, Eastern Bank, Fleet Bank, Rockland Trust, South Shore Co-operative, South Shore Savings, Sovereign and Bank of Canton.

Consistent with Quincy 2000 requirements for start-up businesses, NEED presented a detailed business plan evidencing the strong market for demolition contracting and the expertise of the principals in this work.

The lack of buildable land in Greater Boston creates a need for re-use of existing buildings, requiring interior demolition, or the clearing away of existing structures to make way for new buildings.

Joseph Keegan To Kick Off Ward 1 Campaign

Joseph Keegan of Moreland Road will formally announce his candidacy for Ward 1 City Councillor at a kickoff fund-raiser tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 9 at the Quincy Yacht Club, Sea Street, Houghs Neck.

Keegan, a Quincy police officer, is a 1989 graduate of North Quincy High School and a 1997 graduate of Curry College. He is currently in his last semester at the New England School of Law, where he serves as a staff member for the Law Journal and was awarded with the Mark S. Charbonnier Scholarship.

A veteran of the U.S. Army/U.S. Army Reserve, Keegan was awarded the Combat Infantry Badge while participating as an infantryman in the liberation of Kuwait during Desert Storm, as well as Operation Desert Shield, in the XVIII Airborne Corps.

Keegan has been a police officer for nine years, two and a half with the MBTA and six and a half with the city of Quincy. Recently, he was awarded a commendation from the City Council "for bravery and heroism exhibited during the rescue of a woman from the frigid waters of Quincy Bay near Black's Creek."

Keegan is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Houghs Neck Legion Post and the Merrymount Neighborhood Association. He volunteered for two years as a coach for the Quincy High School hockey team.

Tickets for the fund-raiser are $15 and may be purchased at the door.

Taking part in the "Cook-Off" was chef Anthony Gill, chef from Top of the Hub in Boston who cooked his famous scallops and spinach risotto.

Chef Kurt Von Kahle from Thermadore delighted the crowd with citrus marinade chicken and roasted veg followed by a chocolate cake cooked on extra low simmer on the gas stovetop.

ALSO TAKING PART in the recent "Cook Off" at Hancock TV and Appliance, 115 Franklin St., Quincy, were Joyce Humphrey of Miele and her husband, Barry Humphey, both of Hingham. Here they serve up Asian chicken teriyaki, Peking raviolis and spicy beef with steamed asparagus using the new electric barbecue from Miele and steam oven.

Quincy Officer Participating In New Destroyer Crew Swap

Navy Lt. Patrick J. Moakley of Quincy is participating in the first of three experimental crew swaps involving the destroyer USS Fletcher in Perth, Australia.

The swap began in late January when the crew of the recently decommissioned destroyer USS Kinkaid flew from their homeport in San Diego to relieve the crew of the Fletcher.

Moakley, the 29-year-old son of Walter and Dawn Satkus of Quincy, left his duties as the assistant damage control officer on the Fletcher.

"I helped coordinate all the damage control and fire fighting efforts," said Moakley.

The Navy is using the three crew, one vessel experiment to maximize the deployment of naval assets. Moakley feels that the crew swap will help the Navy stay forward deployed.

"It allows a ship to stay on station longer allowing us to continue our operations," Moakley said.

The crew of the destroyer Oldendorf will replace the new crew later this year. Because this program is still new, there were a few challenges that Moakley had to overcome.

"It was a challenge to prepare a 22-year-old ship for 18 months of continuous operations, but we overcame it by working hard," he said.

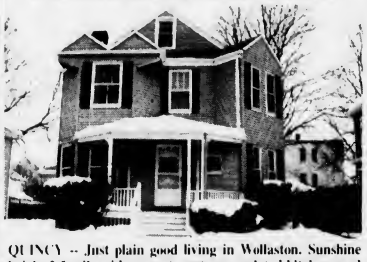
Important Safety Tips For Winter Storm Recovery

In the wake of recent heavy snow storms, the Propane Gas Association of New England (PGANE) recommends seven safety tips for local consumers. An increasing number of New Englanders depend on propane gas to heat their homes and water, cook their meals, and fuel their business equipment and buildings.

"With snow accumulation well in excess of a foot in most areas, it is important that propane users are aware of a few basic steps they should take to ensure a safe delivery and efficient user of their propane supplies," said Bill Ermer, PGANE president.



All residential and business propane users should review and implement these simple measures:

- As soon as practical, provide a clear pathway so your propane supplier can easily refill the propane tank. Driveways should also be kept accessible for propane delivery vehicles.
- Use snow stakes to indicate the location of the container.
- Just like sidewalks, propane equipment needs to be cleared of snow after a storm. If a propane tank is buried under several feet of snow, use a broom and carefully clear the snow off the tank or around any exposed piping, regulator, gauges and tubing.
- Heavy icicles or large accumulations of snow falling from eaves can severely damage regulators, piping, tubing, relief valves, etc. Do not shovel snow from the roof of the garage or house onto exposed piping around the propane regulator. Be sure to avoid shoveling snow onto any piping or meters connected to the propane tank itself.
- Check the regulator vents on the propane system to be sure they are free of condensation, which, if frozen, could cause a malfunction. If a regulator vent is clogged with ice or snow, contact your local propane supplier immediately.
- Check all gas intake and exhaust vents for the clothes dryer, furnace and water heater to be sure they are clear of snow or ice. A four-foot area should be kept clear around the vents to prevent high winds from funneling in.
- In the unlikely event you smell the "rotten egg" odor of gas, immediately extinguish all smoking materials and open flames. Exit the building or area immediately. Do not touch electrical switches, light matches or use the phone. Turn off the gas valve on the outside tank, meter or service area. Telephone your propane supplier and/or the fire department from a neighbor's phone. Do not re-enter until the building has been inspected.

Finally, during the busy winter season, propane providers are asking customers to be patient with their deliveries. Often, slick roads and hazardous driving conditions can cause unavoidable delays. "Customer system safety and consumer comfort is the propane marketer's primary business purpose, and every delivery is treated as a priority," Ermer said.

For more information on safety, contact your local propane supplier or visit the PGANE website at www.pgane.org.

CENTRAL REAL ESTATE

IMPROVING CONDITIONS

If you are thinking about making home improvements with an eye toward increasing home value, bear in mid that few projects pay for themselves. Even renovated kitchens and bathrooms, considered to be the most profitable of improvements, generally return only 50%-75% at sale. And, that is only if you sell within a year of making the improvement. Thus, it pays to bear in mind that the projects should take priority are those that protect the home from deterioration and damage, such as roof replacement. Such projects help preserve the property's value. Beyond that, renovations that add square footage are most likely to add value to your home as long as they bring the house up to neighborhood standards.

Home improvement projects can make your life more pleasant and also add value to your home. Key projects such as roof replacement are key to preserving a home's value. When a member of CENTRAL REAL ESTATE meets with potential sellers, he or she can advise them on how to make strategic home improvement investments. Whether you're interested in buying or selling, call us at (617) 328-1312 to arrange a consultation. We are conveniently located or at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: Homeowners get the most out of their home improvement dollars, in terms of resale value, if they keep up with the Joneses, not surpass them.

Quincy Community Action Homebuyer Workshop March 22

Request To Be Heard March 14

Cashman Files Injunction To Block Sale of Shipyard, Machinery

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

A U.S. District Court judge will hear arguments on March 14 about whether the sale of the shipyard should be put off and awarded to the runner-up bidder.

Jay Cashman, the second highest bidder in the shipyard auction, filed suit last week against the Maritime Administration and Dan Quirk, the highest bidder at auction. At a hearing last week, Judge Douglas P. Woodlock set the March 14 date for the parties to file briefs.

The sale had been scheduled to close on March 17, 60 days after Quirk bought the yard for $9 million.

Cashman filed a similar order to stop the sale of the shipyard equipment, which was awarded to Perfection Machinery for $3 million. That motion will be heard March 14 also.

Attorney Howard Cooper, representing Cashman, said they are asking the court to expedite the case and resolve it within 90 days. If the court approves the injunctions beyond March 17, then the case would be resolved no later than mid-May.

Cashman's suit argues that the Maritime Administration (MARAD) abused its discretion by failing to sell the shipyard to a buyer who would promote a maritime use for it. By awarding the shipyard to Quirk, MARAD sold the yard to the highest bidder, but not to the "highest qualified" bidder, according to Cashman.

Quirk "has no intention of using the property for a maritime use," said Cashman.

Cashman's motion asks the court to overturn the sale of the yard and machinery and award it to him. The action prevents MARAD from "destroying" the shipyard, the motion argued.

In addition, Cashman charges that MARAD required certain bidders to open up their plans to public scrutiny, leading them to believe that proposed uses of the land would be an important factor in the bidding process. Quirk did not propose a maritime use and his bid was not subject to public scrutiny, Cashman maintains.

In his request for an injunction, Cashman said he bid on the equipment with the understanding that the winning bidder would have to remove it from the premises promptly.

"However, immediately prior to the auction, MARAD announced a dramatic change to the rules which significantly affected the amount one might bid, including an announcement that the winning bidder could abandon and leave the equipment on the property," the motion said.

Cashman maintains this was a significant change because the costs of disassembling and moving the equipment were factored in to his bid.

WINTER! CAR CARE

Five Tips For Getting Out of Car Trouble

(NU) — Do you know what to do when your car sputters and finally dies?

This year AAA expects to respond to approximately 28 million calls for road service from a membership of more than 45 million car owners. In addition, another 40 million calls for road service will be made this year by other car owners, AAA estimates.

To educate motorists on steps to take when car trouble occurs, a select group of tow truck operators recognized by AAA as "Highway Heroes" offers these tips:

- Know before you go. Make sure your vehicle is inspected and maintained by a qualified technician at least annually and before any long-distance trip.
- Stay alert to your location at all times. The ability to accurately describe your vehicle's location, including the name or number of the road and an easily recognized landmark, is one of the keys to speedy rescue and recovery.
- Beware of hazards to yourself and other drivers. Turn on your vehicle's flashing emergency lights and get your vehicle as far off the road as safety permits. Watch out for oncoming traffic and use flares or reflecting emergency triangles to alert other drivers to the presence of your vehicle.
- Know how to summon help safely. A cellular telephone is a necessity for every motorist. The ability to quickly contact your motor club, law enforcement authorities or emergency medical personnel is critical to staying secure on the roadway.
- Remain calm and keep a clear head. The overwhelming majority of all road service situations are easily handled by professional drivers with the right equipment. AAA's tow truck operators pride themselves on providing quick and reliable member services.

AAA's Highway Heroes for 2002 are: John Tannola, owner of Sunshine Automotive, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Carson Thompson, owner of Bluewater Towing in Sarnia, Ontario; Jeff Critchlow, owner of Jeff Critchlow Auto Body in Glenshaw, Pa.; Harry Baddon and Susan Katsumoto, owners of A & B Towing in Costa Mesa, Calif.; and Kevin Davis, owner of David Towing, Hyannis, Mass.

Drive Revived

(NAPS) - Auto travel has increased in recent years and more people on the roads, traveling greater distances, means an increased risk of sleep-related crashes.

Sleepiness causes more than 100,000 automobile crashes each years, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports, resulting in more than 1,500 fatalities and $12.5 billion in economic costs.

Drive Revived, a public awareness campaign by Baymont Inns & Suites, is designed to help all travelers better understand and prevent fall-asleep crashes. Here are some Drive Revived tips:

- Plan ahead for sufficient, good-quality sleep;
- Avoid alcohol, even in small amounts, when already tired;
- Drive with another person awake in the vehicle;
- Avoid driving between midnight and 6 a.m.;
- Take frequent breaks and 15- to 20-minute naps as needed.
- Consume caffeine equivalent to two cups of coffee.

Gas Prices Up Another 4 Cents, Says AAA

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts jumped another 4 cents per gallon last week and are now an average of 15 cents per gallon higher than just one month ago, according to AAA Southern New England.

The Feb. 17 survey of prices in Massachusetts conducted by AAA found self serve, regular unleaded averaging $1.66 per gallon, 4 cents more than last week, 15 cents higher than four weeks ago, and 53 cents per gallon higher than the 1.13 per gallon found a year ago at this time.

This continuing sharp increase is due mostly to industry fear and speculation concerning war with Iraq and the possibility of another terrorist strike on the United States. Although fuel prices continue to be negatively affected nationwide by the loss of oil and gasoline shipments from Venezuela, as well as recent cold weather across the United States, nothing fully justifies this latest round of price increases.

Consumers are urged to shop aggressively for the best price on gasoline, look for ways to limit their gasoline consumption and keep their vehicles properly maintained to increase fuel economy, as methods of cushioning family budgets.

Ten Questions To Ask For Safe Glass Installation

1. Does the installer account for weather conditions? – Technicians should take temperature and humidity reading before every installation. Most adhesives require humid conditions above 40 degrees to cure properly. If outdoor conditions are too dry or too cold, installers should either move to a controlled indoor environment or use a special adhesive formulated for drier and colder conditions.

2. Replacement or Repair? – Installers and repair shops should be honest and inform consumers whether their windshield needs repairing or replacing. Consumers should consider getting a second opinion if they are not comfortable with the initial recommendation.

3. Do they use the right adhesives? – Only urethane adhesives are good enough for the job. Watch out – an installer might use a urethane system, but use an inferior butyl tape to hold the windshield in place.

4. Do they wear gloves? – Oil and dirt from an installer's hands can weaken the bond.

5. Do they use cleaning fluid? – Technicians should clean the bonding surface with an approved cleaner prior to installation. Some techs use only a rag or do nothing at all.

6. Do they apply primer? – Primer allows the adhesive to harden and seal properly.

7. Do they use proper techniques? - Untrained installers might "close out," or fail to remove all the residue from the old adhesive, applying the new adhesive on top. The proper method is "full cutting," or removing as much of the original adhesive residue as possible. Most major car manufacturers support and endorse the full cut method; some flatly reject close cutting.

8. Do they remove the cowl? – Untrained technicians might not remove the panel between the hood and the windshield, called the cowl, a mistake that can lead to an impure bond.

9. Do they apply adhesive to corroded metal? - Applying adhesive to corroded metal creates a weak bond.

10. Do they employ trained technicians? – Anyone can walk in off the street to become an auto glass installer. For your safety, ensure that your technician is trained and certified by the National Glass Association.

Presidents Face Norwood

State Hockey Tourney

The Quincy High School hockey team Sunday earned the No. 6 seed in the Division 1 state tournament.

The Presidents (11-6-1 overall) — who have not played in a month — will face off against No. 11 Norwood (10-8-2) Saturday afternoon at 1 at the University of Massachusetts at Boston in the first round.

Last year, Quincy ousted Norwood with a 4-1 victory in the first round of the tournament.

The winner will play the winner of the Framingham-Barnstable game in the quarterfinals.

Out of the four Atlantic Coast League teams that qualified, Quincy is the only playing in the Division 1 bracket. The other three teams are in Division 2.

Red Raiders Vs. B-R

The North Quincy High School hockey team Sunday secured the 12th seed in the Division 1 state tournament.

The Red Raiders (9-7-4 overall) will take on No. 5 Bridgewater-Raynham (11-4-5) Saturday afternoon at 3:20 at the University of Massachusetts at Boston in the first round.

The two schools battled to stalemates in the regular season, a 3-3 tie on Jan. 8 in Quincy and a 1-1 draw on Feb. 1 at B-R.

North Quincy is one of four Old Colony League teams that qualified for the Division 1 tournament. A fifth team, Plymouth South, netted the final spot in the Division 2 bracket.

Quincy-Walpole Opener

Boys' Basketball Tourney

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' basketball team last Friday landed the 11th seed in the Division 2 state tournament.

The Presidents (12-8 overall) — who returned to the tourney for the first time in six years — traveled to No. 6 Walpole (16-4) Tuesday night for the first round.

The winner will play the winner of the Plymouth North-Dartmouth game tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 in the quarterfinals.

Quincy, one of four Atlantic Coast League teams to qualify, closed its regular season last week with its annual tournament sponsored by Central Real Estate.

The Presidents knocked out Hingham, 62-59, in the first game last Wednesday and met Stoughton, which defeated Milton, the following night for the championship.

Unfortunately, the Presidents could not defend their title as they shot a frigid 25 percent in a 52-40 setback.

"We didn't shoot well and our shot selection wasn't great," said head coach John Franceschini after the game. "Stoughton extended their defense and that forced us to take certain shots."

Although it lost, Quincy received a preview of what the competition will be like in the tournament. Stoughton (14-6) drew the No. 9 seed in the Division 2 tournament.

"You don't want to lose but it's a game that gives you a real good look of the better teams in the tournament," Franceschini said.

Quincy had no answer for Stoughton junior workhorse Roland Millien, who scorched the Presidents with 19 points and 18 rebounds — and one thunderous fast-break dunk off a Quincy turnover.

"I don't think we did a good enough job handling him," Franceschini said. "He's a big kid and he's very physical. He must have had at least 12 to 15 offensive rebounds."

The Black Knights began to take control of the game midway through the first half. And after consecutive fast-break layups by senior Kendericks Bailey, they held a 22-12 lead when Quincy called a timeout with 4:43 left.

The Presidents regrouped and closed the half with an 8-0 run to make it 22-20. Seniors Shawn Munchbach and Kevin O'Connell had four points apiece during the spurt.

In the second half, Quincy found itself in a precarious situation when 6-foot-3 center Anthony Boyle picked up his fourth foul about two minutes in and took a seat on the bench.

Although O'Connell scored the first points of the half with a 3-pointer to give Quincy a 23-22 lead, Stoughton responded with a 10-4 run as it punished Quincy on the glass with Boyle out of the game.

Trailing 38-29 with about 8:30 left, O'Connell — the Atlantic Coast League MVP — came up huge on both ends of the court. After knocking down a jumper, he took a hard charge down the other end of the court. Wincing with a little pain, he slowly made it up the other end and proceeded to drill a 3-pointer to cut the deficit to 38-34 with 7:48 left to play.

Stoughton, however, continued to overpower Quincy inside and outscored the Presidents, 14-6, to finish the game. Boyle eventually fouled out with about four minutes left in the game.

North Quincy Eyes Win Over Braintree

Girls' Basketball Tourney

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team last Friday drew the 11th seed in the Division 1 state tournament.

The Red Raiders (11-7 overall) — one of four Old Colony League teams to qualify — traveled to No. 6 Braintree (13-5) Tuesday night for the first round.

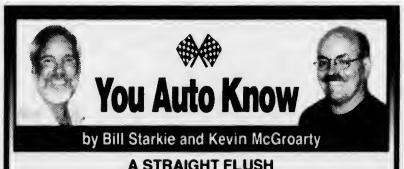
Braintree swept North Quincy in the regular season, winning 44-31 on Dec. 30 and 60-37 on Feb. 3.

The winner plays the winner of the Durfee-Netwon North game tonight (Thursday) at 7 in the quarterfinals.

Quincy Visits Hingham In First Round Game

The Quincy High School girls' basketball team last Friday earned the 11th seed in the Division 2 state tournament.

The Presidents (14-6 overall) — who made the tourney for the first time in 20 years — headed to No. 6 Hingham (13-4) last night (Wednesday) at 6 for the first round.



The winner will play the winner of the Apponequet-O'Bryant game tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 in the quarterfinals.

Quincy — one of three Atlantic Coast League teams to qualify for the tournament — placed three players on the league all-star team: juniors Bonnie Hirtle and Sarah Shea and sophomore Alysia DiMuzio.

A STRAIGHT FLUSH

There are several processes going on in a vehicle's cooling system that conspire to degrade its performance. There are rust and corrosion that result from the weak acids that form from the breakdown of the antifreeze. There are the antifreeze formulations with phosphate and silicate additives that inhibit pitting and corrosion in the aluminum components of newer engines; however, these additives can fall out of the solution and form abrasive, gel-like mixtures. As a consequence, scales and deposits form inside the engine. And along with the greater use of aluminum components, there is the problem of electrolysis (electrolytic metal corrosion) that causes gradual erosion. To circumvent these potential problems, conventional coolant should be flushed and replaced every two years.

Regularly scheduled maintenance such as a cooling system flush and refill can greatly extend the life of your car, van, or truck's engine. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system in your vehicle. Our friendly, professional, ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. Give us a try. We'll earn your trust!

HINT: Antifreeze's key ingredient, glycol, works best in a 50/50 mixture with water (preferably distilled).

Quincy Mites Runner-Up In 30th Annual International Competition

Quincy Pee Wees Win Kiwanis Club Hockey Tournament

The Quincy Pee Wee and Mite hockey teams turned in spectacular performances in last week's 30th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament at Quincy Youth Arena.

The Pee Wees (5-0) breezed through the tourney and captured the championship Sunday afternoon with a thrilling 2-1 overtime victory over the New Jersey Colonials, while the Mites (3-1-1) reached the final game where they were edged by New Jersey, 4-3.

In the other two divisions, Andover knocked off the South Shore Seahawks, 6-5, for the Bantam title and Ontario (Calif.) blanked Weymouth, 6-0, to wear the Squirt crown.

The "A" tournament — considered one of the most prestigious youth hockey events in the Northeast — featured 26 teams and had a true international flavor as Bantam teams from Austria and Berwick, Nova Scotia, participated.

Teams from California, Maine, Pennsylvania and New Jersey also competed in the tourney, joining squads from Andover, Hingham, Hyde Park, Pembroke, Brookline, Weymouth, Brockton, Braintree and the greater South Shore-Boston area.

Proceeds from the weekend event will benefit Quincy Kiwanis youth charities including needy and underprivileged children in the local area.

Here's a recap of the Quincy teams in all four divisions:

BANTAMS

Quincy reached the semifinals where it suffered a 4-3 heartbreaker to the Seahawks. The Seahawks got on the board first when Mike Brown scored with an assist from Jay Milkiewicz. Quincy's Andrew Donovan evened the score at 9:13 of the opening frame.

In the second, Quincy grabbed a 2-1 lead when Donovan scored with Joe Ferris assisting less than a minute into the period. The Seahawks netted the equalizer 29 seconds later with a goal by Tim McGrath. At 3:58, Brian Sullivan scored with Brendan Mulcahy assisting to put Quincy back on top, 3-2.

In the third, the Seahawks scored two goals over the final six minutes, both by John Hefferman, to pull out the win.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 3-3 tie to Hingham, followed by a 4-0 loss to Andover before it rebounded with a 9-1 victory over Nova Scotia.

Also skating for Quincy were: Pat Devlin, Mike Gillespie, Mike Maxey, Bryan Gilligan, Jimmy Fitzpatrick, Kevin Bossart, Jonathan Conso, Johnny McInnis, Kenny Patey, Pat Dunn, Chris Rooney, Frankie Sorrento and Mike Leone.

PEE WEES

In the championship game, Matt Furey staked Quincy to a 1-0 lead with Sean Dunn assisting at 3:43 of the middle stanza. The score held up until late in the third period when New Jersey's James Bellush potted the equalizer with only 15 seconds left in the game.

After a scoreless first overtime, Zach Deegan provided the heroics when he pocketed the game-winner with 3:01 left in the second OT.

In the semifinal, Quincy crushed the Seahawks, 11-4, as Andrew Bythrow recorded a hat trick to go along with an assist. Dunn (3 assists) and Furey (assist) each scored a pair of goals. Doug Haskins (assist), Chris Brown (assist), Billy Kiley and Deegan also scored. Joseph Vialpando collected a pair of assists.

Quincy kicked off the tourney with a 4-1 win over New Jersey and then defeated Reading, Pa., 6-3, and shut out Brockton, 6-0.

Also skating for Quincy were: Stephen Barresi, Casey Conley, Jeff Giordani, Michael Grant, Michael Le Bel, Scott Richardson, John Sessions, Scott Vallatini and Teddy Walsh.

SQUIRTS

Quincy made the semifinals but could not defeat Weymouth two times in a row as it fell, 5-4. Weymouth struck first 13 seconds into the opening period but Quincy evened the score when Pat White scored less than a minute later.

About two minutes later, Weymouth went back on top with a goal by Patrick O'Keefe. At 5:16, Quincy's Trevor Richardson took a pass from Steve Cahalan and beat the Weymouth goalie to tie the game at 2. Weymouth scored at 8:56 to grab a 3-2 lead.

In the second, all the action took place late in the period. With 1:22 left, Quincy's Derek Murphy scored unassisted to knot the game a 3. Weymouth, though, scored with 37 ticks left to regain the lead. But Murphy netted a huge goal with only eight seconds remaining to once again tie the game.

In the third, it appeared the game was heading for overtime before Weymouth's Tyler Piacentini tallied the game-winner with 28 seconds left.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 5-0 loss to Ontario (Calif.) before rebounding with a 5-2 victory over Parkway and a 7-4 triumph over Weymouth.

Also skating for Quincy were: Matt Brundige, Daniel Gibbons, Kevin Keith, Malcolm Kelly, Justin Lawless, Andrew McCarthy,

Eventful Week For Visiting Austrian, Nova Scotia Teams

It was an eventful week for the kids on the Austrian and Nova Scotia bantam teams that participated in the 30th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament.

Although they didn't reach Sunday's championship game, they experienced more than just hockey in their nine-day visit to the Unites States.

"I think it is very great for the boys because they get a chance to play hockey in America and they get to see their culture," said Austrian Bantam head coach Mario Oschgan, who participated in the tourney two years ago with a pee wee team.

"We have a good relationship with (Tournament Chairman) Michelle (Stenberg) in that we can come to Boston."

Last Thursday afternoon, both teams strolled over to City Hall to meet Mayor William Phelan and pose for pictures. Earlier in the day, the teams played to a 2-2 draw at Quincy Youth Arena.

Two days after their arrival, the international teams were greeted with the Presidents Day Storm. For the Austrians, it was no big deal. "We have a lot of snow in Austria, too, but not the wind," Oschgan said.

Although the blizzard slowed down the city for a couple of days, both teams still found time to take in many of the tourist attractions in Quincy and Boston. Among them were the JFK Museum, the New England Aquarium, the IMAX theatre, shopping malls and a Boston College-Northeastern University hockey game at Conte Forum.

Christopher Lessiak, 16, a defenseman on the Austrian team, said he liked the IMAX theatre the most. "It's amazing. They have one in the capital city, Vienna."

The 20 kids from Austria and the 16 kids from Nova Scotia stayed with Quincy families during their visit.

Nisa Baker, whose son, Christopher, played on the Quincy Mite team, housed two Austrians, Daniel Koberl and Artiom Konovalov. She said they managed to overcome the language barrier.

"It's been a little bit tough but we're able to communicate," she said last Thursday. "They understand some English. It's been very entertaining. They're good kids, polite and respectful. It's an experience for us, too."

Baker also owns the Malai restaurant in Randolph and said the guests loved the tai cuisine.

As for the tournament, both teams struggled as Austria went 1-2-1 and Nova Scotia finished 0-3-1.

The Austrians said there's difference between hockey in America and Austria. Christoph Schmerlaib, 15, a center, described the American game as "a lot harder and faster."

Oschgan said: "There's a big difference. We don't have a lot of kids that play hockey and we only practice two times a week and play 14 games a season."

MIKE MAXEY controls the puck with a Berwick, Nova Scotia, player chasing him in last Saturday's 9-1 win.

American Cancer Society Encourages Regular Screenings

Colon Cancer Testing Saves Lives -- But Still Far Underused

Colorectal cancer (commonly referred to as colon cancer) can be easily prevented, but it remains the second leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States.

In Massachusetts, 3,700 residents will be diagnosed with colon cancer this year, and 1,400 will die. Yet according to the American Cancer Society, the nation's leading voluntary health organization, colon cancer doesn't have to be as deadly.

While many Americans resist the idea of getting screened for the disease, reliable testing options currently exist to find and remove precancerous colon polyps before they develop into a serious health problem -- if only people would use them.

"Colon cancer testing can actually prevent the disease from occurring," said Mary A. Simmonds, M.D., FA, CP, national volunteer president of the American Cancer Society. "We could see a huge improvement in colon cancer prevention and survival if all people 50 and older, plus those at increased risk, would talk with their doctors and get tested."

Preventing colon cancer altogether through testing is the ideal outcome, but early detection of the disease also yields important health benefits. Nationally, people whose colon cancers are found at an early stage through testing have five-year survival rates of 90 percent. However, only 37 percent of colon cancers are detected in the earliest stages. Of those whose cancers are found at late stage, the five-year survival rate is less than 10 percent.

"With colon cancer testing, we can see parallels with where Pap testing was 50 years ago," said Durado D. Brooks, MD, MPH, director of colon cancer programs at the American Cancer Society's National Home Office. "Once Pap testing became widely discussed and implemented, the results in preventing cervical cancers were evident. Likewise, we could expect the same success with colon cancer if doctors openly discuss the subject with their patients and urge them to get tested."

To boost colon cancer testing rates and eliminate the taboo associated with the disease, the American Cancer Society is extending its successful colon cancer awareness campaign developed with the Advertising Council. The ads feature Polyp Man[TM] - a pesky character in a conspicuous red suit who grabs viewers' attention to get across the simple truth: Colon cancer: Get the Test. Get the polyp. Get the cure.

In time for National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month in March, new ads were developed to reach African Americans and Hispanic/Latino Americans -- two population groups who especially need to hear the lifesaving message. African Americans have the highest death rate from colon cancer of any racial or ethnic group in the US. And Hispanics/Latinos often face cultural and language barriers to health information.

Both men and women are at risk for colon cancer. Personal risk varies, so your doctor can help you make informed decisions about when to begin testing and the most appropriate testing method for you. Factors associated with increased risk for colon cancer, as well as information on prevention, early detection, and treatment of the disease, can be found on the American Cancer Society's Web site at www.cancer.org or by calling the Society's Cancer Information Center at 1-800-ACS-2345.

The ACS is the nationwide community-based voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives, and diminishing suffering from cancer, through research, education, advocacy, and service.

'Don't Weigh Your Self-Esteem' Theme During Eating Disorder Awareness Week

"Don't' Weigh Your Self-Esteem" is the theme of the South Shore Eating Disorder Collaborative during Eating Disorder Awareness Week.

The South Shore Eating Disorder Collaborative is helping to spread awareness during Eating Disorder Awareness Week (Feb. 23-March 3) with a "Don't Weigh Your Self-Esteem" sticker project. With the help of the Quincy coffee shop Java Express, "Fine Coffees and Baked Goods," owned by Mike and Shawn Rossman, each cup of coffee bought will include on its sleeve the words "Don't Weigh Your Self-Esteem" and a contact number to call for information, education, and referrals.

"In terms of prevention, I'm hoping that we can get out information that gives people a positive message about size difference and body acceptance," said Christine Shruhan, LMHC, a member of SSEDC who is in private practice in Quincy.

The plight of eating disorder awareness and prevention is a year-round task. However, Eating Disorder Awareness Week underscores this very serious and painful reality in society.

When asked, one recovered anorexic and bulimic had this to say on the importance of Eating Disorder Awareness Week. "Eating disorders are truly an epidemic now in our society. It is a tragic truth that millions of women have turned to food and their bodies as a means of trying to express their pain or gauge their value as a person.

"If anything, I hope that people can take this opportunity to educate themselves and for those who are struggling with an eating disorder that they will reach out for the help they deserve. Recovery is possible and there are people and organizations out there to help."

Dr. Elayne Daniels, another member of SSEDC, said, "Eating disorders are highly treatable. The sooner someone gets professional help from qualified clinicians, the better the prognosis."

SSEDC, founded in 1998 by Kathleen Burns Kingsbury LMHC, consists of clinicians in private practice on the South Shore who specialize in the field of eating disorders and are dedicated to providing high quality treatment and prevention of anorexia, bulimia and binge eating disorders.

The members of SSEDC are Kathleen Burns Kingsbury, LMHC; Elizabeth Alach, CNS; Elayne Daniels, Ph.D.; Madeleine Flynn, LICSW; Christine Shruhan, LMHC; Louise Valiquette, LMHC; Mary Ellen Williams, LICSW, Susan Frates, RD; Lori Lieberman, RD; and Stacey Richmond, RD.

Shruhan said she has noticed an increase in the number of women and girls struggling with eating disorders and have found that the age at which girls begin showing signs and symptoms is getting younger and younger.

"I think that in some cases it is cultural," Shruhan said. "There is a push to look older and dress more provocatively. I also think that families' beliefs and practices about dieting and healthy eating have an impact on young girls. It can be difficult to accept your own body if your parents are having a difficult time accepting their own," she said.

"Fostering educational programs that start at an early age and help to provide children with necessary skills that foster positive self-esteem and self-acceptance can help them fight against the messages that say otherwise," Shruhan added.

For more information on eating disorders contact the South Shore Eating Disorder Collaborative at 508-230-1732.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHITE ON WHITE

If you are one of the growing number of dental patients who wish for an alternative to the traditional silver-colored amalgam dental filling, there is good news. Dentists and their patients have the option of filling cavities with white fillings, which are primarily composed of resin. While these white fillings were once reserved solely for front teeth and were deemed to be too weak to withstand the biting forces endured by the molars, all that has changed. Today, white fillings are stronger and more wear-resistant than ever. The fillings material can be formulated to match the various naturally occurring shades of white found on patients' teeth. The result is a very natural look.

New advances in cosmetic dentistry have everyone smiling. Let us help you increase your sense of self-esteem. Preserving teeth is an important consideration for all of us. For complete dental care, come see us at our office, located at 44 Greenleaf St. Let us help you make the most of your smile. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

White fillings may be more expensive than traditional silver-colored amalgam fillings, but many patients feel they are well worth the extra cost.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

There is a big difference between a sterling plate and a silver plated one. One is silver all the way through and is expensive; the other is silver plated on the outside only and costs less. The silver on the plated plate can wear off after use and the copper or metal underneath becomes visible. The sterling silver plate becomes more beautiful with use.

We all know 'silver and silver plated' human beings. At first glance they may look alike, but what happens when a bad crisis comes up? . . . A test of character comes up? A time of definite of definite decision comes up? In a silver plated person, the 'copper or metal' underneath soon shows through. It is not hard to recognize a plated person. . . It may take more time to recognize the sterling person because at first glance he may look the same as the plated person. You have to see this person in his successes, his failures, his hopes and dreams, his disappointments and his joys. When the 'copper' doesn't show through, you know that this person has a sterling character. . .

Yes, like silver, it costs more to be a sterling person; much more in terms of integrity, honesty, unselfishness and patience. . . But in the final analysis, there is no comparison with the cheaper product.
